HARDING'S HAT AGAIN IN RING

LUEDER BEGAN WITH HANDICAP, POLL REVEALS

G. O. P. Managers Act to Overcome It.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Arthur C. Lueder, the Republican candidate, started his campaign for mayor with the handicap of about 40,000 votes, conservatively reckoned, according to extensive calculations based upon THE TRIBUNE'S preliminary poll of the electorate.

William E. Dever, the Democratic nominee, had that advantage when the Republican managers became active three days ago. If the election had been held last Wednesday, Dever could reasonably have expected to win by that plurality on the basis of the canvass to date. But let no one get the impression that it is here predicted which man will be ahead on April 3, to say nothing of the plurality of the victor.

A 3 Per Cent Test.

THE TRIBUNE'S preliminary canvass of voters has been in progress eleven days, and in that period 3 per cent of the expected total number of voters on April 3 have expressed their choice for mayor. Three per cent of typical voters is ordinarily sufficient to measure with reasonable accuracy public sentiment on a clean cut issue. The difficulties lie in getting truly typical voters, and in the fact that no outstanding issues are in the contest up to the present.

The Democratic campaign is in full swing. Dever had no contest for the nomination. During the pre-primary days and a few days following, the Dever program was discussed and decided upon, and the Democratic workers have been attempting to carry it out for ten days or two weeks. Lueder had a contest for the nomination, and his active campaign did not start more than three days ago. The effect of the work done for him is not evident in THE TRIBUNE'S poll to date.

Dever's Advantage.

On the face of the poll Dever had an advantage of 42,300 votes, when Lueder began. That is on the basis of 730,000 ballots election day. That estimate of the total vote will not be seriously questioned by persons experienced in politics. It is a trifle more than 80 per cent of the expected revised registration.

At present there are 921,000 names in the registry books, but probably 91,000 will be erased because of deaths, removals, and other legal causes, leaving around 810,000 eligible to vote April 3. It is simple arithmetic to apply the relationship between the three mayoralty candidates in THE TRIBUNE'S poll to an estimated 730,000 who will express their opinions at the ballot box.

But there are disproportionate factors in the poll because of the practical difficulties in always getting the same percentage of votes from different representative groups. To adjust those factors with care, discretion, and as much accuracy as possible is a hard job, but it was undertaken even with data relative to some factors unavailable.

What Figures Show.

The results are that Dever three days ago had an advantage on four items of calculation and checking as follows:

	Votes.
On the face of the poll	42,300
By racial nationalities	44,500
By geographical allocations	46,700
By general occupational divisions	29,300

To these might have been added another estimate, based upon observation rather than figures obtained in the poll, Democrats appear to more readily express their opinions in a canvass than Republicans. If it were assumed that for every ten Republicans who are willing to cast a ballot in the poll there were eleven Democrats, then Dever's 30 days ago should be placed around 36,000 instead of 40,000.

But whichever figure is taken, the Lueder handicap is large and heavy. At 40,000 it is an average of 800 votes per ward.

City Normally Republican.

If it were a contest strictly between Democrats and Republicans, Lueder would have a decided advantage instead of a handicap. Many now talk about Chicago having become Republican because of the immigration of the colored people. The fact is that no Democratic candidate for President has carried the city in thirty years. In a presidential election the Republicans have been in the lead, except in 1912, when Roosevelt headed the Progressives. In that year the Democrats were second.

But the pending mayoralty contest is not a purely partisan affair. That campaign is no exception. That has

MAIL CARRIER SHOT ENTERING HOME; MAY DIE

Harry Hartley, a mail carrier, was mysteriously shot shortly after 2 o'clock this morning as he was entering the doorway of his home at 719 South Laramie avenue. The bullet entered his left eye. Physicians say he is probably fatally wounded.

Descriptions of his assailants are meager. A neighbor told the police she heard the shot and saw three men riding away in an automobile. Possible eye witnesses of the shooting are sought.

As equally veiled in mystery is the motive. Hartley's family said they knew no reason why anyone would seek his life. And yet the scraps of evidence hastily collected early today seemed to indicate that the shooting was premeditated. No attempt was made to rob Hartley.

The wounded man is 31 years old. He was taken to St. Anne's hospital.

GIRL KIDNAPED, AND ROBBED BY 2 MEN IN AUTO

Miss Lydia Congber, 400 East 66th street, was kidnaped, robbed and the victim of an attempted attack by two well dressed men in an automobile last night, according to her story to police.

Policemen Brown and Flannigan were "pulling a box" at 67th and Stony Island avenue when the young woman rushed toward them screaming. She said she had just jumped from the kidnaper's automobile.

"I was waiting on the corner of 79th and Stony Island avenue for a car after visiting with friends" she said. "Suddenly two men drove up, sprang from the machine and pulled me in before I had time to call for help. They drove around for awhile, took my purse, and attempted to attack me."

A description of the car and the men was flashed to all police stations.

One of the tug's crew is missing, the others having been rescued by a small harbor boat. Survivors did not know the name of the steamer which struck them.

NEAR ZERO WAVE RACES TO CITY

Canadian Born Cold Bears Down on Chicago.

A temperature not far above zero—with snow—was predicted for today and tomorrow by the weather bureau last night, as a numbing blizzard pushed its way down out of the Canadian northwest and over the Dakotas, its icy grip sending the thermometer in that region tumbling far below the zero mark.

For a space yesterday Chicago basked in soft breezes. A warmish sun dissipated the snow and courted buds and plants, but late in the afternoon a strong southerly wind asserted itself, later shifting around to blow out of the freezing northwest.

Remarkable for Late March.

The impending cold wave was heralded by Prof. Henry J. Cox, weather forecaster, as "remarkable for this time of year," although he said it would last only a day or two, since a second vast weather disturbance is coming this way from the southwest, bringing probable warmer temperatures about Tuesday and a heavy precipitation.

A heavy snowfall was general throughout the northwestern states. In its wake raced the frigid wave, dropping the temperature to from 10 to 20 degrees below zero in portions of North Dakota and Minnesota. Zero temperatures were recorded to the southward as far as Nebraska.

Dust Storm in Kansas.

In southwestern Kansas the disturbance took the form of a severe dust storm. The wind was blowing at a speed of 100 miles an hour at Corona, Colo., at "the top of the world" on the continent... divide.

At Pueblo a fire, fanned by the hurricane, destroyed the Missouri Pacific railway's stock yards. Pueblo buildings were unroofed, telephone poles leveled and all freight traffic was suspended, while passenger trains proceeded under slow orders.

Between Denver and Salt Lake the railways had been blockaded since Wednesday, the snow drifted to fifteen to twenty feet deep.

"KID" WINTER AT BAY.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[United Press.]—Abnormally cold weather throughout the United States will precede the theoretical arrival of spring next Wednesday, the weather bureau forecasts today.

Beginning tomorrow night, a cold wave will blanket almost the entire nation and continue until the time spring is due to arrive. Snow is predicted for many sections, with frosts probable in Florida and along the gulf coast. Spring's debut on Wednesday is expected to be the signal for warmer weather, which will continue during the latter part of the week.

EX-KAISER IS CHINA SALESMAN AT UTRECHT FAIR

[Copyright: 1923: By New York Times.]

DOORN, March 17.—Having attempted gardening and wood sawing since his exile, the ex-kaiser of Germany is now trying his hand in the sphere of industry. At the yearly Utrecht fair, just opened, William Hohenzollern has a booth devoted to the Cadiner manufactory of china and majolica at Berlin, although the booth is entered in the catalogue under a private name and none appeared to be aware that the exhibited pieces came from the Cadiner factory in Berlin, which is now supposed to be run by the German state.

No less a personage than the ex-kaiser's Dutch secretary, Peere Doorn, is acting as the salesman at the ex-kaiser's booth. The first intimation that the ex-kaiser was doing business at the fair was the arrival of his well known Mercedes car, driven by the ex-royal chauffeur, bringing several members of the ex-kaiser's court. The furniture of the booth comes from the ex-kaiser's house and the decoration is similar to the interior of the house at Doorn.

Among the pieces of china, mostly vases, are three characteristic Dutch shapes with Greek designs, said to have been designed by the ex-monarch.

OPENING GUN OF 1924 RACE FIRED BY DAUGHERTY

Formal Statement Is Issued in Dixie.

Miami, Fla., March 17.—[Special.]—President Harding will be a candidate for reelection and only unforeseen ill health will prevent him from running again, Attorney General Daugherty announced today.

Mr. Daugherty's flat statement, coming from the director of the Harding political fortunes, constitutes an informal but official announcement of Mr. Harding's decision to be a candidate. Considering Mr. Daugherty's past and present political relations with Mr. Harding, today's announcement—unless coming from the lips of the President himself—could not be more definite.

The attorney general's utterance apparently was premeditated for it was made in the course of an interview of his own seeking, and followed a conference between the two.

Tour of Whole Country.

At the same time it was learned that the President's trip to Alaska next summer will be a virtual transcontinental campaign tour.

"The President will be renominated without serious opposition," Mr. Daugherty said.

"Only one man is likely to run against him for the nomination. He won't get far. It is not necessary to lay campaign plans or name campaign managers, because the campaign is going to manage itself.

"Of course we will have to have an election, but it will all be very easy. Within the next year the benefits of the Harding administration are going to become clear to the country in spite of personal attacks of cheap, mouthy people."

Cites His Own Record.

Mr. Daugherty said the only thing that would make the President decline to run would be a failure of his health. The campaign issues, he declared, are:

Taxation.

Law enforcement.

The record of the department of justice [indicating his belief that attacks on him are to continue], and

Whether "this shall continue to be a government of law and order, or be dictated to by that sort of indigestion that comes from abroad."

Mr. Daugherty's reference to the benefits of the administration becoming clear to the nation is taken to apply to the President's campaign trip across the country to Alaska and back this summer, during which the administration's policies will be defended.

To Rally "Rebel Elements."

The details have not yet been worked out, but according to present plans the President will leave Washington in June of July, and cross the continent by the northern route. Stops will be probably made at four or five cities en route, with perhaps brief speeches at each.

In this swing Mr. Harding will invade the states where manifestations of uprisings against regular Republican control have been seen in the recent elections.

On his return the President will take the southern route to Washington. Stops will be made in the farming states of the west.

Personal contact with the people is counted on to reestablish the administration's prestige, wherever it may have dwindled. Important announcements of policy may be made on the way, concerning tax revision and the railroads.

Daugherty to Drop Reins.

"I do not intend to be a campaign manager again," Mr. Daugherty added. "The Harding campaign will take care of itself."

The attorney general's statement concerning one other candidate is believed to be directed against Senator La Follette, preconvention candidate for the Republican nomination since 1912.

Republicans have pointed out that although Senator Johnson may not have given up his ambitions, he would not have the financial support in 1924 that he had in 1920. One of Mr. Harding's first acts after receiving the Republican presidential nomination was to enlist the Johnson backers.

These included William Wrigley Jr. of Chicago, Alexander P. Moore of Pittsburgh, now minister to Spain, and A. D. Lasker, chairman of the United States shipping board and one of Mr. Harding's closest advisers and a member of the President's Florida houseboat cruise.

Miss Heilmann Found; Tells of Popp Case

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

"I am hunted; but I am innocent," declared an attractive bronze haired girl late last night as she sat in a Kenwood apartment and told THE TRIBUNE the real story of her disappearance from her home, 2403 North Kedzie boulevard, a week ago yesterday upon reading of the suicide of Fred W. Popp, president of the Logan Square Trust and Savings bank.

The woman was Claire E. Heilmann. Condemned by rumor, coincidence, and supposition as one of the banker's alleged mid-channel sweethearts, Miss Heilmann, by her statement, eliminates herself from the triangle. Today she will seek further to drop out of the case by consulting with her attorney. She will then, she said, return home and will signify her willingness to appear before the state's attorney to answer any questions he may wish to put to her.

June Confers with Lawyer.

As she was making her decision last night, June Bacon, the girl for whose sake she dropped from sight, was holding a conference with her attorney, Charles E. Erbstein. Attorney Erbstein will soon have a statement ready for the state's officials and expects to have a detailed report today from Dr. M. L. Bush as to Miss Bacon's physical condition.

Miss Heilmann is both vindictive and wistful as she repudiates as "utterly ridiculous" the theory that Mr. Popp contributed one penny to the upkeep of her mother's Kedzie boulevard apartment, or that she had supplanted June Bacon in the banker's affections.

"I went away," the girl's sincerity is apparent, "because I felt I knew too much about Mr. Popp and June Bacon. I am returning because I want the world to learn just how much I know about the whole affair.

Goes to See Miss Bacon.

"I learned about Mr. Popp's suicide," Miss Heilmann continued, "in the paper early Saturday morning. I was completely surprised. I knew so little of Mr. Popp's personal affairs that I had no idea of the confusion at the bank.

"But I did know that I was one of June's best friends, and that my information might be an embarrassment to her. So I rushed right over to her home. O, it must have been about seven in the morning."

Finding Miss Bacon in a state of prostration as a result of the news, the vistor tried to advise her.

Lying on her couch and moaning, "I don't see how I'm going through with it," the blonde occupant of the bungalow at 2814 Sunnyside avenue finally, "through advice," elected to remain in town.

Miss Heilmann then returned to her apartment, undecided how best to serve her friend, by remaining, or fleeing.

Upset by Phone Call.

"A mysterious telephone call decided me," she confided. "It was about 9:30 o'clock when the phone rang and I answered it. A man's voice inquired, 'Is Miss Claire Heilmann there?' Of course I told him who I was and he immediately hung up.

"I realized that everybody would be at me to get me to tell the things I knew and the things they wanted me to know about my friend. They would be putting two and two ogether and trying to get about seven and a half. So I let.

"But I wasn't running away. I wasn't," the girl repeated over and over, as she told of her concealment in the south side apartment of a woman friend.

"I went downtown twice, but I had

BRITISH SEEK PEACE IN RUHR; FRANCE BALKS

French Spurn Any Mediation.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, March 17.—Shrouded in the closest secrecy, Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, abruptly departed incognito from the Hotel Crillon this morning, after a week spent in Paris, under the reversed name, Norman Montagu.

Mr. Norman's valet purchased railway tickets outside, instead of through the hotel, as customary, but he asked a concierge for information regarding trains to Germany. This strengthens a belief here that he is proceeding to Berlin.

Mr. Norman conferred with Sir John Bradbury, the British member of the reparations commission, certain French bankers, and the directors of two American banks here—Morgan, Harjes & Co., and the Guaranty Trust company.

Officials Deny Conferences.

The French foreign office denies that Mr. Norman conferred with any political leaders officially.

The London newspapers have discovered Mr. Norman's absence, and they are carrying speculative articles as to his whereabouts. "The Old Lady of Threadneedle street" has denied that Mr. Norman has left England, or that he proposes to visit Germany. It is rumored that Mr. Norman is attempting to arrange a reparations offer which will ensure the evacuation of the Ruhr.

France Spurns Intervention.

"Any intervention or the attempt of any outside power to mediate in the Ruhr and reparations questions will be regarded as an unfriendly act."

This was the French foreign office's comment tonight on Washington reports that the German embassy had handed the state department a memorandum from Berlin.

The reparations commission has ceased to exist, so far as handling the Ruhr problem is concerned, according to the foreign office, which insists that Germany must address France and Belgium direct with any concrete proposals that the Berlin government cares to make.

Might Accept $7,500,000,000.

Not only the United States but Great Britain also is considered as excluded from deciding whether such proposals will be acceptable, the French taking the viewpoint that the Ruhr operations are confined to themselves and the Belgians principally, Italy only indirectly, and England not at all.

THE TRIBUNE learns that 30,000,000,000 gold marks ($7,500,000,000) is the irreducible minimum of reparations which France will even consider. This is the sum which Dr. Bergmann was prepared to offer last January when the premiers met in Paris. The break between Prime Minister Bonar Law and Premier Poincare and France's seizure of the Ruhr prevented the submitting of Germany's original offer.

No Real Reparations Reduction.

The acceptance by France of 30,000,000,000 gold marks does not mean the actual reduction of the reparations from 132,000,000,000 gold marks ($33,000,000,000), because this sum is composed of two parts—50,000,000,000 gold marks ($12,500,000,000) scheduled in A and B bonds and 82,000,000,000 gold marks ($20,500,000,000) as C bonds. The latter were never considered to have any value. The 30,000,000,000 gold marks would be regarded as a reduction of 20,000,000,000 gold marks from 50,000,000,000 gold marks, with arrangements for deliveries in material for reconstruction purposes in substitution for the 82,000,000,000 gold marks class C bonds.

The foreign office regards Berlin's activities merely as feelers, secret reports from Berlin indicating that the German government may give up in less than a month through increasing pressure from the industrial leaders.

NEGOTIATIONS BROKEN

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, March 17.—The spokesman for the People's party, to which Hugo Stinnes and other big industrialists belong, told THE TRIBUNE tonight that unofficial negotiations have been going on in the last few days in Berlin and that they have broken down because the Germans refused to discuss reparations on the basis suggested in the Paris press.

The government announced officially that it was true that Herr Bergmann was authorized in January to offer the allies $7,500,000,000 in cash, but it was wrong to believe that Germany was still willing to make this offer.

The German budget deficit today is 10,000,000,000,000 marks, with the Ruhr occupation costing 500,000,000,000 marks weekly, which will increase the deficit to 15,000,000,000,000 marks within two months.

Fear Rhine Republic Move.

President Ebert's trip to Hamm tonight has a double purpose, according to political circles. President Ebert wants to get in close personal touch with the labor leaders who form the backbone of the passive resistance in the Ruhr. He also wants to plan necessary steps should a Rhineland republic be proclaimed on Easter Monday.

While nothing definite is known regarding the French plans in this direction, Berlin declares it will lead to disturbances and a general strike and possibly riots and bloodshed throughout the Rhineland.

Asked No Action by U. S.

Washington, March 17.—State department officials have received a statement of Germany's position in regard to reparations, but they declared today that the information as delivered yesterday by Dr. Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, counsellor of the German embassy, called for no action by the Washington government looking to mediation or intervention by it in the reparations dispute between Germany and France.

SEIZE FIVE MINES

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUSSELDORF, March 17.—French troops occupied five Prussian state mines today, and in every instance the workmen immediately went on a strike.

The properties comprise twenty-three shafts near Oberhausen, Recklinghausen, Gelsenkirchen, and Herne, and produced 50,000 tons of coal daily before the occupation.

The French intend to load on cars and barges the coal stores at the various pitheads, which aggregate 300,000 tons. This will probably require many weeks, and in the interim the French will make efforts to induce the miners to go back to work.

French infantry, accompanied by two units of engineers, occupied the Concordia mine, which has six shafts. It is reported that there is considerable French capital invested in the Concordia mine.

Report Forty Frenchmen Killed.

BERLIN, March 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—A report from Friemersheim, a Rhine town near Duisburg, says that forty soldiers were killed and many injured when a French troop train collided with a freight. The impact was so violent that several coaches were telescoped.

Two Germans Shot.

DUSSELDORF, March 17.—[By the Associated Press.] — Two Germans were shot and killed by French sentinels during the night, one at Recklinghausen and the other at Essen.

MAYENCE, March 17.—[By the Associated Press.] — A young German woman shopping in an army canteen here was accidentally killed today by a bullet in the breast from the revolver of a soldier.

ACCUSES GERMAN RICH OF SCHEME TO CHEAT ALLIES

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—Industrial magnates of Germany were accused today by Gaston Liebert, French consul general in New York, of having exported enormous amounts of capital and obtained abroad credits representing billions of gold marks before the occupation of the Ruhr by France and Belgium. He said the exportation of capital was a definite scheme of the Germans to cheat the allies out of reparations and pension payments.

"These German magnates, such as Stinnes, Krupp, and Thyssen," asserted Liebert in the course of an address before members of the Chemists' club, "had made enormous fortunes out of the war and since the war. They had adopted a deliberate policy of exchanging their goods abroad for credits instead of cash, so they could say to the allies, 'We have no money with which to pay.'"

Germans on Thirst Strike as Belgians Tax Liquors

DUISBURG, March 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Germans in Duisburg and elsewhere in the Belgian occupied area have gone on a thirst strike. This is due to the adoption by the Belgians of the rule, "no tax, no wine," as a method of inducing payment of the recently imposed tax on wines, liquors and tobacco. The Germans are refusing to pay the tax and the Belgians are seizing, locking up and guarding the wine cellars.

Prince Who Divorced U. S. Woman Will Marry Again

NICE, France, March 17.—Prince Andrea Boncompagni, who has just divorced Margaret Preston Draper of Washington and Boston, is planning to marry Blanche Debildt, daughter of a former Swedish minister to Italy, who is living in Rome with her parents.

ST. LOUIS MAN DISCOVERS NEW WAY TO COOK.

Mr. B. M. Oliver of St. Louis has invented an amazing device which ends forever the days of woman's slavery to dirty, mussy coal and wood fires in sweltering hot kitchens in summer. It puts into the firebox of any kind of range or cook stove without change of any kind, and gives just as much or as little heat for cooking and baking, any time you want it, simply by turning a valve—just like using city gas. Mr. Oliver calls his invention the Oliver Oil-Gas Burner because it burns 95% air and 5% oil (kerosene). Already over 150,000 housewives have freed themselves from the dirt and drudgery of coal and wood by installing Mr. Oliver's amazing burner. Mr. Oliver wants every woman in America to enjoy the blessings of a cool kitchen this summer and to have ready heat for uncertain spring weather. If you will write to him at 2172-C Oliver Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., you will receive an attractive booklet FREE that gives full details. Mr. Oliver is now making a Special Low Price Offer, including a 20 Day Free Trial. He is also looking for live distributors and will tell how to earn $500 a month in full or spare time if you will request his sales plan.—Adv.

HUGHES ANSWERS ALLIED NOTE ON RHINE ARMY BILL

Declines to Deduct Seized Ships.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[Special.]—The state department today forwarded the American reply to the allied suggestions for repayment of the $250,000,000 spent by the United States in maintaining troops on the Rhine.

Although the note is understood not to be flat rejection of the allied proposals, it is said to decline the suggestion that the value of the seized German ships be deducted from the troop bill.

The American note was cabled to Eliot Wadsworth, assistant secretary of the treasury, now in Paris, for presentation to the allied commission there at its next meeting.

The note bore the approval of President Harding. The President, now on a vacation in Florida, telegraphed to the state department approving the note as drafted by Secretary of State Hughes.

The text of the communication was not made public, but it was indicated that it answered in a friendly way some of the proposals put forward by the allied governments, but made it plain that the United States is not favorably disposed toward the suggestion that the United States deduct from its claim an amount equal to the value of the German ships seized during the war. It is pointed out that the allied governments did not make a similar deduction in their army costs, but applied German ships to their reparations accounts, in which the United States has no share.

DENIES ISLE TALK

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[By the Associated Press.] — Statements published in Paris and accredited to Secretary Hughes to the effect that the United States desired to obtain the Antilles from France in payment of the French war debt were received with amusement today by Mr. Hughes, who said he never had made any such suggestion.

It was recalled that a White House spokesman recently announced that the government did not desire any territorial properties and had no intention of acquiring by purchase or otherwise any foreign island possessions adjacent to North or South America.

Editors of America Give Approval to Ruhr Move

Spokane, Wash., March 17.—Of 332 editors of Associated Press newspapers throughout the United States who have responded to a mail questionnaire sent out by the Spokesman-Review, 239 have voted "yes" as to the approval of the French invasion of the Ruhr valley, the newspaper will say tomorrow in its final summary of replies received. Sixty-five voted "emphatically no," twenty-four were conditionally favorable, and four were undecided, the newspaper will say.

Gasoline Tax Bill Passed by House in Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 17.—The lower house of the state legislature today passed the bill authorizing a 2 cent tax on gasoline to be used for construction and maintenance of highways. The measure now goes to the senate.

Germany's Floating Debt 4,345,000,000,000 Marks

BERLIN, March 17.—Germany's floating debt increased during the first ten days of March by 757,000,000,000 marks, it was announced today, reaching a total of 4,345,000,000,000 marks.

"SENSATIONAL NOTE OF BRITISH TO PARIS" WAS ONLY A DREAM

LONDON, March 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Surprise was expressed today when it was learned that a letter purporting to have been written but not delivered by the British minister of foreign affairs to the French ambassador at London, protesting against the Ruhr occupation, had been published in America as an actual state document. The so called letter appeared in the Nation, a weekly London publication, and embodied its views of what Great Britain should say to France, in the form of a fictitious letter from the government to the French nation. It was not intended to be taken as a bona fide letter, and in fact no one here so regarded it.

FRANCE STIFLES NEW WAR SPARKS, TRAVELER SAYS

Invasion of the Ruhr by France bids fair to "hasten the end of the war started by Germany nearly nine years ago," and it may strip the Germans of the sole war making weapon they retained—their chemical industry.

So R. M. Bryan, eastern manager of the Black Diamond, a coal trade publication, said yesterday in an address before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations at the Palmer house, following a noon luncheon.

Mr. Bryan, recently returned from Europe, was in Paris when the final conference which determined France's entry into the Ruhr valley was held and has since made visits to the Ruhr, he said.

Mr. Bryan asserted the world had bought more than $3,000,000,000 of "worthless marks" from the Germans, believing the latter had accepted defeat in good faith. But despite this good will, he said, Germany has depreciated the mark to its present value, giving industrialists enormous profits, while reducing Germany's population as a whole to poverty such as may be found only in Russia.

Purchaser of "Moon" Is Released; Seller Held

John Johnson, 75 years old, 815 Milton avenue, arraigned yesterday before Judge H. Walker on a charge of drunkenness, stated he had bought the liquor from Harry Hedrich, 348 West Chicago avenue. Judge Walker issued a warrant and a search of Hedrich's premises revealed several gallons of "moonshine" and wine. Johnson was dismissed. Hedrich demanded a jury trial.

GERMAN PEOPLE WILLING TO PAY, VIEW OF LYTTON

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

NICE, March 17.—Henry Lytton and his wife of Chicago will leave the Riviera shortly for an automobile trip to Italy. They have been traveling extensively since arriving in England last December, visiting in France and Algiers.

"Judging from conversations with Americans and Englishmen, the consensus of opinion seems that France is justified in the Ruhr occupation," said Mr. Lytton. "Germany has made and broken so many promises that I sympathize with France because she suffered most in the war.

"I am convinced that as soon as Germany gives guarantees that it intends to pay France will withdraw its troops. The German people generally want to pay and settle the reparations problem, but are prevented by demagogues. A $100,000,000 loan to Germany will put her on her feet and she will recover rapidly, because her people are so industrious."

MANICURE GIRL'S DEATH BRINGS MYSTERY NO. 4

Cause Puzzles Physicians —Make Poison Test.

Circumstances so strange surrounded the death yesterday of Mrs. Myrtle Desmond, 27 year old divorcée and former manicure at the Morrison hotel, that Dr. Robert H. Saunders, the attending physician, called in Coroner Oscar Wolff to investigate.

Hers is the fourth mysterious death of a woman in the last few days into which the police and the coroner's office were making inquiry.

A sudden trip to Milwaukee last Monday, from which Mrs. Desmond returned ill; a man named "Douglas," sweetheart in Detroit, a divorced husband, fits of despondency, and the sudden fatal seizure last Wednesday a entered into the story which Miss Hermina Sternad, the dead woman's room mate in an apartment at 830 Edgecomb place, had to tell the investigators.

Tests for Poison.

Dr. William H. Burmeister, coroner's physician, began an autopsy at the Swedish Covenant hospital, where the woman died, and will direct that a chemical analysis for possible poison be made by the coroner's chemist. The father, Stephen Jones, 3122 5th avenue, and eight brothers and sisters declared they suspected foul play and insisted that Mrs. Desmond's death be investigated.

The attack came suddenly last Wednesday, Miss Sternad said, and was accompanied with great pain. Dr. Saunders was not called until the next morning, when Mrs. Desmond had lost consciousness.

Probe Other Deaths.

The police and the coroner's office joined forces earlier in the day to clear up three other deaths, all of women, in which poison is suspected of being the cause. At the same time a coroner's jury disposed of the death of another woman by poison, declaring it to be suicide.

Dr. Oscar W. Strook, a dentist at 6700 Stony Island avenue, alleged to be the "other man" was the chief witness at the inquest into the death of Mrs. Anna Corcoran, wife of Thomas E. Corcoran, an undertaker at 1546 East 67th street. Mrs. Corcoran had instituted divorce proceedings against her husband, charging cruelty, after he had accused Dr. Strook of "wrecking their home."

She came to her husband's apartment last Friday to tell him she was sorry and would never testify against him. Then she stepped in the bathroom and took poison.

Acts on Phone Tips.

Several telephone calls caused the coroner to believe that something more than a heart attack caused the woman's death. She was found in her room dying in great pain with her clothes almost torn off.

In the meantime Coroner Wolff and Chief of Detectives Hughes are conducting a city-wide investigation of the contents of a proprietary laxative which is believed to have caused the death of two sisters, Anna and Mary Cummings, 2238 Wilson avenue. The two died six weeks apart, with identical symptoms, after taking a dose of the medicine. Sodium fluorine and perhaps another poison are said to have been present in the bottle. The funeral of Anna was ordered postponed by the coroner, and the body of Mary was ordered exhumed.

When riots broke out anew in the Maxwell street market yesterday the police arrested members of the family of Louis Krakow, deposed market master, as the inciters of the trouble. Photo taken after the arrests shows Eva Krakow, Jannie Goldwater, Dora Krakow, Barney Cohen, and Policeman John O'Keefe.

MARKET RIOTERS RENEW TURMOIL IN MAXWELL ST.

Women Start Row at Fish Stalls.

Riots broke out again in the Maxwell street market yesterday shortly after the return of the five women arrested during Friday's disturbances. They had been discharged by Judge John Richardson earlier in the day, but were rearrested by the Maxwell street police and booked on charges of responsibility for the second outbreak.

When the women and two men, six of the seven relatives of Louis Krakow, deposed market master, were arraigned before Judge Richardson yesterday, it was stated that the trouble began on Friday, when Harry Lapping, newly appointed market master, ordered a readjustment of the stands.

In the meantime Louis Krakow, who had been dismissed on orders by the city hall organization, was appointed a special investigator on the staff of the state's attorney.

Says Stand Is Too Long.

Lapping asserted that Krakow's stand was about 19 feet long, whereas the ordinance requires only a 9 foot stand.

The two men, Samuel and Fishel Krakow, brothers, alleged to have been responsible for the riots, were fined $2 and $3 costs each, after fifteen witnesses had testified on the Friday trouble. The women, Mrs. Rachel Krakow, Mrs. Lena Levi, Mrs. Fannie Goldwater, Mrs. Eva Krakow, and Mrs. Dora Krakow, also charged with disorderly conduct, were dismissed.

Women Set Up Fish Stands.

Shortly afterward, it is alleged, the women reappeared in the market and began selling fish in front of the Krakow stand, now conducted by J. H. Janoski, 1335 South Union avenue. Janoski protested and told them to go away. The women refused.

Disturbance quickly followed and in the rioting stands were upset, foodstuffs and other goods strewn all over the street, and a number of free fights developed.

A riot call to the Maxwell street station brought a squad of policemen and after a short struggle the five women were rearrested.

After being held in the Maxwell street police station for nearly three hours the women were released by Capt. Patrick Kelliher on their promise not to repeat the offense.

SILVER STAR CITATION AWARDED OAK PARK MEDICAL CORPS HERO

WILLIAM E. KENDALL.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[Special.]—William E. Kendall, 228 South Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, Ill., was awarded the Silver Star citation today by the war department for "gallantry in action." The citation follows:

"William E. Kendall, major in the medical officers' reserve corps, then captain in the medical corps, attached to the 132d infantry, 33d division, for gallantry in action at Bois de Forges Sept. 26, 1918, when he accompanied the attacking wave of the 1st battalion, 132d infantry, to its final objective, and under heavy shell and machine gun fire established a field dressing station and directed the evacuation of the wounded. His splendid devotion to duty and utter disregard for his own safety saved the lives of many of the men of the regiment with which he served."

GERMANY DENIES FRENCH RIGHT TO BAR NEW LOAN

BERLIN, March 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Referring to reports from Paris that the French section of the reparations commission had protested against the issue by Germany of treasury bills fixed on the basis of the American dollar, the minister of finance today characterized the alleged protest as an attempt to frustrate the government in its efforts to stabilize the mark. The ministry's statement denies the right of the reparations commission to prevent Germany from issuing loans, particularly the present $50,000,000 loan, the proceeds of which will be handed to the reichbank for the sole purpose of forming a fund to strengthen the mark.

EVAN FONTAINE, SON AND MOTHER SENT TO A CELL

Charge Is Perjury; Judge Refuses Their Bail.

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—Evan Burrowes Fontaine, the dancer, her 3 year old son, "Sonny," and her mother, Mrs. Florence E. Ames, were locked in the Rockland county jail here, shortly before noon today, although they were able to furnish bonds for their liberty pending trial on the perjury indictments.

Bail of $5,000 each in the form of an individual surety bond was offered by attorneys for Miss Fontaine and her mother, but because the bondsman was a resident of Westchester county and not of this county, Rockland, and the court not knowing the bondsman or the property offered, he refused to accept it and held the matter over until next Monday. It is expected they will furnish bail next week and be released from jail.

Arrested Last Night.

The dancer was arrested last night in her apartment here. Her mother was apprehended later, and with "Sonny," the youngster, they were all kept at a hotel overnight by Sheriff Brown. At 7 o'clock this morning they were taken out of the city in an automobile by the sheriff before her lawyers learned of their departure.

The trip in an automobile for "Sonny" was a dandy. The weather was pleasant, and even the dancer and her mother seemed not to have a worry or care.

"Sonny" scrambled from the automobile as it drove to the park entrance or grounds of the jail. A shaggy dog caught his attention, and as the sheriff helped Miss Fontaine and her mother out "Sonny" scampered off with the dog.

Enters Jail with Mother.

"Come on, 'Sonny,'" Miss Fontaine called to him, and they entered the jail.

Miss Fontaine and her mother are held on charges of perjury growing out of their testimony in the $1,000,000 suit brought by the younger woman against Cornelius Vanderbilt "Sonny" Whitney for alleged breach of promise.

Miss Fontaine, in her suit, which she lost, claimed Whitney was the father of "Sonny." It was as the result of evidence given by Miss Fontaine in this suit that the indictment for perjury was returned, based upon testimony which she and her mother gave in an annullment proceeding against her former husband, Sterling Adair.

BUILDING TRADES PEACE ASSURED BY 3 YEAR PACT

Negotiations which practically insure permanent peace in the Chicago building industry, beginning June 1, 1923, ended yesterday when the joint conference board composed of representatives of the Chicago Building Trades council signed a three year uniform agreement with the Building Construction Employers' association.

EDWARD RYAN.

In the new agreement, the question of wages and working conditions is left to the arbitration boards of each individual building trade and employer for settlement. While the bricklayers' union is the only trade which has signed a new $1.25 an hour wage agreement, it was said that practically all the trades will receive the same hourly rate given the bricklayers. Prior to the Landis award the uniform wage rate for building trades was $1.25 an hour.

Declared It Closed Shop.

"There has been considerable discussion on the present Landis uniform agreement as to whether it is an open or closed shop one," said Edward Ryan, president of the Building Trades council, after the meeting yesterday. "But any one who has common sense and fair reasoning power can readily see that it provides for an absolute closed shop agreement for all trades which abide by their agreements.

"The building trades council, through its officers, is now exerting every effort to effect an adjustment between the building trades in difficulty with their employers. This action is being taken so these trades can assume their obligations and derive the benefits contained in the uniform agreement."

Confer Several Hours.

The meeting yesterday between the joint conference board of the building trades council and officials of the Building Construction Employers' association lasted several hours. Edward Ryan and James J. Conroy, president and secretary of the council, headed the union delegation. Edward M. Craig, secretary of the employers' association, spoke for his organization.

Close observers of the local building situation said it was one of the most important conferences held this year.

COURT'S AGENTS IN VICE CHECKUP SEIZED BY COPS

Trude Scores Captain; Charges Revenge.

Four officers of the Illinois state constabulary, who claimed they were investigating vice conditions at the instance of Judge Daniel P. Trude of the Morals court, were arrested by the police when they attempted to enter an alleged disorderly house "tabooed" by Chief of Police Fitzmorris in his drive on vice, it became known yesterday.

The men were arraigned before Judge Trude yesterday morning. They testified that they had been subjected to various indignities while held in the South Wabash avenue station following their arrest. They also accused Capt. John L. Hogan, in charge of the station, of having "gone out of his way" to cause them embarrassment.

Seized at South Side Cafe.

Two of the men were Capt. Norman V. Greenly and Lieut. W. J. High. The other two gave fictitious names and their identities were not disclosed. They were seized by a "vice cop" as they were entering the Arabian cafe, 4116 South State street.

Judge Trude listened to the testimony for several minutes and then interrupted the hearing by the statement he intended calling in the police officers mentioned by the men and inquiring into the cause of the alleged mistreatment. Subpoenas were then issued for Capt. Hogan, Lieut. Murphy, and a lockupkeeper of the detective bureau and two patrolmen of the South Wabash avenue station. The hearing was continued to March 20.

Judge Sees Revenge as Motive.

"Capt. Hogan's district is the rottenest in the city," Judge Trude said later. "I went before the grand jury and told them that and now the distinguished police officer is trying to get even by embarrassing investigators sent out to see that the chief's 'lid' is kept clamped on."

Later in the day it was announced that fifteen five day notices similar to those sent out a week ago by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe whereby the owners of alleged disorderly houses were ordered to "clean up" and get rid of vice, were being prepared by Assistant State's Attorney Frank Peska.

Charge Other Incidents.

During the last week it was also learned that Violet Phipps, owner of a three story building at 3423 South Michigan avenue, had been served with an abatement notice.

Mrs. Phipps made a number of uncomplimentary remarks to the officer who served the notice, it was reported, and also made a trip to the state's attorney's office, where she is said to have abused two assistant state's attorneys in charge of the investigation.

BOY KILLED BY NAIL WOUND.

Blood poisoning is believed to have caused the death yesterday of Eugene Shugrue, 10 years old, 3930 Costello avenue, who stepped on a nail while playing in the street.

ALGIERS, March 17.—American Consul Dow yesterday presented THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S trans-Saharan expedition with an American flag. If the expedition succeeds in its purpose, this flag will have been the first emblem of the United States to have crossed the Sahara.

Floyd Gibbons, European director of THE TRIBUNE foreign news service and chief of the expedition, accepted the standard on behalf of THE TRIBUNE. The ceremony was held at the consulate, where a number of American residents of Algiers had gathered to wish the expedition godspeed.

French government experts aided THE TRIBUNE representatives here in the extensive preparations for the departure. Bouchoucha Mahmoud, a veteran Arabian guide and interpreter of desert dialects, has been placed in charge of the native personnel of the expedition.

Floyd Gibbons and Mahmoud are due to arrive tonight at Colomb Bechar, where special Mehara camels have been obtained. The expedition expects to leave on its 2,000 mile march across the desert the end of next week.

GERMANS LASSO "AIR FERTILIZER" AND HOGTIE H.C.L.

Amazing Process Is Told by U. S. Engineer.

BY J. W. T. MASON.

[Written for the United Press.]

New York, March 17.—Cost of living throughout the world will be lowered in the near future by a new German method of obtaining nitrates for fertilizer from the air, William Dubilier, American electrical engineer, who recently returned from inspecting Germany's electrical progress, declared today.

"The Germans are getting these nitrates at a cost of $4 instead of $100," Mr. Dubilier said. "When the system is perfected the cost will be 20 cents.

"American farmers are using $2,000,000,000 of fertilizers a year. The same amount in the form of nitrates from the air will cost only $4,000,000 when the Germans have brought their method to highest efficiency.

Can Build Plants in U. S.

"The Germans are building enormous electric plants to generate high frequency currents. The largest high frequency plant in America provides for 1,000 horsepower. The Germans are building plants to produce 70,000. These plants for extracting nitrates from the air can be put up anywhere. Omaha, for instance, can have a high frequency plant to seize the air nitrates for the farmers of Nebraska.

"The Germans are not stopping with nitrate experiements. They are using high frequency currents to take the place of heat for securing many kinds of chemical reactions. They are beginning to crack gasoline cold, which means that eventually gasoline may be sold at 5 cents a gallon.

"Heretofore, chemical reactions had to be gained through heat. In the heating process, a great deal of energy is wasted. The electrical way gets gasoline from crude oil without waste.

"It is absurd for people to become frightened at reports that coal and oil resources are becoming exhausted. The coal and oil companies are putting out such reports for their own profit.

What a Lump of Coal Can Do.

"There is enough energy in a pound of coal to run the whole of the United States for a year. All we have to do is to solve the problem of releasing the energy in ways that can be controlled. The Germans are now working on this problem, which means breaking up the atoms of matter, or rather the little 'solar systems' of the electrons that make up the atom.

"Once that problem is solved, and it may be solved at any time, we shall even be able to transmit the elements, and make gold at will. Then, the present market value of gold will vanish, and there will have to be enormously widespread financial readjustments to the new conditions.

"These are some of the problems German electro chemical engineers are working on, in addition to employing high frequency electricity for train controls systems, for electric lighting and for smelter furnaces."

Italy to Abolish Hotel Taxes in Bid for Tourists

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

The first step in this direction will be taken in a few days when hotel taxes will be reduced 33 per cent. At present tourists pay from 12 to 20 per cent taxes and tourists never know what their bills will be.

MODEL SLAIN IN LOVE NOTE PLOT, POLICE BELIEVE

Drugged by Ex-Suitor Seeking Letters.

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—While the authorities today professed to have made little progress in their hunt for the slayer of Dorothy "King" Keenan, the model's model who was chloroformed in her apartment Thursday morning, it became known that detectives were working on a clew that robbery was not the motive and that a former suitor, and possibly a confederate, unintentionaly killed her while seeking love letters.

The clew was alleged to have been received by the police from a mysterious source and it was reported that two detectives had been sent to Atlantic City in an effort to obtain information which might lead to the identity of a wealthy man who was said to have written more than twenty letters to the woman which he recently sought to get back from her, when threats were made that his wife would be informed of his affair with the model.

Blackmail Plot Hinted.

It was further reported that this man broke off relations with the woman several months ago and that recently he had received threats that he had better pay for the letters or he would be exposed. Whether the model knew of these threats, the detectives could not learn.

Inspector John D. Coughlin, head of the detective division, sent two detectives to Atlantic City, where they made inquiries about Miss Keenan's stay there from March 1 to March 7. She had registered under the name Miss Dorothy King.

It was said that the two detectives examined the hotel register and asked the clerks if during the time the woman was a guest there Albert E. Guimares, who had admitted to the police that he was an intimate friend of the woman, was seen about the hotel during her stay. It was reported, however, that the detectives did not go into this line of questioning very deeply and seemed more intent on establishing the presence of an elderly man at the hotel at the time Miss Keenan was a guest.

Phoned to Guimares.

The detectives learned, it was said, that Guimares did not call on the model, but were informed that Miss Keenan had had several conversations over the telephone with Guimares at an address in this city.

The clerks are alleged to have told them that she used endearing terms, such as "sweetheart" and "dearest," in her conversations with Guimares, but that a hotel employé reported an apparent tiff with Guimares one day when she intimated that she expected another man to call on her.

From the little that could be gathered in connection with this clew it appeared that the police were informed that the theft of the $9,500 worth of gems believed to have been in the woman's apartment when she was slain was an improvised subterfuge on the part of the slayer and his possible accomplice to have it appear that robbery was the sole motive.

Mystery Suitor Appears.

The mysterious "John Marshall" and his alleged secretary, "Wilson," came forward today and for two hours told Acting District Attorney Pecora all that he knew about the dead woman's past.

"Marshall" was described as a man of about 60 and "Wilson" was declared to be much younger. It was said that "Marshall" made arrangements the day before through his lawyer to call on the acting district attorney and it was stipulated that, unless Mr. Pecora felt that he actually knew something about the slaying, the identity of himself and "Wilson" was to be kept secret.

Mr. Pecora said they had submitted to a most painstaking examination and he was convinced that they knew nothing about the killing or the motive behind it.

Guimares, who had been held on a technical charge, was released today on $10,000 bond.

STEALS $100,000; ADMITS IT; GETS 5 YEARS IN 16 HOURS

Cedar Rapids, Ia., March 17.—[Special.]—Within sixteen hours after he had been arrested, Emil H. Reimers, secretary of the Keve Lumber company of this city, confessed embezzler of $100,000 of the company's funds to cover personal losses in playing the stock market, was sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary at Fort Madison on a charge of larceny by embezzlement, to which he pleaded guilty without trial when brought before Judge F. L. Anderson.

Reimer's confession that he had taken $100,000 in the last three years was branded as "ridiculous" by company auditors who were going over the books this afternoon. The losses so far discovered total little more than $10,000, they say.

MEXICAN WOMEN DRIVE OUT RED CITY COUNCIL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, March 17.—Michuatlan, the scene of Porfiro Diaz' famous battle, still is warlike. Yesterday, when the new town council assembled to take the oath of office, the women of the town, armed with sticks and stones, entered the town hall and drove the councilmen out of town. The women say they have had enough of red socialism and political leaders living off their husbands, causing continual unrest and dividing the once peaceful town against itself.

WOMAN DIES IN BATH TUB.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., March 17.—Hhe body of Mrs. James Rice, 30, wife of a well known Tuscaloosa lawyer, was found today in a bathroom of the Rice home. It was said by physicians that she had been asphyxiated from gas fumes.

PUPILS PUT SHOE ON OTHER FOOT; QUIZ PROFESSORS

Find Jolson Is Wrestler; Bergdoll War Hero.

New Orleans, La., March 17.—Al Jolson is a wrestling champion, Francis Scott Key a woman who wrote poems, and the trade name of a widely known food preparation the name of the wife of a character in the Bible. So declared members of the faculty of Newcomb college, a young women's educational institution here, in their replies in an "intelligence test" submitted to them by the senior class.

The students recently had undergone several examinations to determine their knowledge of every day subjects and they challenged the faculty to stand a similar test.

Twenty-three of the forty-five instructors were "game" and the result of the written examination held yesterday and made public today was little less than startling.

Sequins Are Fish.

Sequins were described as a variety of fish; brilliantine was declared to be a preparation "that young ladies put in their eyes to make them shine." The trade name of a cosmetic was declared to be the name of a cabaret dancer, while another professor said it was a character referred to in the Bible.

"Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Sheen" are in the transfer business in New Orleans, while another instructor dubbed them a version of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Grover Cleveland Bergdoll was given two identities. One professor said he was a world-war hero; another that he was a "Democratic statesman."

Cherries and Steaks.

Maraschino, the cherry, "was a premier of Russia before the war"; "Filet Mignon" was declared to be an opera by Puccini.

"Picking cherries," the name given a certain dance by the young set, was defined as "gathering fruit" by all but one of the instructors. She said it was "a slang term for petting."

SEEKS WIFE, MENTALLY UNBALANCED.

Bernard Okulics, 1444 Blackhawk street, has asked the help of The Tribune to find his mentally deranged wife, Mary Okulics, who disappeared last June.

MRS. RUSSELL TO APPEAL CASE TO HOUSE OF LORDS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, March 17.—[Tribune Radio.]—Although the Russell divorce case has been tried twice, and the Hon. John Russell, heir to Lord Ampthill, has secured a divorce on the verdict of the jury, this famous case is a long way from finished.

Mrs. Russell now announces her intention of appealing against the divorce, carrying the case to the house of lords, and there is no doubt also that there will be further legal proceedings to determine the legitimacy or otherwise of Baby Geoffray.

Two forms of legal process are available for the Ampthill family to prevent his succession to the title. One is under the legitimacy act, asking a declaration that he is illegitimate. The other is to appeal to the house of lords by the younger brother of John Russell for a declaration that he is the rightful heir presumptive.

SEEK WRIT FOR O'DONNELL; CALL PENALTY FAULTY

Habeas corpus proceedings to effect the release of Edward (Spike) O'Donnell, convicted recipient of stolen property confined in Joliet on an indeterminate sentence, will be heard before Judge Joseph B. David on March 21. A petition based on the alleged invalidity of the sentence because of more than a year's delay in its execution was filed yesterday by Attorney R. R. Jampolis on behalf of O'Donnell's wife, Mrs. Elizabeth O'Donnell.

Rumors that the local state's attorney's office would not vigorously contest the move were denied by Assistant State's Attorney Q. J. Schott and R. E. Westbrooks in a preliminary hearing before Judge David yesterday. Considerable influence had been brought to bear upon him, both for and against O'Donnell's release, Judge David declared.

2 KILLED, 4 HURT AS WOLFF PLANS ANTI-SPEED LAW

Children Struck by Autos Expected to Die.

Two men died yesterday, a girl and boy were probably fatally injured, and two Brighton Park policemen were badly burned as the result of auto mishaps.

Joseph Meyer, 75 years old, 5301 South Aberdeen street, succumbed to injuries he received on March 14 when struck by a motor truck.

Phillip Gimble, 6814 South Marshfield avenue, is held by police following the death of Joseph Meyer, 35 years old, at the county hospital. Meyer, who lives at 5301 South Aberdeen street, lay for two days unidentified and unconscious at the hospital after being run down by Gimble's automobile at 43 South Ashland boulevard.

The little girl was Bernice Bork. She was giving a birthday party for a number of young friends. Shortly before the affair began the 6 year old girl started to a store near her home at 2951 Oakley avenue to buy favors. She was run over by a machine driven by Gustave Weiland, 471 North Hamlin avenue. He was arrested when physicians found her skull was fractured and she had received internal injuries.

Two Policemen Burned.

An earlier accident confined the policemen to their homes. John Cunningham, 1536 West 65th place, and Louis Kutush, 5240 South Rockwell street, were driving along Garfield boulevard. Kutush applied his brakes too suddenly. The car skidded, turned over, and burst into flames. Both received serious burns before they could crawl from beneath the wreckage.

The other victim of an auto accident was Albert Wierzdicki, 8 years old, living at 2453 High street. He was struck and probably fatally injured by a taxicab.

CORONER'S PLAN

One hundred of the 128 lives sacrificed in automobile accidents in Cook county this year might have been saved had pedestrians been protected by drastic vehicle regulations such as are in vogue in other states, declared Coroner Oscar Wolff yesterday.

Even as reports were received of the death of two more victims of auto drivers, Coroner Wolff announced preparation of legislation modeled after the Massachusetts statutes, which will be presented to the legislature at this session, and which has been assured the support of Speaker David E. Shanahan.

"Common sense and the experience of other and larger cities than Chicago teaches us that the pedestrian is not the guilty person in more than 90 per cent of these automobile accidents," Coroner Wolff said. "Chicago's citizens are no more careless or reckless of their lives than those of other communities, yet automobiles kill more pedestrians here in a year than are killed in Washington, New York or Boston, comparatively.

"Let us have rigid examination for drivers and drivers, not only as to mechanical ability, but as to mentality. Let us include a provision as they do in Massachusetts, where the law makes it mandatory upon the registrar of motor vehicles to revoke the license of any chauffeur or owner convicted of any motor law infraction."

WOMAN PEDDLES BOOZE

Evidence given at the coroner's inquiry and accusations made by Charles Peterson, 1639 West Division street, caused the arrest yesterday of Mrs. Catherine Pruss, of the same address, on charges of involuntary manslaughter and violation of the state liquor law in connection with the death of Mrs. Jennie Peterson on Friday.

Mrs. Peterson, 43 years old, died after drinking moonshine whisky sold to her, it is alleged, by Mrs. Pruss. Peterson's charge that his wife had purchased whisky in large quantities from Mrs. Pruss for several months caused police to raid the Pruss flat, where they found a still in operation. Peterson also was arrested on a charge of transporting liquor.

Frank W. Lundberg, a cabinetmaker, who, according to his sister, has been a heavy drinker of moonshine liquor, was found dead in the hallway of his home at 11309 Edgebrook avenue last night.

The aged churchman has been unconscious since yesterday morning.

BOY SCOUTS TO BE GROWN-UPS FOR A DAY

WALTER STEVENS NOT THE SLAYER OF FLORIDA CAFE

Miami, Fla., March 17.—Both city and county authorities were satisfied today after receipt of photographs that Walter Stephens, alias Stevens, wanted in Aurora, Ill., for the shooting of Policeman Lester Wedemaier, on Oct. 29, 1918, is not the Leroy J. Gardner, who surrendered to the county authorities yesterday for the slaying of Fred L. Wagner at the Tropical inn Thursday night.

The photograph and description of Stephens are those of a man 55 years of age, while Gardner is not over 26 years of age and clearly not the same man.

Stevens, however, is believed to have been employed this season at the Tropical inn as a doorman, but he recently disappeared. This man was not known as Stevens but as Steve Gardner. He fits the description of Stevens.

FOUND DEAD ON TRACKS.

Apparently struck by a train, the body of Anthony Wilke, 40 years old, an employe of the Illinois Central railroad, was found lying on the tracks near 114th street yesterday.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS LIGHT BIRTHDAY FIRES IN 18 LANDS

Grand council fires were lit simultaneously yesterday by Camp Fire Girls of eighteen countries. The occasion was Camp Fire birthday, in which more than 150,000 girls took part in the United States alone.

Each year the girls recognize their birthday by doing something for girls less fortunate than themselves. Last year they raised $1,500, which they turned over to Anna Pavlowa to aid Russian girls she was befriending. This year the fund will be used to provide summer camping trips for blind and crippled girls.

Tire Firm Boosts Prices 10% Following 10% Bonus

A special Lenten campaign among the women's organizations in Illinois to meet the emergency confronting the Near East relief was announced yesterday by Mrs. Martin Kent Northam of Evanston, chairman of the woman's department. The campaign opens today and will close on Easter Sunday.

ROB COLLECTOR OF $2,000; SEIZE $1,000 PAY ROLL

Bandits Conduct Many Other Robberies.

A woman was beaten and robbed, a chain grocery store collector was held up for $2,000, a $1,000 pay roll robbery was perpetrated, two clothing stores were burglarized, and numerous smaller roberries were reported to police yesterday.

Solomon Morrison, 4952 South Michigan avenue, a collector for the Royal Blue Stores, a chain of grocery stores, while on his way to board a street car was held up in front of 510 North State street by two young men armed with revolvers and forced to hand over a small valise in which he carried $2,000.

Knocks Woman Unconscious.

Miss Grace Valentine, employed in a bakery shop at 1207 North Wells street, while wrapping a loaf of bread for a customer, an elderly man, was struck on the head with a piece of lead pipe. The customer then emptied the cash register of $45.

Threatening to kill him if he made an outcry, two armed men forced Robert Stoddard, president of the Milk Bottle Crate company, 1543 Kingsbury avenue, to give up the company's pay roll, $1,000, in broad daylight. They escaped in a car driven by a third man.

Robbed by Auto Bandits.

Julian Kaufman, 5520 Ingleside avenue, and R. S. Wanger, living at the Hotel Sherman, told the police that their automobile had been stopped by two men in a car, at 64th street and University avenue. Kaufman was robbed of $150 and Wanger $170 and a diamond ring worth $1,000.

Regwar Brothers, clothiers at 162 West Monroe street, told the police that when they opened their store yesterday morning, more than $5,000 in clothing was missing.

The rear door of Wolf, Bane & Co., a clothing store at 4205 North Kedzie avenue, which was to have its formal opening yesterday, was found open by clerks. The entire stock, said to be worth $6,000, had disappeared.

Woman Robbed on Train.

Pauline N. Jacobs, who said that her home was in London, told police that on March 15 she was robbed of a diamond lavalliere worth $2,500, on the Overland limited.

Most of the seventy-one prisoners arraigned in night court last night, were arrested in Lieut. William Shoemaker's crusade against moonshine. Judge Peter H. Schwaba asked each prisoner what his salary was and fined them accordingly.

WOMAN SLAYER FOUND INSANE.

La Crosse, Wis., March 17.—Adjudged insane by a commission of physicians, Miss Clara Lipke, who shot and killed her sister, Mrs. Robert Combellick, and fatally wounded Mr. Combellick, was today committed to the state insane asylum at Mendota.

ITALY'S Ppremier TO ATTEND MEET OF WORLD C. OF C.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, March 17.—[Tribune Radio.]—The International Chamber of Commerce opens its congress tomorrow and it is expected that Premier Mussolini will attend the first session. Sixty American delegates and their families already are in Rome for the meeting.

Ambassador Child had a preliminary conference today with the American leaders, including J. Barnes, W. H. Booth, and G. M. Reynolds. Next Friday the ambassador and Mrs. Child will give a reception to the American delegates.

"Meetings such as these are significant," Ambassador Child said today, "and particularly this one, because it will be an actual preparation for economic cooperation between countries based on constructive works and commercial activity, which will bring to the world peace and prosperity. Such realities dealing with definite programs are of much more value than vague phrases, impractical sentiments, or the hope of creating realities by writing them down in vague treaties and political agreements."

Lay Plans for 1923 "Clean Up, Paint Up" Campaign

Plans were made yesterday, at the massmeeting of the high school clubs that will handle the "Clean-up, Paint-up" campaign fostered by the Chicago Association of Commerce, to make the 1923 effort the most effective to date. The campaign will begin on April 23 and last until May 5. More than 103,582 definite accomplishments were recorded last spring.

Chicago Junior School to Move Closer to City

St. Joseph, Mich., is to lose its Chicago Junior school. The institution will be moved, probably next fall, to a site on the Fox river, one and a half miles from Elgin, Ill. Although the present site is ideal, according to the school's sponsors, the decision to move has been taken to bring the school nearer Chicago, whence most of its financial support is derived.

MUNDELEIN TELLS HOW FOES IN ERIN KNELT TOGETHER

Recounts Peace Prayer of Opposing Leaders.

ARCHBISHOP MUNDELEIN.

How Gen. Richard Mulcahy, minister of defense and leader of the Free State forces in Ireland, and Eamon De Valera, rebel chieftain, met recently in a retreat in Dublin and knelt side by side in prayer for a settlement of the troubles in Erin was revealed for the first time publicly last night by Archbishop Geo. W. Mundelein.

Speaking at the annual St. Patrick's day banquet of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Ladies' auxiliary of Cook county, the archbishop told of a visit paid to him recently by the only eyewitness to the meeting between the enemy Irish leaders. He did not name his informant, but repeated the scene as described by him.

"He told me how they greeted each other," the archbishop said, "how on their knees they said the Hail Mary and added at the end: 'St Patrick, Apostle of Ireland, pray for us. St. Bridget, patroness of Ireland, pray for us. All ye holy men and women who died for Ireland pray for us.' Surely such men will not prove recreant to their trust."

Predicts Early Peace.

The archbishop reminded his hearers that fifteen months ago he asked them to withhold judgment upon the acts committed in Ireland and to refrain from criticism of the leaders of the various factions. He asked them again to be patient and withhold criticism, expressing the conviction that within a short time all troubles between the free staters and the Sinn Fein will have been wiped out.

"Ireland is going through her birth struggle now," he said. "It has long been delayed, delayed more than seven centuries. Its birth has not been like that of some newer countries brought to nationhood by premature birth, but it cams laboring, agonizing, struggling even now."

He recalled the wreckage and the wastage of war and the toll of lives taken already in the struggle.

"And so Collins and Liam Mellows, Griffiths and Boland, brave men all of them, are all part of the price Erin must pay for permanent peace. Some fifteen months ago I counseled the withholding of comment or criticism on the affairs of Ireland until the people there should settle the question themselves. I am still of the same opinion.

Hunns Alien Propaganda.

"You might take this that I may claim some right. I have never presumed to utter a word of criticism or blame concerning any man connected with either side of the conflict. I am firmly convinced that especially the leaders on both sides are honest in their intentions and loyal in their efforts for their country's good, that they strive for independence and are groping for some way out of the difficulty."

He expressed the wish that there might be some one now in Ireland like Archbishop Mannix, who "would bump their heads together." Much of the trouble he attributed to the result of alien propaganda.

"The dear Lord knows," he concluded, "that Ireland looks in vain for friends among the nations of the world. Well, at least here among the children gone from her, let her find a united band of sympathizers, a band of well wishers even though their brethren at home may be divided for a while at least. I am sure that the end of the difficulties is near and that Erin will become a happy, great, and rich nation."

County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer presided as toastmaster at the Hotel La Salle banquet. Others who spoke were Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman, Municipal Judge Joseph Burke, Patrick Enright, president of the Cook county division of the Ancient Order of Hibernians; the Rev. Frank L. Reynolds, chaplain of the order, and former Congressman James Graham of Springfield.

Display Swords of Leaders.

The Rev. Dr. Matthew Walsh, president of Notre Dame university, and James R. Howard, president of the American farm bureau, were the principal speakers at the Irish Fellowship club banquet. The swords of three Irish heroes of the civil war—Gen. James Shields, Gen. Thomas Francis Meagher, and Col. James Mulligan—were brought from Notre Dame university for the occasion by Francis O'Shaughnessy, president of the club, and served as an historical background for the "Apostrophe to the Sword," as recited by Mrs. John B. McKinley. Cathal O'Byrne, bard of the Gaelic renaissance, and Herbert Gould, basso of the Chicago Civic Grand Opera company, sang.

The Rev. Father W. J. McNamee of St. Patrick's church, the Rev. Father H. P. Smyth of St. Mary's church, Evanston, and Dr. John Murphy of the Chicago health department, were the speakers at a St. Patrick's church luncheon at the Great Northern hotel. Prior to the luncheon, solemn high mass was celebrated at St. Patrick's church, the sermon being delivered by the Rev. Father Crombley of Notre Dame university.

K. of C. Hold Frolic.

Delegates from more than twenty councils of the Knights of Columbus joined with University council in its annual frolic at the Congress hotel. John T. Fitzsimmons presided as toastmaster, and a lecture was delivered by Everett F. Quinn.

Mrs. Winnifred Mason Huck, former congresswoman from Illinois, and Prof. Joseph Gonnelly of the University of Chicago led the grand march at a dance given at the First Regiment armory by the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic. Sixteen students from the American College of Physical Education danced in costume.

Dances in honor of St. Patrick also were held by Hennepin council, Knights of Columbus, at the Auditorium hotel; by members of the Wide Awake Workers of the Daughters of Zion in the Logan Square auditorium; by the Irish-American club at the Hotel Sherman, by the Student Fellowship club at the 122d field artillery armory, by the Travelers' Protective association at the Auditorium, and by the Order of Alhambra of Chicago at the Congress.

Medill Students Give Dinner.

A St. Patrick dinner was given at the Palmer house by the student organization of the Medill School of Journalism.

An address in honor of the feast of St. Patrick will be delivered this evening in the Church of St. Justin, Martyr, 7035 South Honore street, by the Rev. Father E. L. Dondanville, following a sacred concert by the St. Phillip Neri boys' surplice choir.

HYLAN MAKES FOES OF IRISH FREE STATE BEHAVE AT PARADE

New York, March 17.—Thirty-two hundred members of the police department, detailed to prevent possible clashes between Irish Free State and "republic" sympathizers, guarded some 8,000 marchers in the annual St. Patrick's day parade through 5th avenue this afternoon.

The nearest thing to a disturbance was created at 42d street when an aged woman, elbowing her way through the crowd to the curb, shouted, "Ow, ye dirty robbers!"

The laughter disgusted her and she moved on.

Several "republicans," bearing placards scoring the Free State, attempted to join the procession, but were politely pushed behind the police lines.

Thirty patrolmen were stationed in each of the eighty-four blocks along the line of march, while members of the bomb squad and the detective division walked alongside the automobiles. A squad of mounted patrolmen headed the procession. Extra details of traffic men and several hundred reserves were pressed into duty.

NOTED ARCHITECT FROM FINLAND IS CHICAGO VISITOR

ELIEL SAARINEN.

Eliel Saarinen of Helsingfors, Finland, winner of the $20,000 second prize in the world wide competition for the Tribune Tower design, arrived in Chicago yesterday for a stay of several weeks. He was accompanied by Gustoff Strengell, a fellow architect of Finland.

They spent their first afternoon in wandering by foot along Michigan avenue from the Blackstone hotel to the borders of Lincoln park. Tomorrow they will visit museums and libraries and on Monday start out for a study of the skyscraper district.

Mr. Saarinen is especially interested in the American skyscraper and hopes that his prize design, which has excited the admiration of architects everywhere, will become a reality somewhere in this country. He has studied the Chicago plan for city development and was greatly impressed yesterday with the possibilities of the lake front.

Architect Dwight G. Wallace, who has represented Mr. Saarinen in this country, met the visitors yesterday. Arrangements have been made to begin a study of conditions here Monday. On Tuesday Alfred Granger, president of the Illinois Society of Architects, has arranged a luncheon for the visitors. The society of architects has invited Mr. Saarinen to be their guest of honor at their annual dinner on March 27. On March 22 there will be a luncheon given for Mr. Saarinen by the Cliff Dwellers.

Mr. Saarinen said he spent three months in drawing his prize design. He speaks English slightly, and is studying to perfect this.

There Is Only ONE MASON & HAMLIN—

SIGNIFICANT—isn't it, that the Mason & Hamlin Piano invariably finds its way into the homes of the most musical? Significant, too, that the majority of professional musicians of Chicago select the Mason & Hamlin not only for their private use but for their public performances.

The Mason & Hamlin enjoys this enviable following for but one reason—it is musically the most beautiful piano the world has ever known. This, the "Stradivarius of Pianos," is the most costly in the world to build. Naturally, then, it is the highest priced, but the small difference you pay is trivial when spread over the lifelong years of supreme satisfaction that it yields.

HAROLD BAUER

One of the world's greatest pianists expresses his opinion of the piano of his choice by saying:

"The Mason & Hamlin Piano not only represents the most perfect example of the piano maker's art, but fulfills every imaginable requirement from the point of view of both pianist and audience. It is the most superbly beautiful instrument that I know."

Remember, we make it easy to own a Mason & Hamlin. Your old Piano we accept in part payment—the balance you may pay in three years like rent. We invite you to hear and play this extraordinary instrument. On exhibition and for sale in Chicago at the Music Rooms of the

LUEDER STARTED UNDER HANDICAP, POLL INDICATES

been the local custom for thirty years. In that period only four Republican mayoralty candidates have won, while the Democrats have won eight times. Each time a Democrat won, it is probable that he gathered to himself more Republican votes than he lost Democratic votes, so far as division of the voters is concerned on national issues. It logically follows that in the advantage now enjoyed by Dever there are a number of Republicans. The names of some of the more prominent ones have been published in THE TRIBUNE, and there are others whose identity is not known.

Talk of Big Plurality.

The amount of the Dever advantage, as reckoned, will not be satisfactory to the Democratic managers, if they really believe some of the gossip which is thought to have emanated from headquarters regarding the enormous plurality expected on election day. But history is against the large pluralities for mayors. In twenty years there has been only one mayor elected by 25,000 plurality. If to the pluralities obtained before women voted is added a total for women represented by the percentage new voting in comparison with men, no mayor—with the exception of Thompson the first time—would have a plurality in twenty years above the advantage now credited to Dever.

As heretofore suggested, the number of votes for Cunnea, the Socialist candidate, may work out to the disadvantage of one of the other two candidates. One ardent Socialist was offering a bet at liberal odds yesterday that Cunnea will poll more than 100,000 votes.

Poll Five Large Theaters.

The poll collected and tabulated for today is of patrons of the five large theaters of Balaban & Katz, two located in the loop and one each on the south, west, and north sides, although all of them are much more than local theaters and consequently obtain representative audiences from large areas. On this poll Lueder received more votes than Dever by 85 in a canvas involving an aggregate of 3,566 votes.

The votes cast for each candidate in each theater are as follows:

Theater address.	Dever.	Lueder.	Cunnea.
Chicago, 175 N. State-st.	670	823	87
Roosevelt, 110 N. State-st.	306	307	26
Tivoli, 6325 Cottage Grove	244	249	20
Central Park, 3535 Roosevelt-rd.	285	115	92
Riviera, Broadway and Lawrence-av.	104	211	8
Totals of all theaters	1,619	1,704	243

The reports of the canvassers indicate many persons who attended these theaters have not yet decided upon the candidate they will vote for. A summarization of the votes for each candidate today, previous days, and totals to date is as follows:

Candidate.	Today's results.	Previous days.	Total to date.
Dever, Dem.	1,619	9,416	11,035
Lueder, Rep.	1,704	8,016	9,720
Cunnea, Soc.	243	1,628	1,871
Totals	3,565	19,060	22,626

While the mayoralty campaign has appeared on the surface to be one of the mildest of many years, interest in the poll continues to increase. Among the more interesting letters today was a poll of a barber shop in the Thirty-sixth precinct of the Forty-seventh ward, showing seven barbers who will vote the Socialist ticket, one the Republican, and none for the Democratic.

CAUGHT ROBBING SCALES.

Max Krugman, 15 years old, 1038 West 61st street, was taken into custody yesterday when he was detected stealing pennies from the money slot on a scales in the Woolworth 5 and 10 cent store, 6314 South Halsted street.

SEND LARSON REWARD CIRCULARS

Circulars offering $1,000 reward for the finding of Lewis Larson, believed to be wandering in a state of amnesia, were sent out yesterday. In the photograph are shown Leonard W. Larson, son of the missing former secretary of the school board (at left), and Harper E. Osborn, attorney for the Larson family, looking at one of the circulars. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Search Turns to West

Suggestions that he may have gone to California to visit friends or relatives there turned the search for Lewis Larson, missing real estate dealer and former secretary of the school board, in a new direction yesterday. The suggestion came from Walker Osborn, an attorney with offices in the Ashland block, who has charge of the hunt for the missing man.

Mr. Osborne's theory is that Larson, in a fit of amnesia, may have remembered nothing else but his friends in the west and gone out to Los Angeles to visit them. Police in Los Angeles and other western cities have been asked to look for him.

Asked to Explain Shift of Chief Expert.

BY PARKE BROWN.

William E. Dever, Democratic nominee for mayor, was asked yesterday to account for the fact that he is supported by Michael J. Faherty, Thompson's president of the board of local improvements.

This demand was made at a Hamilton club luncheon by the Rev. Elmer L. Williams, who commented at length on the fact that Faherty bitterly attacked Dever when he was chosen as the Democratic organization candidate. It has been known among politicians for some time that Faherty now has "turned Democratic" and that his son, Roger Faherty, is building up a Forty-fourth ward Dever organization.

Quotes Recent Speech.

The Rev. Mr. Williams began his talk by quoting from a recent speech by Dever, in which Lueder was attacked for accepting the support of former city hall Republicans and the question was raised concerning the rewards that would go to those leaders under a Lueder administration.

"Now," he continued, "if Mr. Dever can justly accuse Mr. Lueder of having made a bargain with city hall Republicans, how much more are we warranted in asking Mr. Dever, 'What bargain did you make to get city hall Republicans to go into a Democratic camp?'

"And I now put Mr. Dever on the witness stand to make this pertinent inquiry: 'What terms have you made with Mr. Michael Faherty, who on Jan. 22 attacked you in the public press because of your assailing him for his waste of public funds in expert fees?'

"What secret alliance have you, a Democrat, made with him, a Thompson Republican, branded by you in January and fighting for you in March?"

Ex-Yank Assails Him.

The Ex-Service Men's Lueder club simultaneously was going over Judge Dever on another score. They were holding a luncheon at the Hotel Morrison and there the question was raised whether the Democratic nominee is "entitled" to the support of ex-service men.

"There has been a great deal of publicity about ex-service men supporting Dever," said Sergt. Thomas J. Davey, an overseas veteran, "and for some time I have been wondering what Dever did in the war and what his family did. Did either of his sons help make up the army that went into the trenches?

"I have made some inquiry and I have here a document that may give you a line on the man that is claiming the support of ex-service men. It raises the question whether he was one of those men who was willing to let other men's sons go into the trenches but wanted to keep his own son at home."

Gives Young Dever's Record.

He then read as follows:

"Daniel M. Dever, son of Judge Dever, was conscripted April 28, 1918, by local board No. 56, Chicago, Ill. He was sent to Camp Grant, where he was assigned to 2d company, 1st training battalion, 161st depot brigade. When the personnel of this brigade was about to be sent to France, Judge Dever appeared at Camp Grant. Then Daniel M. Dever was transferred to Company E, 344th infantry on May 18, 1918.

"Shortly before Company E sailed for France Judge Dever again appeared at Camp Grant and Daniel M. Dever was transferred to the 30th company, 8th training battalion, 161st depot brigade, and shortly before the troops in this brigade were sent to France Daniel M. Dever was transferred to the camp exchange (canteen) detachment, where he remained until he was discharged March 8, 1919. He never left Camp Grant and saw no service."

"As a soldier who saw service," continued Davey, "I mean no disparagement of the man whom duty kept in this country—duty, I say. But the fathers who sent their sons across to France should know that this man's son by political or other influence was kept here in the United States."

Denial by Dever.

Judge Dever was indignant over this attack. In a formal statement he said:

"Any one who intimates that I sought for any favors for my son while he was in the service of his country is a damned liar."

Capt. Curtis W. Coe of Evanston, who was in command of the camp exchange detachment, said it was he who asked that young Dever be assigned to the detachment, because of his qualifications for that work. He said Judge Dever had nothing whatever to do with the transfer.

DEVER'S "MASCOT" ON JOB

When William E. Dever first ran for alderman in the old Seventeenth ward his campaign, which was successful, was managed by Arthur O'Brien, Judge Dever's present secretary. Mr. O'Brien took charge also of the other campaigns of Judge Dever, all of which resulted in victories. Now the Democratic nominee looks upon Mr. O'Brien as his mascot as well as a valuable aid. Mother, 3 Children Make 500 Mile Trip for $2.70

Edinburg, Ill., March 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Determination and $2.70 today had brought Mrs. Adeline Stephens and her three little children 500 miles from Morristown, Tenn., from where they started a long walk northward a week ago. After leaving Morristown, autoists gave them several lifts and by nightfall they had gone fifty miles. That night they slept in a deserted cabin. Next morning they walked on to Herman, Tenn., where money sufficient to take them to Illinois was raised.

DEMOCRATS SEE DUPLICITY IN G. O. P. TACTICS

Promises to Drys and Wets Both, Smith Says.

Clayton F. Smith, city treasurer and treasurer of the county managing committee of the Democratic party, charged yesterday that the Republicans supporting Arthur C. Lueder for mayor are "playing both ends against the middle" on the wet and dry issue.

"It is becoming more apparent every day," read a statement issued in his name from Democratic headquarters, "that the Republican campaign managers are waging a campaign of unparalleled duplicity.

"While their candidate for mayor is dodging all the issues and keeping silent in a dozen different languages they are conducting a gum-shoe campaign on the basis of promising everything.

Threats to Liquor Men.

"Take the appointment of the chief of police. You can learn from the Lueder managers that there are to be at least two chiefs of police.

"Ever since the campaign opened they have been endeavoring to rally the saloonkeepers and bootleggers to their side. First they resorted to threats. The agents of the Republican mayoralty candidate visited the various saloons in the city and told the saloonkeepers that they had better be careful of what they did politically.

"'You know we've got the federal officials, the attorney general, and the state's attorney on our side and unless you want us to close up the town you'd better make a noise for Lueder,' they've told the men who are still selling liquor.

Change Their Tactics.

"Apparently these threats didn't bear the fruit that they were expected to for recently the tactics have been changed. Instead of threats promises have been made and the saloonkeepers told that if the Republican candidate were elected there would be a wide open town and that H. C. W. Laubenheimer, former chief deputy sheriff, would be appointed chief of police.

"At the same time that these threats and promises were being made to the wets, other promises were being made to the drys.

Promises Made to Drys.

"They were told that as assurance of the intentions of the Republican candidate to put the lid down tight if he were elected mayor, Arthur M. Millard, who was one of his opponents in the primary fight, would be made chief of police. The promises that were made to the drys were made by men high up in the councils of the Republican organization. The drys accepted them as authoritative.

"Those made to the wets came from the smaller fry.

"Either we are to have two chiefs of police, one a wet and one a dry if the Republican candidate for mayor should, by any chance, be elected, or the promises that are now being made in the name of the Republican candidate amount to nothing."

Richert Backs Dever.

Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the city council committee on finance, issued a statement championing Judge Dever's record as an alderman from the old Seventeenth ward.

"I not alone served in the council with Dever," it read, "but I rejoice to say that I followed his vigorous, constructive leadership. Anybody recalling his fight in behalf of the people during the period when the present street railway franchises were under consideration must admit that he is a man of inflexible purpose and lofty ideals.

"He forced concessions for the people from the reluctant champions of that ordinance and he did it solely by an exhibition of courage that I have never seen equaled. He was a member of the finance committee. Although not its chairman, he was its de facto moral leader. He was a ruthless foe of waste and extravagance.

"If Dever should be fifty per cent as valuable to the people of Chicago as mayor as he was valuable as a champion of their rights and privileges on the floor of the city council, and in his capacity as a member of the committee on finance, I have no hesitation in saying he will be the best mayor Chicago ever had."

THE RAILROADS AND SOCIALISM.

It is virtually certain that one of the three or four principal subjects which the next congress will tackle is railroad legislation. There will be radical demands for repeal of the Esch-Cummins law and a variety of proposals for amendment of our system of regulation. There may be such balance of forces as will result in no important action being taken. That may be the best to be hoped for under existing conditions. It would give railroad management a chance to adjust itself to the present laws and a chance for the present system to demonstrate its strength and weaknesses.

But if important action is resorted to, the people of the United States should realize that it will have a very important effect upon their material welfare and may very well prove to be a critical turning point in America's economic and political history. Not since the fight for sound money, that is, in a quarter century, have there been presented to the American people issues more vital, not merely to their material welfare, but to their moral and political character, than are several raised by western radicalism in its attacks upon alleged railroad evils and its proposals for their remedy. For example, in the guise of demands for squeezing out "water" and for so-called "deflation of railway capital," is the issue of confiscation.

There is the very greatest need, therefore, that there should take place during the months intervening before the next congress begins to consider railway legislation a thorough public discussion of issues, interests, and proposals. If there had not been such discussion leading up to the election of 1896 there could have been no such decision as then was given decisively on behalf of the nation's financial integrity. Today in such discussion as we have of railway problems the grossest misstatements are reiterated without adequate challenge, such as the repeated assertion that the Esch-Cummins law guarantees a return of 5½ per cent to the railways. There is needed, then, a clarification of facts, and there is also needed an honest consideration of the principles involved and of the real meaning or inevitable consequences to be expected from the adoption of radical proposals.

For example, it should be pointed out to the public that the radical program can have but one certain conclusion, whether that conclusion be reached soon or in the course of a painful period of deterioration. That conclusion is called by the mild and ingratiating term of nationalization. If private capital is not protected in its essential rights, if regulation in one plausible form or another becomes so multiform and oppressive that private capital ceases to flow into transportation enterprise, if confiscatory measures under one pretense or another are adopted or are even threatened so that private capital is taken or driven away from railway enterprise, the only alternative in what is labeled nationalization or government ownership.

To radicals and self-styled champions of popular interest this consequence is not undesirable and we think in most instances is deliberately aimed at, though not always openly confessed. But to the general public it is not yet clear, and proposals for regulation are considered, if at all, solely according to what is expected from them in the way of immediate benefits. The result of this state of public opinion must be that we shall allow a steady drift toward nationalization, that is, toward a transfer of our function of transportation from private initiative under regulation to political operation under the guise of nationalization.

Such a process would entail not merely a great injustice to individuals but an enormous economic loss to the public through the progressive deterioration of our transport facilities, and if nationalization were unescapable it would be far better for all concerned, except the politicians who thrive by irresponsible and unscrupulous agitation, that the final issue should be reached at once and the transformation achieved without a costly and futile period of transition.

But we trust nationalization is far from inevitable, and we are confident it will not be accepted if it is given thorough discussion. It will not come if we do not drift into it. It will not come if it is taken out of the cloudy atmosphere of theory, examined in the light of experience, and tested by American principle.

For while it is easy to favor giving anything to the people, what that amounts to in practice is giving it to politicians. Nationalization sounds altruistic and patriotic. If the American public acquaint themselves with nationalization as it exists in other countries the appearance of altruism and the patriotism will fade. What, in plain English, nationalization means is the management and exploitation of transportation by politicians for political ends. Undoubtedly private management has its faults, but at the worst they are easy to bear in comparison with the evils inherent in bureaucracy. If private capital has been selfish and oppressive, the bureaucracy erected in the name of government ownership would make it seem beneficent.

This is not theory. Let any honest doubter go to Europe and study its nationalized railways, with their army of functionaries and their elaborate system for having three men do what one could do better. Americans complain bitterly of every defect of service by our railroads and of what they declare to be high rates. They would think less of radical physicians if they experienced service according to the standards of a bureaucracy and paid European rates.

Let Americans consider this also, that the heaviest stone that hangs about the neck of European governments to prevent them from rising out of the mire in which the war engulfed them is the curse of socialism, or nationalization of industry. If America allows its enterprise to be taken over as European peoples have, we shall see an end to American prosperity as we have known it in the past. We shall set up a tyrant more oppressive than a Cæsar and less vulnerable to our resistance. A king, after all, would have but one neck. Bureaucracy is hydra-headed, anonymous, but omnipresent.

Self-styled progressivism which heads toward socialism offers not progress but retrogression. If the American people have not lost their genius for practical affairs and their love of liberty, they will not be led into bureaucracy, nationalization, socialism, under any name.

This is a real issue in American thought today and it is the more dangerous because it is not immediate, but hides itself away in plausible tendencies, winning advances under cover of passing discontents and misfortunes, superficial indeed in comparison with those which an entrenched bureaucracy would inflict upon us.

AMERICA AND EUROPE.

What is reviving American business? Is it restoration of our foreign trade? It is not. The revival is within the borders of our own land. American farms, mines, workshops, railways are producing for America.

Four years after the great war and its sacrifices, laden as the nation is with a huge debt, our ship gathers headway, the sails are filling and drawing.

What are the reasons for this prompt recovery? A dozen could be named, but there is one which must come home to us by force of contrast with Europe. We have had peace on this continent, and by this we mean not merely military peace but political and economic peace. The territory of the United States has not been cut up like that of the disunited states of the European continent. New England is not fighting New York or Pennsylvania. The mines of Pennsylvania supply coal without tariff for the mills of New England and New York. No customs barriers run anywhere within the national boundaries. Resources and commodities are exchanged freely and the needs of one region are filled by the resources of another. The production of all regions is availed of by all regions and the strength of the continent is at the command of all its people under the flag.

In contrast the situation of Europe explains itself. It is a situation which has always existed and which the war and the peace have made, for the time being at least, worse than at any time for centuries. The map of Europe today was made with the sword. It represents no economic reasoning. Its internal divisions represent neither economic law nor even ethnic nor political logic. They represent force imposed, often in defiance of both.

This was largely the case before the war. Europe was divided into certain compartments created and supported not in the interest of all, not for the maximum production of wealth, not for cooperation and mutual welfare, but in the interest of certain dominant powers. Take the former Austro-Hungarian empire. It was an artificial imposition, which never produced harmony. It defied not only economic unification but race, religion, and political coördination. And this was not a peculiar situation. Each national entity—France, Germany, Italy, Scandinavia, Russia, Holland, Switzerland, Spain—erected on its borders economic barriers, and each maintained policies as to use of their respective resources which choked and burdened production and exchange.

But though the vast destruction of the war made it all the more important that unification, or at least some broad harmonizing, take place in order to raise Europe's productive efficiency to the highest possible point of restoration, the peace treaties continued the old system and in many cases made conditions worse. The new map cured no evils. It merely rearranged them. The system of exclusive use of resources and of economic barriers was maintained. Only different powers control the former, and the barriers in some cases shift to new boundaries.

And the new compartments are no more consistent within themselves than the old from the viewpoint of ethnic and political character. The new Italian boundaries include hundreds of thousands of unwilling aliens. They have taken in more Germans and Slavs than there were Italians in the Irredenta of the period before the war. The map of the former Austro-Hungarian territory and of the Balkans was not redrawn on any consistent principle. Ostensible reasons, sometimes that of strategic necessity, sometimes that of ethnic consistency, sometimes that quaint myth, historic restoration, covered the change, but the truth was that force dictated it, on behalf of the interest or fancied interest of powers with no shadow of moral right to dictate.

This is not new. It has been so in Europe since her history began. In the United States our varieties of race, religion, and economic situation do not divide us. We have known how to live together in harmony and coöperation. Blessed state. In Europe they have not learned to live together. We can see today in lurid colors the tragic result. May we learn to cherish our American principles, to resist every encroachment upon them, to repudiate promptly and decisively every influence which would divide us as Europe is divided.

There are such influences. There are zealots who preach religious and moralistic division and oppression. There are demagogues and doctrinaires who are trying to array class against class. There are short-sighted champions of local self-interest that would put up barriers and monopolize resources. These are the enemy within our gates, more to be feared than any foe that may batter upon them with hostile cannon.

We believe the American people of this generation, having been born to the blessings of peace and prosperity, do not understand the foundations of our well-being. For that reason we are not alert to defend them. For that reason we are permitting a progressive degeneration of these foundations, which are the basic principles and institutions of American liberty. For that reason we shall lose them unless we wake to their danger and to their preservation.

UNITING LAKES AND GULF.

In connection with the tenth annual foreign trade convention, to be held in New Orleans May 2-4, that city is planning two features of interest and importance to the entire Mississippi valley. One is the opening of the industrial canal and inner harbor of New Orleans, and the other is a conference of Mississippi valley delegates upon increased use of inland waterways and improvement of port facilities.

Chicago can hardly fail to take a practical part in these meetings. New Orleans certainly is the logical gateway for all Mississippi valley commerce to and from South America and for some other markets. The city has prepared itself to handle such commerce in its new inner harbor and through the short canal route to the gulf. All valley shipping points, and especially Chicago, as the metropolis of the great lakes basin, will be neglecting an opportunity for profit if they fail to take advantage of the improvement.

The opportunity will become greater when the Illinois waterway to connect lakes and gulf is completed, but it can be worth a great deal to us in dollars and cents even now. New Orleans is doing its part. Chicago should do as much. Our interests are common. The prosperity of one city should mean the prosperity of the other. We cannot do less than select the strongest and most representative delegation possible to the proposed convention and conference.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

With geese flying so low under a gray snow sky that the dogs bark at them as they honk. White ground from a mid-March blizzard, which skirted around the corner after leaving the ghost beauties of winter attached to the new buds. The lark singing from his accustomed meadow, although the cover of snow is there. A robin, seemingly forlorn and yet brave in the oak which is restless, shaking off the snow in the wind.

Wild plum blossoms bloom in the warm of the room into which branches have been carried, and that is word of the blossoming thorn and the shad bush.

Fox sparrows and song sparrows and the spring song of the chickadee. But best of all that familiar song of the meadow lark. Not even the bluebird is so full of spring and such a portent of perfumes as is this daring migrant to meadows which are only snow. He is the vernal equinox.

REFORM AND RELIGIOUS TEACHING.

We publish in the Voice of the People department of this issue a letter which we consider of such importance as to call for the utmost publicity. We believe it expresses the true function of the churches and its appeal should be given the most generous response.

"It is the task of the churches," says this appeal, "to reach the youth with the message of moral righteousness and religious teaching—the message of Christ, in other words—and turn the footsteps of boys and girls into the right way."

That we most earnestly believe, and we also believe that its truth is sometimes overshadowed in the churches themselves by activities in the political and civic field which are not well considered and which distract and weaken the influence of the pulpit in its proper sphere.

We believe this generation sorely needs religious guidance and inspiration. We think there is nothing it needs more, and with all due respect to the intentions of those who would reform by multiplying laws, we believe they are on the wrong path. Statutes and crusades for more machinery to force morality will never create righteousness. That must come from the heart and the enlightened mind, and it is the high privilege of the church to reach the heart and mind, not by way of the legislatures and the courts, but by the straight road of religious truth.

We in America, not merely the zealous reformers, but pretty much all of us, worship political machinery, and we are piling it higher and higher, until we no longer reach the forces of human life which dictate our fate. We must turn away from machinery to the realities of human character and intelligence if we are to be saved.

A citizenship inspired by the preacher of truth and righteousness will not have to be dragooned by reformers. A nation or city whose preachers are reaching the hearts of the people will not need clerical law enforcers; will not, in fact, need many laws save the law which has its sanction in the upright conscience. We try too much to lift ourselves by our bootstraps. The way of the good life is not built on statutes and ordinances. We cannot be driven to salvation by political force. Christ did not spend his time in the antechamber of Cæsar.

THE MULTIPLICATION OF LAWS.

In 624 days the national legislative body enacted 937 laws. During the same period many state legislatures were grinding out more.

There are already so many laws on the statutes, federal and state, that they cannot be enforced, and the result is we are in effect deprived of the constitutional guaranty which declares that no one shall be denied the equal protection of the laws. The most conscientious attorney general cannot perform his whole duty, for none has means enough to enforce all the laws against all offenders. He must pick and choose, and if he is not singularly disinterested he will pick and choose for political or personal reasons.

The multiplication of laws is one of the gravest dangers encountered in our history, and, unhappily, it is a danger little regarded, either by legislators or laymen. On the contrary, there seems to be an increasing tendency to resort to lawmaking as sovereign remedy for all wrongs and all ills of life, from the deepest to the most trivial. Encroachments upon liberty of private judgment are feebly or not at all resisted, except by extremists and cranks, and there seems very little moral courage to withstand any hue and cry set up in the name of morality.

It is futile to complain of nonenforcement of law while legislatures will pass almost any measure not vigorously resisted. The contrary rule should be followed; that is, no measure should be enacted unless the legislature is confident it is the expression of a general public demand, or unless the legislators are themselves convinced that it is required by the public good and can be effectively enforced.

Government by law is being destroyed by multiplication of laws.

Editorial of the Day

REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT.

[The Villager.]

In a recent leader in the London Spectator this sentence caught our eye: "Despite the unwieldiness of administration that it entails, it is essential to entrust the government of a civilized people to the people." The Spectator is right. But do you not see that we must place emphasis on the word "civilized"? "Civilised," we venture to say, means in a general way, "free"; civilized men are men who have made for themselves a life in which they are free to act and think and feel as they should. For free men representative government is not only best; it is possible. And what is important to remember is that if the men are not civilised, if they make for themselves a life which, to continue, must clip their freedoms, then democratic government will not do at all, it will crumble and give way to another government. It is not for our government that we want first of all to take care if we would save our form of government; it is our life; are we making it more and more civilised life, a life of free men? The government will be according to the life, not the life according to the government.

HAZARDS IN CHILDBIRTH.

VOX POP is seething over the one child family. A lord of creation pointed out what would happen if the birth rate continued to fall, and what would happen to the old stocks and the so-called upper classes if they continued to indulge in no child families and one child families, whereupon the women unlimber. For example, a "mere mother" writes: "Please take notice that it is always a man who lies awake nights worrying about the small families. Thereby hangs a tale, and every mother knows how sad a tale."

Other communications lead me to infer that the "sad tale" relates to the risk to the life and health of the woman who bears a child.

Statistics show that women have lower death rates than men at nearly all age periods. Their sickness rate is higher than that of men, according to the best evidence we have. Furthermore, the death rate of married women is less than that of single women. While all this is true it does not follow that women are working at an average safe trade when they are engaged in the work of having babies.

In 1921 New York state women had the following childbed death rates:

20-24—487	per 100,000
25-29—608	per 100,000
30-34—837	per 100,000
35-39—932	per 100,000
40-44—1084	per 100,000

According to Glover in the same age groups in the ten registration states the death rates of women from all causes were about:

15-19—337	per 100,000
20-24—480	per 100,000
25-29—589	per 100,000
30-34—663	per 100,000
35-39—765	per 100,000
40-44—888	per 100,000

These approximate figures as to general death rates indicate that having a baby is a hazardous occupation. While it is far less hazardous than it used to be, it is far higher than it ought to be. For instance, Oliver Wendell Holmes has been dead a long time, yet when he was in his prime he told us what caused childbed fever. All we needed to do to put an end to childbed fever was to carry out 100 per cent perfect details based on the principles which he told us of. Yet childbed fever ranks toward the top of causes of death in childbirth.

Syphilis and gonorrhea also rank high among the causes.

Bright's disease is right up at the top, as is poor medical and nursing service.

A comparison between the maternity death rates in New York state in 1920 and 1921 showed that some gain is being made. Especially is there improvement in the class of women between 15 and 19 and 20 and 24. There was no improvement in the older groups. Women 35 and over ran as much risk in the second year as they did in the first.

Of course society as a whole and men have no right to be released from responsibility for the high death rate in maternity. If men are not to be called on to have babies—and the best opinion is that they will not be—they should at least make the trade a safe one.

But there are ways in which women could help themselves. For instance, the trade is a fairly safe one in ages 18 to 23. That's the age period to work at it.

Women can do much to avoid puerperal infections. They can be periodically examined and thus avoid most of the risk of Bright's disease and convulsions.

There are several ways in which they can lessen the hazards of childbirth.

NO DANGER IN NURSING.

Mrs. A. A. A. writes: "On leaving my sister recently, I took her 6 months old baby to try to raise. For two days it took little nourishment, and that didn't agree with it. The second night I fell fast asleep with exhaustion, and was aroused late at night by the baby nursing me vigorously. I was badly frightened, as I had weaned my own 18 months old baby several months before, and while my breasts were still full, was afraid this might hurt or kill the child. It didn't, but it seemed to pacify the little fellow, for he slept well after completely emptying one side and when he awoke was bright and cheerful. Since this experience have been nursing him on one side and this seems to agree with child better than anything, but some of our family think this dangerous, so am appealing to you, for I would like to nurse him a few months if possible."

REPLY.

There is no danger.

THE LADY IS CURIOUS.

Mrs. S. writes:

"1. My little niece, 3 year old, has whooping cough. She cannot keep anything on her stomach. Not even water. Just as soon as she eats or drinks anything, she vomits and she does not even cough at the time she vomits. Could you please tell me what causes this and what to do?

"2. Also, what can I put on Fido after giving him a bath in kerosene and soap, as that does not seem to kill all the fleas. Is there a nit that hatches out after, and what will kill it?

"3. Can a girl vote when she is 18 years old?"

REPLY.

1. Vomiting is a characteristic symptom of whooping cough. It does not interfere with nutrition as much as you think. Benzyl benzoate gives some relief in whooping cough. Vaccines relieve some cases. Vapors and inhalations help some. But the disease is self-limited and tends to spontaneous cure if the subject is protected against pneumonia. It is much less dangerous in a child 3 years old than it is when the subject is a baby.

2. Fleas have nits or eggs, but they are not glued to the dog's hair. Probably they are in dusty rugs or other floor dirt. After you purify your dog he becomes repolluted by associating with other dogs or other animals and by sleeping in dirty places.

3. No.

Through whooping cough and dogs and fleas to voting shows quite a range of intelligent curiosity.

CROSS-EYED BABY.

G. F. M. writes: "Our baby girl 3 years old has her right eye or pupil turned towards the nose (cross-eyed).

"Will it require an operation to straighten it?"

REPLY.

Many of these cases can be cured by wearing properly fitting glasses.

This is true when the child is young.

In older people nothing but operation suffices.

If the eye is neglected it will lose its ability to see.

SCHEDULES HOUSEHOLD GOODS.

Villa Grove, Ill., March 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A friend had to schedule for his household goods to hold them from a judgment note. How long will that hold good, or will they have to renew the schedule?

A. G. W.

It holds good until another execution is served upon him or the creditor proceeds with levy.

TELEGRAMS NOT DELIVERED.

Chicago, March 10.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My wife's mother died in Nebraska on Feb. 14 at 2:15 a. m. At 8 o'clock a telegram was sent to my wife here in Chicago. As they received no reply from my wife, they sent another wire. My wife did not receive either telegram. They finally notified the police, who got the news to my wife. She was compelled to wait a total of twenty-four hours before she started on a 600 mile journey just because the telegrams were not delivered on time. Is the telegraph company liable for damages for nondelivery of those two telegrams?

F. K.

At common law there can, as a rule, be no recovery of damages for mental suffering unaccompanied by a physical injury, unless resulting from a wilful act. There are a few states that permit such a recovery, but the great majority do not permit it. Illinois is one of the majority states. We know of no Nebraska decisions upon the point. It seems probable that Nebraska law would control.

SEE AN ATTORNEY.

Chicago, March 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—"A" signs contract for a deed to house and lot at $12,000, paying $2,000 down and $80 per month, including interest. When $4,600 has been paid, deed is to be transferred to "A." "A" wants to sell at $15,000 when only $3,200 has been paid, deed therefore not having as yet been transferred to "B." After securing buyer, what steps are necessary to close deal? Please advise fully.

I. C. F.

Obviously the new purchaser ought to be represented by an attorney and those steps should be taken which such attorney insists upon. As far as A's interest is concerned, it is only necessary for him to assign the contract and procure the purchaser's agreement to pay it up.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MOTHER MAKES HER WILL.

Chicago, March 13.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Where a will is made in Livingston county, Illinois, is at necessary for the legatee to declare the inventory value of the property at the time of the probate?

2. Is it necessary where the mother of four children bequeaths real and personal property, that she name in the will each and every legal heir and make at least a normal bequest to each and every one?

3. Or can she bequeath the entire amount to just one of the four children and leave nothing to the others?

A. H. C.

1. Ordinarily, the court rules so require with respect to personal property.

2. No.

3. Yes.

MEMORY TESTS

1. What is the Fairfax stone? A stone marking the head of the Potomac river, and the farthest west point of Maryland. The early surveyors of this tract, working under the orders of Lord Fairfax, the owner of much of Virginia, mistook the north branch of the Potomac for the true river and settled the present boundary of Maryland and Virginia [now West Virginia] where it is.

2. Who was known as "The Gentle Lochiel"? Donald Cameron, a celebrated Scottish chieftain [1695-1748].

3. Where were oranges first discovered? In China and were first brought to Europe by the Portuguese in 1547.

4. What great actress was an aunt of Arthur Byron, actor? Ada Rehan. Her sister was Byron's mother and wife to the late Oliver Doud Byron.

5. Who was the first modern English novelist? Samuel Richardson [1689-1761], is credited with that distinction. From early youth he was a printer. When he was 50 some publishers desiring a letter writer for people who could not express themselves asked him to prepare it. He made these letters tell a connective story. The result was the first modern novel, "Pamela" [1740].

HELP CHICAGO'S YOUTH.

Chicago.—The newspapers have been filled with the accounts of a policeman atrociously murdered by bandits, while he was engaged in his duty of public defense. A young widow and a smiling son—too young yet to know the tragedy that has come into his life—are left sorrowing and desolate. Yes, and a babe yet unborn will wear the mantle of bereavement and will never know the joy of seeing its father's face.

The bandits will be punished—as they should be. Justice must prevail.

And yet—as these two murderers, boys yet under 21, march to the gallows, others will be coming on to slay other policemen in the future, to rob and murder and continue the carnival of death.

What can be done? Penitentiaries and gallows are not the ultimate cure. Suppose these two young murderers had been active in some Sunday school and church, working for their money and learning citizenship—if they had, today there would not be the policeman lying cold in death, his family in its agony of sudden bereavement, and the bandit's mothers broken hearted over the waywardness of their sons.

It is the task of the churches to reach the youth with the message of moral righteousness and religious teaching—the message of Christ, in other words—and turn the footsteps of boys and girls into the right way. The church is doing it, thank God. The scores of thousands of men and women whose Christian training make them the very first and last lines of civilization's defense is the answer.

But even as these have been reached, so much sacrifice and service continue until the last boy and girl has been reached—in Chicago, as well as in China. The problem is one of expansion of the efforts of the church and the multiplying of its accomplishments.

HOWARD AGNEW JOHNSTON,
President.

BROOKHART'S SHOOTING IRON.

Camanche, Ia., March 14.—The editorial "Backward Brookhart" in today's W. G. N. was probably written by artillerists in the late war. Being artillerists, the editors naturally belittle the part taken by the doughboy and his rifle. If a rifle's chief use is to carry a bayonet, why not go back to the use of the spear? Who's backward now? The rifleman is still the backbone of our army, artillerists to the contrary. Senator Brookhart's ideas are not obsolete. If advocating legislation which will benefit the people of this and future generations is reactionary then Senator Brookhart is an old fogy and a reactionary. The editorial is a very thinly veiled attack on the senator's ideas in regard to Big Business. Ideas advocated by Senator Brookhart and other progressives would make Big Business become Sound Business, but a continuation of the present system of ruinous stock inflation, stifling of competition, overcapitalization, and other business evils spells national distress in the future. Brookhart's vision is forward, not backward. The editorial lacks a thought of constructive criticism. It will have as much effect in Iowa as the loss of one ear of corn from our corn crop.

ROY E. TALLMAN.

POLITICAL MOONSHINE IN IOWA.

Montour, Ia., March 12.—The Iowa farmer was very enthusiastic over the election of Col. Smith Brookhart to the United States senate. The senator has fulfilled every expectation and can count thousands of friends at the closing of congress who voted for the other fellow last fall.

The colonel has made congress realize that the farmers of Iowa have a real friend who is honest, fearless and of more than ordinary ability.

His plan of restricting profits to 8 per cent is hailed with joy by the thinking farmers. If the stuff the farmer has to buy represented cost plus only 8 per cent profit, normalcy as you call it would not bear down with such crushing weight. If the farmer could get cost plus 8 per cent he would be as happy as Charley Chaplin.

Considering current values of land, not 2 per cent of the farmers are making over 3 per cent above cost; and, more to the point, he never will without a reversal of present methods of bucking world prices. His taxes are the highest of any state in the Union, and because he produces all the income of the state he has to pay all the taxes. The bonded indebtedness of the combined counties is enormous. Including all indebtedness within the state, we owe about 45 per cent of all we are worth. Of this 40 per cent is propaganda debts [political moonshine debts]. The fellow who passes on the taxes as overhead controls the public expenditures, and he does it with a lavish hand.

Yes, indeed, the Iowa farmer is loyal to Senator Brookhart. We would shout our blooming heads off to see profits reduced to 8 per cent on everything we buy and the chance to make 8 per cent above cost, including taxes on what we produce.

A. J. BANKS.

LET THE STATE HELP ELIMINATE "PITTSBURGH PLUS."

Champaign, Ill., March 9.—We note with interest magazine articles, newspaper editorials, and newspaper articles covering a trade practice in the steel industry known as the Pittsburgh plus. To my mind there is no single item that will bring as much prosperity to the state of Illinois as the elimination of this false standard.

There is now before the state legislature a bill appropriating $35,000 for use toward the elimination of Pittsburgh plus, and there is also pending in the legislatures of several other central states surrounding us bills of a like nature. We feel sure that you will agree with us that this amount of money could not be better spent for the general prosperity of the people of this district, the manufacturers, employés, and even for the individual indirectly interested.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

A SEA SONG.

By Allan Cunningham.

A wet sheet and a flowing sea,
And a wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail.
And bends the gallant mast;
And bends the gallant mast, my boys,
While, like the eagle free,
Away the good ship flies, and leaves
Old England on the lee.

O, for a soft and gentle wind!
I heard a fair one cry;
But give to me the snoring breeze
And white waves heaving high;
And white waves heaving high, my boys,
The good ship tight and free;
The world of waters is our home,
And merry men are we.

There's tempest in yon horned moon,
And lightning in yon cloud;
And hark the music, mariners!
The wind is piping loud;
The wind is piping loud, my boys,
The lightning flashing free—
While the hollow oak our palace is,
Our heritage the sea.

U. S. INDUSTRY SPEEDING UP TO STRIDE OF 1920

Begins to Feel Shortage in Labor Market.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Almost at the kickoff of the 1923 "busy season," March finds industry hitting up almost as swift a pace as in March, 1920, the year of "peaks."

The labor scarcity which first manifested itself in the steel mills, nearly a year ago, is spreading fast into other industries. Foundries, metal and machine shops, automobile factories, furniture plants, woodworking factories and textile mills in many parts of the country are clamoring for workers, both skilled and unskilled.

Up in the lumber camps there is a shortage of woodsmen, while in many farming sections there is a scarcity of farm hands.

Farm Hands Quit Farms.

High wages and steady work have been draining men from the rural communities into the mill towns. Just as in 1920, big employers in steel and iron, rubber and the automotive lines, had scouts out combing the smaller cities for workers, so they have scouts out now. White and Negro workers have been migrating from some sections of the south in a steady stream into the north, especially into Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana, for months.

Agriculture is voicing fears of another shortage of farm labor this summer. Significant of this and of the increased buying power on the farm, due to price advances, the farm implement makers have increased their activities.

East Strikes the Note.

Such is the picture one gains from the monthly survey of the U. S. employment service of the department of labor. In the east basic industry is reported as almost at full tilt. As a general thing, the New England cotton and woolen mills are operating full time. So are the shoe factories. Many Massachusetts mills are working overtime.

In New York, employment in March is reported as greater than ever before with one exception—during 1920—and shortage of labor is apparent in many lines of trade.

Pennsylvania makes similar report. The important industries of this state are "experiencing difficulty in obtaining sufficient labor;" the shortage exists in the steel mills, the metal and fabricating plants, the locomotive works, and in the silk mills and clothing manufacturing.

West Joins the Chorus.

Sweeping westward through Ohio and Michigan similar conditions are reported. From scores of industrial centers come reports that inadequate railroad facilities are retarding expansion of industry—just as every one was predicting they would—and that the demand for workers even now is outrunning the supply.

As one reads the survey, reports of this sort strike the eye from nearly all the important centers in the big industrial belt.

In Chicago the metal industries started March with 5 per cent more men than on Feb. 1. Agricultural implement factories registered the greatest increase, a growth of 24 per cent in the number of workers in twenty-two plants. Some 375 Chicago employers reporting to the general advisory board of the Illinois department of labor alone had 10,000 more persons at work March 1 than on Feb. 1, a jump of 5 per cent.

Barney Cohen, director of the federal employment service, reports that the employment situation in Chicago is in "better condition than at any time since the war." Steel mills in the Calumet-Gary sector are booked almost solidly for the second quarter of the year.

Midwest Conditions.

A bird's-eye view of conditions in the territory adjacent to Chicago and Illinois is given herewith:

ILLINOIS—Very little unemployment. Small surplus of labor around East St. Louis, where, however, packing houses steadily are adding to their forces. Around Decatur there is an oversupply of workers in the building trades and among the unskilled.

INDIANA—The only labor surplus is in clerical workers. There is a shortage of domestic help, and the supply of common laborers is not equal to the demand in the Calumet district.

MICHIGAN—Skilled and unskilled labor shortage in all parts of state, except around Kalamazoo, where there is a surplus of common laborers. The shortage is particularly marked in the Detroit district.

WISCONSIN—Around Milwaukee, Green Bay, and La Crosse there is a surplus of labor, but factories are increasing their output in Racine and there and in Kenosha a slight shortage of labor is apparent.

IOWA—Throughout Iowa the surplus of labor is decreasing.

In Ohio, Minnesota, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Nebraska there are slight surpluses, but conditions are improving.

CATHOLIC BISHOP OF ST. JOSEPH IS DEAD AT 76

St. Joseph, Mo., March 17.—The Rt. Rev. Maurice F. Burke, bishop of the St. Joseph diocese and the oldest Catholic bishop in the United States in point of service, died at his home here today. He was 76 years old, and had been in failing health three years.

The last five months the diocese has been administered by a coadjutor bishop, the Rt. Rev. Francis Gilfillan, formerly of St. Louis, with right of succession.

Christopher Meehan to Be Buried Tomorrow

Christopher Meehan, 3144 Wallace street, one of Chicago's oldest steam fitters and widely known in labor circles, who died in Mercy hospital from injuries received in an accident two weeks ago, will be buried tomorrow morning with services at 9:30 o'clock, from St. David's church, 32nd place and Lowe avenue. Interment will be in Mount Olivet cemetery. Two brothers, Andrew and James Meehan, survive.

FOILS MORON

MISS ROSE CHURAN.

Her screams, combined with a lucky blow aimed at his nose, scared a moron away when he attempted to attack Miss Rose Churan, 1715 North Kimball avenue, on Friday night.

Miss Churan, 16 years old, is a senior in Schurz High school. The moron followed her as she left a North avenue car at Kimball avenue. At Wabansia avenue he grabbed her. She screamed and hit him with her fist. He ran. The police are searching for him.

D. L. GOODWILLIE, WEALTHY BROKER, WEDS MUSICIAN

David L. Goodwillie, wealthy Chicago broker and stockholder in the Goodwillie Box company, and Mrs. Permelia Gale, mezzo-contralto of Oak Park, were married in California on Thursday, according to a report received here yesterday.

MRS. PERMELIA GOODWILLIE.

When Mr. Goodwillie refused to contest his wife's charges of cruelty and permitted her to secure a divorce in May, 1921, after thirty-five years of married life, gossip in the sedate west side suburb associated his name with that of Mrs. Gale, the musical merry widow of the village.

Goodwillie, prominent in affairs of the Union League club and chairman of the committee to prevent the removal of the Great Lakes Naval Training station, was more inclined to society, so rumor went, than his wife, who had raised five children. At the time of the divorce the clubman is said to have complained to friends that his wife, then a semi-invalid, was "ruining" his career.

Mr. Goodwillie will take his bride to Honolulu for a ten days' wedding trip. It is not known whether or not he will take up his residence in Oak Park, where his first wife is now living.

ARTHUR MIDLAM, LONG EMPLOYE OF ARMOUR, DIES

Arthur S. Midlam, veteran employe of Armour & Co., and general manager of their Sioux City, Ia., plant for more than fifteen years, died yesterday of bronchial pneumonia after an illness of less than a week. Mr. Midlam was well known in Chicago, where he served in several executive capacities. He is survived by a widow and one son.

Born in Rome, N. Y., in 1872, Mr. Midlam entered the employ of Armour & Co. as a boy. Rapid promotion followed, until he was appointed superintendent of the company's plant in South Omaha, Neb. From that post he was transferred to the superintendency of the properties in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and after several years in South America returned as general manager of the Sioux City packing plant.

SALESMAN REPORTS HOLDUP.

Anthony Kollas, 2448 Prairie avenue, silk salesman, reported to Wabash avenue police last night that he was robbed of $60 and silk merchandise valued at $200 by two colored men in the vestibule at 4428 Vincennes avenue.

9,000 RUSSIANS IN CHINA UNDER RED CROSS CARE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PEKING, March 17.—Morgan Palmer, representing the American Red Cross, is endeavoring to arrange for the repatriation of 5,000 Russians camped in Kirin province, and also is trying ao find if there is a way to return the 4,000 destitute Russian whites at Gensan, Corea.

Mr. Palmer expects to visit Chita, after looking over the situation in Kirin, in an effort to obtain a reiteration of the amnesty offer. Most of the refugees were a part of Gen. Dietrich's army which fled from Vladivostok after the Japanese evacuated the city. Women and children comprise 10 per cent of the refugees.

China is encouraging efforts to bring about repatriation since at once it relieves the nation of a great burden and reduces the tension along the Chinese Eastern railway.

DISTRICT DENIES SANITARY FLOW REDUCES LAKES

Tells Canal Facts in War to Safeguard City.

Chicago—repelling a heart blow directed by forces marked up as "agitators," "jungle politicians," and "propagandists"—opened its own fight yesterday to preserve the health of Chicago and the authorized program of sewage disposal that has been adopted by the sanitary district of Chicago.

W. J. HEALY. [Morrison Photo.]

The states of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, and Indiana, as represented by the attorney general of each, are to meet in conference somewhere in Chicago tomorrow to consider ways and means of backing up the original case of the state of Wisconsin in the Supreme court of the United States wherein Wisconsin seeks to enjoin the sanitary district from withdrawing any more water from Lake Michigan through the sanitary district canal.

Statement Is Issued.

Approved by President William J. Healy and the unanimous vote of the nine trustees of the sanitary district, a statement was issued, preliminary to tomorrow's session, signed by George M. Wisner, consulting engineer of the district; Chief Engineer Edward J. Kelly and Langdon Pearce, sanitary engineer of the district, which reads, in part, as follows:

"Chicago's health and prosperity even the lives of its 3,000,000 people, are in grave danger. The peril that hangs over the second city of the United States, and threatens as well the great areas that have a community of interest with Chicago, has been placed there by a misguided movement predicated on the false belief that Chicago's sanitary district is draining the great lakes and thus is injuring the harbors of the great lakes region.

District Created in 1889.

"The sanitary district of Chicago was created by act of the legislature in 1889 and the drainage canal, connecting the Chicago and the Desplaines rivers, built in the ensuing ten years.

"There was then but one outflow from the great lakes, the St. Clair river, which was taking roughly 11,000,000 cubic feet per minute from Lake Huron.

"The sanitary district began active operation on Jan. 17, 1900, following a period during which the sewage of the city had largely been emptied into Lake Michigan, polluting, as it did so, the drinking water of the city and bringing on epidemics that had boosted the mortality rate of the city to an alarming degree.

$13,000,000 to Control Flow.

"When the taking of water for sewage purposes began, 200,000 cubic feet per minute was taken. It was soon afterwards reduced to 250,000 cubic feet per minute at the request of the United States war department, not because too much water was being used, but solely because an excessive current was being set up in the Chicago river.

"The amount taken was increased when the excessive current obstacle was removed by the sanitary district's spending $13,000,000 in widening, improving, and removing impediments to flow in the Chicago river.

"The amount was then increased as the city grew until the district was taking 500,000 cubic feet per minute. That is the amount now being taken, Chicago having grown from a city of 1,250,000 to a city of 3,000,000 people.

"Three years ago the taking of water from Lake Michigan by the sanitary district of Chicago had lowered the level of Lake Michigan and Lake Huron, according to the sworn testimony of federal engineering experts, about four inches. To lower the level of the lakes four inches had taken twenty years.

Explains Four Inch Recession.

"In that same period the amount of outflow through the St. Clair river had diminished from 11,000,000 cubic feet per minute to 10,500,000 cubic feet per minute. In other words, there came a time when the amount of water the sanitary district was taking in Chicago, 500,000 cubic feet per minute, and the amount of water the St. Clair river was taking exactly equaled the amount of water that the St. Clair river was taking before Chicago took any water.

"During that period the level of the lakes had been lowered four inches, the federal engineers have said. Well, the truth about the matter is, astounding as it may seem to the lay mind, even though the water be taken to the full capacity of the channel, the level of the lakes cannot be appreciably lowered.

"In other words, Chicago in twenty-three years has skimmed four inches from Lake Michigan and Lake Huron, and is now taking a small part of the water that twenty-three years ago used to flow out of Lake Huron via the St. Clair river. And no more.

Ready to Restore Level.

"During that period the health of Chicago and environs has been properly safeguarded. The death rate has dropped to a low point. It has been accomplished with four inches of lake water and an investment of $120,000,000 in the sanitary district.

"The sanitary district has offered, and offers again, to put those four inches back, to restore them to the lakes. It can be done at a cost of 32,500,000. The district long ago appropriated the money and offered it to the federal government, which has been rather slow to act. The money is still, and will continue to be, available.

"The four inches taken by the sanitary district can be quickly restored, and more, by the building of compensating works or floating dams at points in the St. Clair, the Niagara and the St. Lawrence rivers. The engineers signing this statement attest the truth of this with their professional honor.

"Such compensating works would regulate the levels of Lakes Michigan, Huron, St. Clair and Erie. The great lakes are merely mill ponds on a giant scale, and should be so visualized. They are great water reservoirs. In certain periods they contain more water than in others. When they contain more water than usual, the outflow from Lake Huron through the St. Clair river is greater.

Outflow Easily Regulated.

"The outflow can, and should, be regulated. And the task of doing so is very simple. More water would be held in Lake Michigan and Lake Huron during a time of large supply. Consequently the levels of the two lakes would be raised. Lakes St. Clair and Erie would not be lowered.

"The crying aloud by misguided agitators in several states has spread the false belief that during the last year the sanitary district has lowered the levels of the lakes half a foot. There have been wild statements, the sanitary district has done ever greater damages than that. In truth, the level of the lakes has fallen five inches in the past year. But—the lakes have been lowered by natural causes, not by the sanitary district.

"We want the great lakes region of thinking men and women to know that, if there were no sanitary district in Chicago and if there never had been a sanitary district, still the lakes would have been lowered five inches in the past year—from natural causes.

"If Chicago is compelled to reduce the amount of water it can take for sewage purposes by one-half, the levels of Lake Michigan and Lake Huron will be raised just two inches and no more. Navigation will not be helped, nor will any of the lake ports be aided. Any layman can understand that much.

"We are now, and for some time past have been, engaged in a program to supplement sewage disposal with plants for its artificial treatment and disposal. The program calls for an expenditure of $100,000,000. In a period of twenty years we plan to increase our plants to such an extent that at the end of that time the pollution in the drainage canal will have been diminished by one-half.

"In the event that the agitators who now seek the life of the sanitary district succeed in their attack Chicago and environs will not only be imperiled but an additional program of expenditure of $150,000,000 will be forced on the city."

Attorney General Ekern of Wisconsin yesterday acknowledged the official invitation of the sanitary district, expressed by the Crowe resolution adopted Thursday, placing at the disposal of the four attorneys general who will meet tomorrow all of the resources, books, records and physical properties of the district, to show just what Chicago is developing. No arrangements for a joint session between the attorneys general and the district representatives had been arranged late yesterday.

GIRL TELLS HOW MOTHER FOILED HER LOVE PLANS

The road to love seems a rocky one for Miss Eugenia Van Meteor, 17 years old. She told Judge Morgan in the Domestic Relations court of her troubles yesterday.

"I told my mother that I was in love with William F. Fuches, 19 years old, living at 1117 Ardmore avenue," he girl said. "She became furious and drove me from home. We live at 114 East Superior street. I went to my suitor's home, and mother came there and got me."

Mrs. Van Meteor had young Fuches arrested for contributing to her daughter's delinquency. His case was continued yesterday until March 27.

"Finest Clothes I Ever Saw"

A WELL-KNOWN clothing man came, saw and quickly capitulated to the superior appeal of Capper & Capper clothes, as produced under the "new order of things."

"Indeed, you have really raised the standard of the clothing industry," said he, "for they're certainly the finest clothes I ever saw."

We pledged ourselves to create a market for these finer things, if they could be produced. Already, that market actually exists, as our clothing business has more than doubled since the new plan went into effect.

Now listen, folks; because these clothes are finer, it doesn't follow that the cost is prohibitive. As a matter of fact, you'll be surprised at the reasonableness of our prices. We've doubled our volume—soon we shall treble it—and we operate on a small margin of profit. This enables us to maintain an extraordinarily fair and consistent price.

CITY'S BUDGET CUT TO STAY IN REVENUE LIMITS

Annual Expenditure to Be Near $40,000,000.

Chicago's annual budget of more than $40,000,000 will be within the city's estimated revenues this year. This was indicated late last night as the council finance committee, which has been working on the appropriations for several months adjourned to meet again today for final action.

ALD. RICHERT.

When the aldermen met yesterday it was announced that the budget in its present form was $43,906,234, with the estimated revenues only $42,868,679. By voting a 3 per cent salvage and by cutting the appropriations of several departments nearly $1,000,000 was saved.

Curtail Utilities Litigation.

One of the savings made was the halving of the $150,000 appropriation for public utilities litigation. The aldermen voted only $75,000 for this purpose, $35,000 to be used for the telephone case and the rest for surface lines, etc. They also tied it up so that none of the money can be spent without the sanction of the council.

By tying up the appropriation the committee hopes to eliminate the scandals which have come up in the city hall in the last few years through the payment of large fees to political henchmen. The committee also lopped $250,000 from the $750,000 originally voted to the street department for motorization.

Salary Increases Few.

The tendency of the aldermen seemed to be to keep the budget within the revenue, and only a few additional appropriations and salary increases were granted. The committee voted to give the fire department $7,500 from which meritorious service on the part of members will be rewarded, but they refused the request of fire lieutenants for the same pay as captains.

Ald. Richert, chairman of the committee pointed out that March 31 is the last day on which the budget can be passed according to law and consequently it must be in the hands of the printer tomorrow. As a result the committee worked until long after midnight, and will probably be in session until late today.

U. S. MAY LEAD WORLD TO ACT ON RADIO LAWS

Washington, D. C., March 17.—Receipt by the state department of a report by the commission of jurists which met at The Hague last December was followed today by an announcement by Secretary Hughes that the Washington government might initiate action looking toward a treaty or a convention between various nations based on the report as it affects rules of international law applying to radio and air craft.

At the present time the report is being studied. Inasmuch as the commission was created by the Washington armaments conference called by this government, it was said to be naturally assumed that the United States would take the initiative.

The report was forwarded by John Bassett Moore, who represented this government. Army and navy officers who attended the conferences in the capacity of technical advisers to Mr. Moore are understood to favor adoption of the convention's decisions.

LIFE IN A 'LIVING TOMB' FOR WOMAN HUSBAND KILLER

Cassopolis, Mich., March 17.—[Special.]—Maud Cushing Storic, charged with poisoning her husband in December, 1921, was today found guilty and sentenced by Judge Desviognes to "a living tomb."

"You sent your husband, a kind, lovable man, to his grave," said the judge, "and I am going to confine you to a living tomb."

Mrs. Storic was found guilty by a jury of farmers. Witnesses had testified that she was unmoved by her husband's death, and during her trial she appeared at all times unaffected. When the court sentenced her she said:

"All I want to say is that a great injustice has been done."

Her husband and three sons were with her in the courtroom. Her sons, who were sons of Cushing, testified for her during the trial.

U. S. JUDGES HIT DRY SNOOPERS WITHOUT WRIT

Can't Search Autos or Go Into Private Homes.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[Special.]—Decisions yesterday and today by two federal judges left the dry law enforcement chiefs here in a dubious attitude as to the next steps they will take to counteract the "adverse" rulings.

In Kentucky, Federal Judge Evans decided yesterday that neither United States nor Kentucky prohibition enforcement agents had any right to search an automobile without first obtaining a search warrant.

"The national prohibition act is not the supreme law of this country," Judge Evans said. His decision was followed immediately by the announcement of Chief Enforcement Officer Miller that he would withdraw all federal agents from Kentucky.

Stops Promiscuous Snooping.

The effect of this decision, according to federal District Attorney Sherman and Mr. Miller, is that automobiles cannot be stopped, searched, or seized without prior issuance of a warrant, and this, Mr. Miller said, effectually ends all the activities of his men. Prohibition bureau officials here said, following receipt of the above news, that Mr. Miller had no right to withdraw his agents.

The second opinion by a federal judge is deemed even more drastic. Today in Syracuse, N. Y., Federal Judge Hazel ruled that dry agents have absolutely no right to enter a home without a warrant, and he ordered that such practices be discontinued forthwith.

Judge Hazel severely denounced the methods employed by William Brennan, chief enforcement officer at Syracuse; ordered the return of a considerable quantity of liquor taken from the homes of three men there, and instructed the defendants' lawyers to prepare papers in a motion to punish Brennan for contempt of court.

Violates the Constitution.

"Entering a man's home without due process of law is a flagrant violation of his constitutional rights, and is not to be tolerated," said Judge Hazel.

In spite of these decisions, dry authorities here declared that they would continue "to enforce the law by every practicable means." The Kentucky verdict may be used as a test case, it was said at the bureau, and Acting Commissioner Jones ordered a transcript of the proceedings for his counsel.

In any event, Mr. Jones' office stated, dry agents are justified in detaining and searching automobiles if they had "reasonable" grounds for suspicion that they contained intoxicants. A California jurist recently held that "reasonable" grounds for such suspicion warranted detention and investigation; although a Georgia federal judge later ruled similarly to the Kentucky decision.

It is considered probable that an appeal will be taken from these "adverse" verdicts if prohibition officials find that they interfere "seriously" with enforcement.

Forbid Official Bibblers.

Public officers who violate the prohibition laws should be humiliated and driven from public office, declares the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal church, in a statement issued today. This applies especially, it is announced, to senators and members of the house of representatives and to officers of the army and navy.

"Strict adherence to the prohibition law must be required of all public servants," the statement says. "If a drinking man voted dry in congress because his constituents demanded that he vote dry, his position was entirely logical. But now prohibition is the law of the land.

"When a congressman, an executive, an officer of the navy or the army consumes liquor in public, flaunting his contempt for a fundamental law of the land and showing himself lost to the sense of honor which should hold him true to his official oath, he should be publicly humiliated and permanently retired from the service of the United States."

Miss Claire Heilmann, who vanished when limelight in Popp suicide centered on her, asserts she is innocent of wrong in connection with the affair, and merely left out of regard for her friend, Miss June Bacon.

GIVE CUBAN SHIP PERMIT TO LEAVE WITH RUM CARGO

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[Special.]—The Miguel Ferrer, a Cuban vessel with 5,000 cases of liquors aboard, which recently put into Fernandina, Fla., under stress of weather because part of her machinery was disabled, is expected to start back to Havana today.

The owners of the cargo decline to put up the bond, amounting to almost $100,000, which American customs officials demanded, so it was decided that the vessel should return to Havana instead of proceeding to her original destination. A young Cuban naval officer was sent to Fernandina to take command of the vessel on her homeward voyage.

BANDITS ROB ALTON CAFE.

Alton, Ill., March 17.—No trace has been found this morning of three masked bandits who held up Al Weber's cafe and escaped in an automobile with about $2,300.

MISS HEILMANN IS FOUND; TELLS OF POPP AFFAIR

that hunted feeling, and I kept thinking, 'I've committed no crime. Why am I running away?' And when I heard how my mother and sister had to face suspicion on my account I determined to return, tell my story, such as it is, to my attorney, and any official who wishes it."

No Gifts from Popp.

Questioned as to the amount of gifts Mr. Popp showered upon her, the girl grew scornful.

"Gifts? Why, Mr. Popp never gave me so much as a flower. Those stories of my wealth are certainly funny. Do you know that when I left home last Saturday I wanted to go to California where my sister is, but I didn't have the money?

"And they talk about my clothes! I have exactly three gowns and none of them cost more than $75. This coat," and she sunk her fingers into the thick seal of the enveloping dolman, "it cost me $400, and it's not all paid for yet."

Equally amusing in its inaccuracy, according to the girl, is the story of the "brunette masseuse."

"My hair's not brunette," and to disprove it she ruffles bronze bobbed ringlets with her left hand. On the third finger is a glistering diamond. But she denies she is engaged.

Trained to Work.

"And as for my job, just because I didn't happen to be employed the day the authorities questioned my mother doesn't mean that I don't work. Why, I was trained to work. I've had positions in beauty parlors. I've been a milliner," and she cocked the chic French toque to the left side of her head.

In explaining her friendship with Miss Bacon, Claire Heilmann never once betrays that friendship.

The two girls met, she says, nine years ago in South Bend, when June was employed there in a store. June, the story continues, went to California five years ago and met Fred W. Popp on the train. After the way of chums, she wrote back to her Indiana friend telling of "the trivial incident" which lead to her acquaintanceship with the "banker traveling alone."

"Two years ago," Miss Heilmann recalls, "I was in Chicago visiting June and I met Mr. Popp. Since then I have often been out with both of them in parties. I have never, not once, bee nanywhere with Mr. Popp alone."

No Gifts from Banker.

Her real fidelity to Miss Bacon's friendship was evident when the bronze haired girl challenged any one to show that June had received expensive gifts from the middle aged man who, Miss Heilmann admits, "was crazy to marry June."

"It is absolutely untrue that I have any knowledge of Mr. Popp ever giving June one cent. I never saw him give her anything and I never heard anything about it, although I was often a guest in her home for a week at a time."

June a Business Woman.

Admitting that the Logan square banker took a personal interest in the financial affairs of his blonde client, Claire's explanation is that he was not giving June money, but helping her own money make money.

For June, according to her friend, is a brilliant business woman, totally different from her mother and half-sisters. More than that, her confidante describes her as essentially dominating, "able to dominate any man."

Miss Heilmann finds amusing the stories that June is a smuggler, or that she ever paid $500 a month for an apartment. And the recurrent theme of her story is that June was genuinely fond of Mr. Popp, but never loved him, and that Mr. Popp hoped some day to marry the girl who fascinated him, but to whom he gave none of the gifts which rumor has him laying at the blonde girl's feet.

As she concludes her interview the girl who was born in Knox, Ind., twenty-six years ago, turns autobiographical.

"I went to school at St. Mary's in South Bend. It was there I had my first real love affair." With an artless realism she continues: "You know, I've had my good times, and I've liked them, but what I really want is a home. They picture me as a wild girl. I wonder."

COMMISSION TO PROBE CAUSE OF 'MINER STRIKES

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[Special.]—Causes of strikes in the coal industry will be inquired into by a special staff of field investigators which has just been organized by the United States coal commission.

The work will be under the direction of Dr. Joseph H. Willits of the University of Pennsylvania who is in charge of the labor relations phase of the commission's activities. Associated with him will be Prof. Willard E. Hotchkiss, formerly secretary of the shipbuilding labor adjustment board, dean of the school of commerce of Northwestern university and secretary of the President's industrial congress.

Former Vice President Marshall, one of the members of the commission, who has just returned from a tour of Alabama coal fields, commented today upon an investigation of controversies dealing with infringements upon civil rights of mine workers. Mr. Marshall, who is in direct charge of this inquiry, said that reports have been received of threatened difficulties along this line in Somerset county, Pennsylvania.

"While in Alabama I saw under the control of the Tennessee Iron and Coal company what might be called a model village and also one of the finest hospitals in the world maintained by that company," said Mr. Marshall. "But I am unable as yet to express an opinion as to how far in the long run the common good of a people is promoted by benefactions of this character. I heard complaints which were in nowise different from complaints made everywhere. As far as I can learn the whole situation is a case of 'you're another.'

"I shall express no opinion now on this question, to which I have been asked by the commission to give special attention. The hope of the commission is that it can definitely settle to the satisfaction of all parties which are the real rights of an American citizen and that it can get a public pledge of obedience to and preservation of those rights in the future."

I always had a hazy idea of the Morris Bank—

"Till the other day, I'd always felt that there was something mysterious about The Morris Plan of banking, and that it might not quite fit me.

I had a hazy Idea that The Morris Plan loaned money on character, but I didn't know just what that meant.

But a visit to their building over on La Salle street changed my whole idea, when I found I could borrow $1,000 on my own name, secured only by the signatures of two of my good friends.

I certainly was impressed that borrowing money on character is a mighty practical proposition, and that it can be done on the Morris Plan without the rigmarole which I thought must be attached to such a transaction.

I learned that for the past six years the carpenter, the clergyman, the school teacher and clerk have been borrowing money for family running needs just the same as the manufacturer has been getting loans at the big national banks for his business.

It didn't require the proverbial ton of bricks to fall on me to make me realize that if The Morris Plan, right here in Chicago, had aided 70,000 people to the tune of $14,000,000, it was a pretty good way for me to borrow when I had a legitimate need.

The Morris Plan won't let any borrower stay in debt—a fellow starts paying back within a week or a month after he makes a loan and that installment idea is what appealed to me like everything."

PAN-AMERICAN PARLEY IN CHILE DRIFTS ON ROCKS

BY J. W. WHITE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BUENOS AIRES, March 17. —The last minute decision of the Argentine foreign minister not to attend the Pan-American conference at Santiago means that the conference will not be attended by the foreign minister of any important member of the Pan-American union except Chile, which is the host.

This unanimous absence of the directors of the foreign policies of the larger Latin-American countries still further lessens the already slight possibilities of the conference accomplishing anything worth while toward the solving of important inter-American questions.

It is unfortunate that Secretary of State Hughes is not able to go to Santiago. His short visit to Rio de Janeiro in connection with the Brazilian centennial caused a gratifying impression among the Brazilians and did more than anything else in recent years to create a favorable impression for the United States. The South American republics were planning to send their foreign ministers to meet Mr. Hughes. Such a meeting would have accomplished a great deal in a much needed direction.

It would have been of incalculable value to the United States to have had Mr. Hughes make a speech at Santiago to the foreign ministers similar to that which he made at the dedication of the American monument site in Rio de Janeiro, in which he denied the ever popular libel that the United States has imperialistic intentions and explained, in his own frank and convincing manner, the real ideals of the United States towards its Latin-American neighbors.

PYRAMIDS IN LAPLAND

STOCKHOLM, March 17. — [United Press.]—Remains of a very ancient civilization, much older than the Egyptians, have been found on the Kola peninsula in Lapland, between the Arctic ocean and the White sea.

This announcement was made today in a dispatch from Petrograd, which said a Russian expedition, led by Prof. Bartsenko, had just returned with news of the discovery.

Pyramid shaped tombs were found, and there were traces of dwellings and temples reared long before the days of Tut-Ankh-Amen.

SPLIT IN TARIFF BOARD HOLDS UP COMMODITY LIST

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[Special.]—On orders from the White House the tariff commission tonight recalled an announcement of the first formal investigations under flexible provisions of the Fordney-McCumber tariff law.

The announcement had been mimeographed and mailed to the newspapers for publication in Tuesday morning's papers when word was received from one of the White House secretaries which caused its withdrawal. Employés of the commission were able to intercept the documents in the post-office.

Split in Commission.

William S. Culbertson, vice chairman of the commission, who has been at odds with other Republican members over policies for several months, is understood to have been responsible for the sudden intervention by the White House. While commission members would not talk of the situation, it was learned that his protests had caused Judson C. Welliver, a White House secretary, to request that action be held up until President Harding can be communicated with.

It is understood that the announcement contained a list of seventeen commodities. The inquiries were to be based upon applications filed by manufacturers and importers, about two-thirds of the applications having been for increases in duties.

Mr. Culbertson, ever since the passage of the present law last September, has endeavored to persuade the commission to initiate broad investigations covering important groups of commodities with a view to bringing about a scientific revision of duties. The two Republican members appointed by President Harding, Thomas O. Marvin, the chairman, and William Burgess, have desired to proceed more slowly, acting only upon urgent applications.

Mr. Culbertson, while a Republican, is a holdover from the Wilson administration and his views have not been in accord with the protectionist wing of the party with which Mr. Marvin and Mr. Burgess are aligned.

Consulted with President.

Mr. Marvin and Mr. Culbertson held conferences independently with President Harding prior to his departure for Florida. It was Mr. Marvin's understanding that the commission should proceed with its program of ordering investigations on urgent applications. Mr. Culbertson's understanding was that the President proposed to give consideration to the entire question of policy upon his return.

If the stand of Mr. Marvin is approved the original program will be carried out. Otherwise it is expected that the entire matter will go over until after the President returns from Florida.

CHANG TAO LIN'S MOBILIZED ARMY WORRIES PEKING

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, March 17.—Chang Tso-lin has concentrated troops north of Shanhaikwan. It is stated that they are not intended for an invasion, but they are causing uneasiness in Peking. Chang Tso-lin is bringing his troops no farther than was permitted under the armistice of last spring, while the Chihli army also is observing the terms.

Chang Tso-lin's movements are intended purely as a diversion, thus gaining aid for Sun Yat Sen, who is seeking to regain control in the south.

Sun Chuang Wang Advances.

Sun Chuang Wang, whom Wu Pei Fu has recommended for the military directorship of Fukien, is continuing to advance unopposed and the progress of all Wu's columns is such that President Li Yuan Hung is expected to issue a mandate denouncing Sun Yat Sen.

Wants to Be Sure of Ground.

The president has been delaying until he is sure that Sun Yat Sen has been completely outmaneuvered, since a report persists that Chang Tso-Lin will take advantage of the mandate by openly declaring for Sun Yat Sen.

In anticipation of this, Gen. Feng Yuh Siang, a Christian, has quit a hospital before a wound from an operation had healed and has resumed command of his army of 16,000 men for the Peking government.

Koo to Go to London.

Wellington Koo has consented to return to London as Chinese minister there, his acts as foreign minister thus being vindicated.

Although all China is pressed for money, with limited paper notes being enforced by Honan and Hupeh provinces, the temper of the government seems to be to carry on reunification by force and then to appeal to the powers for a reorganization loan.

Hughes Will Address Conference on Drug Evil

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Hughes has agreed to address a conference of government officials, scientists and social workers, which will meet in Washington early in May to consider ways and means of combating the drug evil in the United States, it was learned at the state department today. The conference is expected to last at least two days, and May 3 and 4 have been tentatively set as the date for convening it.

3 BANDITS SHOT AFTER TACOMA REIGN OF TERROR

Tacoma, Wash., March 17.—[United Press.]—Three bandits, all wounded, are in jail at Buckley, following their capture today after an attempt to rob the Northern Pacific railroad passenger train at South Prairie.

The bandits arrived at the station just as the train stopped. E. G. Goin, station agent, A. J. Enright, conductor, and twelve passengers were lined up on the platform by two of the bandits while the third searched the express car. C. E. Goin, express messenger, had hidden $15,000.

Unable to locate the money the bandits jumped into their automobile and sped toward Buckley, where they were met by a fusilade. The driver and one of the other bandits was wounded. They were captured shortly afterward. The third bandit took to the woods and was captured shortly before noon after he had been shot through the shoulder.

STEAMSHIP LINE OFFICER SUES U. S. SHIPPING BOARD

New York, March 17.—Phillip Manson, an official of the Pacific and Eastern Steamship company, Inc., today filed suit in Supreme court for $1,500,000 damages against the United States shipping board, United States Emergency Fleet corporation, and others, alleging that they had injured his name and that some of them had conspired to prevent his lines from getting steamships allocated to him. He also alleged that he had been falsely and scurrilously attacked, orally and in writing.

No Basis for Suit.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—Records of the shipping board show no transaction with Phillip Manson of New York which could be used by the latter as the basis of the suit for $1,000,000 filed by him, officials of the board declared tonight. They asserted that Manson had made no application for allocation of government tonnage and that his individual ability or integrity had never been brought before the board in any other way.

Paddleford Divorce Suit Teems with Sensations

Los Angeles, Cal., March 17.—[Special.]—An amended divorce complaint, bristling with charges of a sensational nature and revealing hitherto unpublished episodes in the career of his wife, was filed today by Dr. George E. Paddleford of Chicago and Los Angeles against Genevieve M. Paddleford. The amended complaint paints Mrs. Paddleford as a former "jail bird," and says she made him a social outcast. In addition, Dr. Paddleford, a wealthy oil man, charges that his wife was intimate with a number of men.

CLOTHING UNION WILL OPEN BANK IN N. Y. APRIL 14

New York, March 17.—Organization of the Amalgamated Bank of New York, sponsored by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, was announced today by Sidney Hillman, president of the union.

The new bank will begin business April 14 in Union square with a capital stock and surplus of $300,000. The stock will be owned exclusively by union members, Mr. Hillman stated. Dividends will be limited to 10 per cent annually, and additional profits will be shared with the depositors, he said. Raymond L. Hedheffer of Chicago will be president. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America opened the Amalgamated Trust and Savings bank in Chicago about eight months ago.

U. S. WILL CHECK 40,000 FAILING TO PAY INCOME TAX

Delinquents in Chicago District Face Fines.

Washington, D. C., March 17.—[Special.]—Treasury officials are confident the income tax returns for the first quarter of 1923 will exceed $435,000,000. A checking up and correcting of figures may bring the total to $450,000,000. The surprise over the showing made by strictly agricultural states in the early figures grows. Even the lower figure is $100,000,000 above the collections for March, 1922.

More than 40,000 residents of the Chicago internal revenue district, comprised of the thirty northern counties of Illinois, are delinquent in scheduling their incomes and payment of their income taxes, according to estimates made public at the federal building yesterday.

Investigation of the delinquents will begin Monday under direction of Chief Revenue Agent E. E. Alden and his present staff, the members of which will report on as many cases as possible before April 17, when examinations will be held for 200 new agents who will be sworn in immediately upon qualifying and placed on the work.

Penalties Are Faced.

Under the income tax law, taxable persons who failed to schedule and pay properly are subject to action under two clauses providing penalties. For failure to make return on time, a fine not exceeding $1,000 and an additional penalty of 25 per cent of the total amount of the tax is provided. Failure to pay tax when due is punishable by a penalty of 5 per cent of the tax due but unpaid, plus interest at the rate of 1 per cent a month during the period in which it remains unpaid.

According to tabulations of schedules filed up to 10 o'clock yesterday morning 39,700 more returns were listed this year than last. Comparative figures are as follows:

	1922. Mar 1. to 15 incl.	1923. Mar. 1 to 15 incl.
Under $5,000 income, full paid	120,000	140,000
Under $5,000 income, part paid	28,300	36,000
Over $5,000 income, full paid	10,700	13,500
Over $5,000 income, part paid	12,800	19,200

$5,000,000 Jump Over 1922.

Total deposits up till noon yesterday were more than $26,000,000, indicating that when extensions and late mail receipts are taken into consideration the total will be more than $33,000,000—over $5,000,000 in excess of corresponding figures a year ago.

CONAN DOYLE PLANS TO SHOW SKEPTICS A VIEW OF SPOOKDOM

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—An attempt to offer absolute proof of spiritual phenomena is planned by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who will arrive in this country on April 3 and will deliver lectures on recent psychic achievements at Carnegie hall on April 6 and 8.

In spite of the attempts of recent skeptics to show that ectoplasm bears an extraordinary resemblance to chiffon, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle will try to prove the genuineness of that substance.

Sir Conan Doyle has been in correspondence with the Scientific American, which has offered to pay $5,000 for proof of psychic phenomena and will probably assist in practical tests at which mediums will attempt to prove their powers under severe conditions.

GOES TO CLINCH IDENTIFICATION OF EDDIE M'BRIDE

Following the identification yesterday of the "Geneva torture murder" victim as Eddie McBride, notorious gunman and escaped convict, by Lieut. William L. Stapleton of the Maxwell street police station, Sheriff W. E. Orr of Kane county launched a search of the gangster's Chicago haunts in an effort to apprehend the slayers.

"Lieut. Stapleton identified the victim as soon as he looked at him," said Sheriff Orr. "I understand now why the man was tortured and why his hands were cut off."

Chief of Police Fitzmorris, to make the identification more complete, sent a squad of detectives from the detective bureau to Geneva to view the body, including Lieut. Alex. Jensen, who had arrested McBride several times.

STATE ASSEMBLY RECORD—"NEEDS A NEW NEEDLE"

Talk and Politics Called Only Achievements.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Springfield, Ill., March 17.—[Special.]—The last two weeks in the Illinois legislature have gone far towards bearing out predictions that the history of the Fifty-third general assembly will tell the story of much political sharpshooting and little real constructive legislation.

Little has been done, and leaders admit that little more may be expected. The political situation, from the viewpoint of politicians, hardly will permit it. Conditions might be summed up about like this:

The Democrats, looking ahead to 1924, have adopted a policy to heckle, annoy, and violently attack the party in power at every opportunity, not forgetting that factional troubles have caused Republican embarrassment.

Glad Small Is G. O. P.

In the words of a Democratic house leader, "Small is a Republican governor; he doesn't belong to us, and it's fun to watch those fellows on the other side of the aisle act under fire."

The Democrats, a virile minority in the house, are constantly reminding the Republicans of some of the conditions due to two years of Small in Springfield and eight years of Lundin-Thompsonism in Chicago. Republican vigilantes of both houses have adopted an attitude of watchful waiting. They assert that their main purpose in this session is to watch for and oppose any vicious legislation that might appear.

One Path to One Goal.

Gov. Small has decided he will confine his program virtually to his $100,000,000 road bond proposal and related highway legislation and not attempt much of anything else. He is banking everything on his road propaganda to carry him through again in 1924 and by making few proposals he hopes to avoid as much trouble as possible.

Thus the present session is simply a game of politics. The game is half over, but most of the moves are yet to be made.

Devine Curious to Know.

The Devine resolution calling for an accounting of expenditures of 1921 appropriations and the Barber bill requiring the state auditor to publish the annual pay rolls are still to be settled.

To date the legislature has refused to give Chicago its full share of representation in Springfield by the refusal of the house to reapportion the senatorial districts. The house has demanded an investigation of Herrin. A half dozen emergency measures have been passed. That is almost the complete record thus far.

50 YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. William Gilow, residents of Chicago for fifty years and now residing at Lombard, Ill., on Friday celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Friends and the family, including three sons and daughters and five grandchildren, were dinner guests. Mr. and Mrs. Gilow were married in Chicago. He is 84 years old and Mrs. Gilow is 74.

[Gibson, Sykes & Fowler Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Muller of Arlington Heights, Ill., have just celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. They were married in Arlington Heights on March 14, 1873, and have lived there continuously ever since. Mr. Muller is 73 years old and his wife 71. They have five children and six grandchildren, all of whom were present at the celebration.

[Biron Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence H. Dunbar celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at their home at 1841 Cuyler avenue next Tuesday. They were married at South Bend, Ind., on March 20, 1873, coming to Chicago a few years later.

SMALL'S ROADS PLAN TOO COSTLY AND VAGUE: MILLS

Senator's Analysis Bares Faults of Program.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Springfield, Ill., March 17.—[Special.]—An analysis of Gov. Small's proposed $100,000,000 hard road bond issue and its relation to present methods and the future outlook for highway construction was given today by Senator Epler C. Mills [Rep., Cass] in an open letter to Illinois farmers. Senator Mills said:

"There are $48,000,000 unsold bonds and $1,500,000 cash in the roads fund. The license fees from automobiles for the next three years will amount to $27,000,000, according to estimates recently made. These figures, summed together with $7,500,000 of federal aid funds, will produce $79,000,000, all of which will be available before 1926.

Figures Tell the Story.

"The incompleted 3,056 miles at $20,000 per mile will cost $91,680,000. If estimates of the state highway department are correct, it will take, in addition, $5,000,000 for bridges, $3,000,000 for maintenance, and $3,480,000 for interest money. This gives us a total of $103,160,000 needed to complete the present system of 4,076 miles.

"Assuming that it is our object to finish the present system by 1926, we can easily figure the amount necessary. Deducting the available funds, $79,000,000, from $103,160,000, there remains $24,160,000.

"Senator C. F. Buck [Rep., Monmouth] figures that his proposed bond issue of $30,000,000 will adequately cover this deficiency. However, it must be remembered, that all depends upon the ability of the administration to construct 1,000 miles each year. The division of highways proposed to build 1,000 miles in 1922, but only 546 miles were actually constructed by the state.

Cannot Be Accomplished.

"Some authorities maintain that it is utterly impossible for any state to lay 3,000 miles of pavement in three years. If that is true, then it will make no difference how much money is available by way of an additional bond issue before 1926.

"I do not believe that the maintenance of these hard surfaced roads has been given sufficient consideration. No one will deny that this is of paramount importance.

"After a study of the proposition, with due regard to what has been accomplished and what we may expect to accomplish in the next few years, it appears that the entire matter can be summed up as follows:

"First — If the $100,000,000 bond issue is adopted it will bring the bonded indebtedness of Illinois up to nearly $350,000,000.

Who Will Buy Bonds?

"Second—The governor's literature contends that these bonds will not be a lien on property of state. If this be true, no market will be found for the bonds.

"Third—We will commit ourselves to a program that may be financially and scientifically wrong for road construction during the next generation.

"Fourth—This program has not adequately devised a system of 'feeders' to trunk lines, or 'farm to market' roads for 'dirt' farmers.

"Fifth—No plan for maintenance of the hard surfaced roads has yet been offered which looks far enough ahead to contemplate the repair of damage done by heavy trucks.

"Sixth—Extensive systems of hard surfaced roads are in their infancy with us in the middle west, and the mode of construction of the short lines and subsidiary lines has not yet been determined upon. By 1926 new ideas along this line may have sprung into existence.

Auto Licenses Inadequate.

"Seventh—We are embarking on a scheme of road building for the future that is bound to increase taxation because the auto licenses will never pay for these bonds.

"Eighth—Last of all, it seems to me that we are rushing madly into a new program before we have kept faith with the citizens of Illinois by completing the $60,000,000 bond issue of 1918."

FOREIGN TRAVEL ENTANGLES MANY MEN OF CONGRESS

Members of Both Houses Have Wanderlust.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 16.—[Special.]—The American congress is now scattered to the four corners of the world as never before in the history of the country.

Many senators already either have gone or are planning to go to Europe. Others have gone to the West Indies and Central and South America. They expect to return loaded with knowledge on pressing international problems that undoubtedly will come before them next session.

This congressional wanderlust is the result of interest in international affairs which has been growing since the world war began. Treaties of various kinds are constantly coming before the senate calling for wide knowledge of foreign situations for intelligent action. The long recess supplies the first opportunity for it since the new international questions began to arise, and members who in bygone days would have hurried back home to mend their political fences are now seeking to familiarize themselves with world affairs.

Many Senators in Europe.

Senators already gone to Europe are Johnson [Rep., Cal.], Underwood [Dem., Ala.], Spencer [Rep., Mo.], Moses [Rep., N. H.], and Wheeler [Dem., Mont.]. Senator Borah contemplates a trip, and Senator Ladd [Rep., N. D.] is organizing a party to visit Russia, Germany, and the Scandinavian countries.

Representative Beedy [Rep., Me.] will sail tomorrow for Russia. Numerous other congressmen plan to go abroad during the summer. A large party, particularly members of the naval affairs committees of the two houses, is now in Panama and will travel extensively through the West Indies during the spring.

Much interest is attached to the tour of Senator Johnson. He stated that he was merely taking a vacation, but it is generally believed he has the additional purpose of collecting first hand information to fortify himself for a fight against the administration's foreign policy, which he contends is leading the United States into the league of nations through the back door.

Senator Moses, who entertains the same views as Senator Johnson, is likewise sizing things up at close range for the expected fight over joining the international court of justice.

Underwood Hunting a Plank.

Senator Underwood is expected upon his return to take an active part in international questions in the senate. The presidential bee is again buzzing in the Underwood bonnet, as it did in 1912, and it is beleived he is preparing to announce a policy of American participation in European affairs which the Democrats can adopt as their principal plank in 1924.

Russia is one of the main objectives of the congressional travelers, largely because it is expected that the question of Russian recognition will be one of the livest issues in the next session.

LEGION NOTES

Foreman have requested the Chicago Real Estate board to assist them in finding suitable quarters for the establishment of headquarters for certain units of the Illinois National Guard in the north central business district, in the Wilson avenue district, and the Woodlawn district. Hursen Will Be There inside of 30 minutes

There was a time, before the days of the "Hursen revolution" in funeral direction, when people would call the "nearest undertaker." In those days there was no use going beyond the immediate neighborhood. Service, such as it was, was the same everywhere. Charges were excessive everywhere. There was little or no choice between undertakers.

Hursen, appearing on the scene, changed it all in 24 hours! It was a revolution and a revelation! Hursen was called from everywhere, from all parts of Chicago, and from the suburbs, many miles away. Distance began to mean nothing. It means nothing today to those who know the unusual elegance, refinement, generosity and low cost of Hursen service.

Neighborhood acquaintance means little today, when the people demand something better than they have ever before been able to obtain—and at a lower cost than they have ever been made to pay. Hursen, and Hursen only, has been able to supply this demand from the people of Chicago and vicinity—in all things pertaining to funeral direction.

As a result, "Hursen's" is today the largest and most remarkable institution of its kind in America. There are three Hursen establishments in Chicago, each a funeral home, built like a mansion. Does Hursen elegance of service, unsurpassed beauty of automobile equipment, and unexcelled quality of everything furnished at from one-third to one-half the usual charges made elsewhere mean anything to you? A call from anywhere to any one of the three Hursen establishments will bring service within 30 minutes. Call Hursen, of course!

GARY SHERIFF'S "FEE APPETITE" TOLD BY JUDGE

Letter Mailed in Chicago Threatens Death.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 17.—[Special.]—That Sheriff William H. Olds of Lake county attempted to influence him to sentence prisoners to the county jail instead of Indiana state farm, so the sheriffs could obtain fees for feeding them was the testimony in federal court today of Allen P. Twyman, judge of the East Chicago city court.

He was a witness in the Lake county liquor conspiracy case, in which sixty-three defendants, including a number of public officials, are defendants. Judge Twyman said when he assumed office he ordered prisoners to the state farm instead of to jail and that the sheriff asked him to change this policy. He said he refused.

Liked Mechanical Prisoner.

On another occasion, the judge testified, the sheriff asked him to send a prisoner to jail instead of to the farm because the prisoner was a good mechanic and could work on Olds' car. Judge Twyman said he refused.

Deputy sheriffs were numerous in East Chicago, the witness testified, and he said he never saw some of them performing any duty.

John Montgomery, a prohibition agent, testified he arrested and obtained the conviction of Peter Koljanen of South Chicago, and that he later arrested Koljanen while the latter was supposed to be in jail.

Koljanen was put on the stand and testified he was given a five day leave from jail to attend to some contracting work and that he had finally served his entire sentence of thirty days.

King Blaz I. of Gary.

At the opening of court Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger warned the jury to pay no attention to newspaper stories of a threatening letter received Friday by Homer Elliott, United States district attorney.

No special precautions to provide for his own safety will be taken by Elliott, he said today, following receipt of a letter Friday threatening him with death unless he dropped prosecution of the case.

The letter, postmarked Chicago, read: "Unless you stop you had better take out life insurance for your family. You will get the same thing Mante got."

Starsak said that he feared death at the hands of Harm and Hellman.

ROMANCE IN NEWS

MRS. EMMET SWISSHOLM.
[Koehne Photo.]

True life romance lurked in the Medill School of Journalism's news laboratory while Beatrice Johnston, 21, daughter of George S. Johnston, 624 Lincoln street, Evanston, studied there beside Emmet Swisshelm, a fellow senior from Louisville, Ky. Their marriage, solemnized Feb. 21, was revealed Wednesday by Mrs. Swisshelm when she departed for Lima, O., to join her husband, who is employed on a newspaper there.

U. OF C. TO GET MANUSCRIPTS OF 6 CENTURIES AGO

Rare Collection Begun by Alumni Council.

Five rare manuscripts, worth $9,000, will be presented to the University of Chicago on Tuesday at the one hundred and twenty-eighth convocation. They will be presented through the Alumni council of the university, which has a comprehensive plan to furnish the university with rare and old manuscripts for the purpose of research. The council is raising a $100,000 manuscript fund.

One of the manuscripts, the "Novellae Constitutiones or Authenticum of Justinian," valued at $5,000, is a relic of the Bologna school of scribes of about the middle of the thirteenth century. Its fine workmanship and rich illumination indicates that it was executed for some prince, very possibly the Emperor Frederick II.

Shows Eclipse in 1400.

A second gift, "Liber de Novem Scientiis and Sermones Cisterciennses," consists of two manuscripts bound together, written about 1400, apparently at the Abbey of Melsa, Yorkshire, England. One part includes several astronomical diagrams, some illustrating an eclipse of the moon which presupposes the roundness of the earth. The second part contains old folklore.

Another manuscript, "Magna Carta and Statutes," was written in the first half of the fourteenth century, a kind of pocket edition of the great charter and principal statutes.

The "Miraculae Sanctae Virginis and Others" is an eleventh century manuscript decorated with a remarkable painting of the Virgin and Child, grotesques and initials.

Writs of 1320 in Copy.

The fifth manuscript, "Registrum Brevium" of about 1320, is a collection of writs, written in the English court hand, which illustrates changes in law during the reigns of Edward I. and II. This collection contains a much larger number of writs than any that has been published.

"We believe that the existence of a center of this kind of research would add greatly to Chicago's civic development and fame," said Frank McNair, chairman of the fund committee.

DEFIES PASTOR TO DEBATE.

Taking exception to statements questioning the deity of Jesus made in a public letter by the Rev. J. W. Vallentyne of Unity church, Oak Park, the Rev. C. K. Orsborn of the River Forest Presbyterian church has challenged the author to a debate to take place this afternoon in Unity temple at 3 o'clock.

BANKERS URGE 'PAY AS YOU GO' HIGHWAY BASIS

Illinois should be put on a "pay as you go" basis in construction of highways after the present $60,000,000 bond issue is spent, according to a resolution adopted by the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Banking, embracing more than 3,000 bankers in this city and surrounding towns.

The resolutions voice a protest against Gov. Small's proposed $100,000,000 road bond issue, declaring that "a survey of the situation shows that there are sufficient funds on hand to proceed with the good roads program," and that "the maximum mileage practicable can be constructed without burdening tax payers with the $50,000,000 interest charges of the bond issue."

Teachers' Federation Again Elects Mary Abbe

President Mary Abbe of the Chicago Teachers' federation and all other officers were reelected yesterday afternoon with the exception of Ida Schiffin, financial secretary. Miss Schiffin declined to take the office again because of ill health and Elizabeth C. Buhman was elected to succeed her.

SCHOOL REFORM UP TO TEACHERS, SAYS CHICAGOAN

Should Be Remade from Bottom Up.

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—Reform of the educational system of the country must come from the cooperation of the teachers, and not as the work of any private foundation, said Dr. William B. Owen, president of the National Educational association and head of the Chicago Normal school, today in an address before the association at the Hotel Commodore.

WILLIAM B. OWEN.

"The biggest thing that the teachers of America can do," said Dr. Owen, "is to make an impression upon America as human beings. The public praises us without limit and ignores us continually. That is our fault. What we need to combat this attitude is organized self-respect.

"Cast your eye over America in life. Who is going to reform our educational system—the bar associations, the medical associations, the private foundations? There is only one possibility for improvement and that is by those who are within education because they choose to be.

"I long to see the time come when for a few cents a teacher can get the benefit of the advice of a staff of educational scientists who will devote their entire time to the study of educational problems.

"The greatest problem before the American public school teacher is that of remaking the school from the bottom up. I think the professional management should go more into the hands of the grade teachers."

STATE WITNESS DENIES HE SOLD ROCK ISLAND HOP

Rock Island, Ill., March 17.—[Special.]—Cy Hazlett, main witness for the defense in the trial of Mayor Schriver, ex-Chief of Police Cox, and Lawrence Pedigo, charged with conspiracy to protect vice, flatly denied he had ever sold dope. It was the contention of the defense that Hazlett headed a powerful dope ring. The defense also tried to show that Hazlett had been promised immunity for testifying for the prosecution.

With sixty witnesses to be heard, the prediction is that the state will not be able to finish the introduction of its evidence in less than two weeks. Dan Drost, former editor of the Rock Island News, Looney's paper, is expected to be the next witness.

424 BOY BOXERS IN TRIBUNE TOURNEY

MICHIGAN WINS BIG TEN GAMES WITH 43½ POINTS

REINKE SETS UP NEW RECORD IN HALF MILE RACE

Illinois Second and Iowa Third.

T/BLE OF POINTS

Michigan	43½	Northwestern	8
Illinois	21½	Purdue	4½
Iowa	16½	Ohio	2
Chicago	13	Wisconsin	1

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Scoring points in eight of the ten events, the evenly balanced team of Michigan, coached by the veteran Steve Farrell, won the thirteenth annual indoor track and field games of the Western conference in Patten gymnasium last night with a total of 43½ points. Illinois was second with 21½ points and Iowa third with 16½ markers.

STEVE FARRELL.

The meet was featured by the record smashing performance of O. A. Reinke of Michigan, who stepped the half mile in 1:58. The Wolverine laid back of the pack and permitted Telford of Northwestern to set pace for three-quarters of the distance. Reinke gradually crept up and, when he got the gun for the last lap, let go with a killing sprint and won the event by fully ten yards. It was one of the sparkling performances of the meet. The old record was 1:58 2-5, held by H. N. Yates of Illinois.

Tie Record in Dash.

In the 60 yard dash, the conference indoor record of :05 2-5 was tied by three fliers. L. G. Wittman of Michigan tied the mark in his preliminary heat, Bob Ayres, Illinois, did the same thing in the second semi-final, and Dehart Hubbard of Michigan tied the mark in the final heat, which he won in a blanket finish.

Individual honors went to Dehart Hubbard, the dusky skinned athlete of Michigan. Hubbard won the dash and finished third in the 60 yard high hurdles. This gave him a total of 7 points. Several athletes scored 5 points by winning first places.

Spill Beats Illini Relay Team.

What promised to result in one of the most interesting races of the night was spoiled when Fitch of Illinois fell on the third lap of the one mile relay while leading Brookins of Iowa. In some unaccountable manner Fitch's toe caught in either the track or pole and he fell to the track while the flying Brookins went by.

There were a few upsets, the most prominent being the defeat of Ayres of Illinois in the final of the dash by Hubbard of Michigan. In another event Brickman of Chicago nosed out Johnson, Illinois, in the final of the 60 yard high hurdles, while Wilson, fleet quarter miler of Iowa, bowed to defeat in the final of the quarter by Holding Hagen of Northwestern. In the other events the athletes performed as expected.

Krogh Wins in Mile.

Egil Krogh of Chicago took the mile run after a spectacular race. He came from behind on the last quarter mile and ran away from the field. Isbell of Michigan did the same thing in the two mile, lapping a majority of the field.

Eight of the ten teams broke into the point column. Indiana and Minnesota failed to score, while Chicago and Northwestern did better than was generally expected.

Following are the summaries:

TRACK EVENTS.

60 yard dash—First semi-final heat—Won by Hubbard, Michigan; Brookins, Iowa, second. Time, :05 3-5.

One mile run—Won by Krogh, Chicago; Noll, Iowa, second; Wells, Illinois, third; Kilpatrick, Iowa State, fourth. Time, 4:31 2-5.

Quarter mile run—Won by Hagen, Northwestern; Wilson, Iowa, second; Illinois, second; Wilson, Iowa, third; Bastis, Illinois, fourth. Time, :52 2-5.

Sixty yard high hurdles—Final heat—Won by Brickman, Chicago; Crawford, Iowa, second; Hubbard, Michigan, third; Johnson, Illinois, fourth. Time, :07 4-5.

Pole vault—Won by Brooker, Michigan, 12 feet 6 inches; Collins, Illinois, and Hubbard, Illinois, tied for second, 12 feet 3 inches; Prosser, Michigan, fourth, 12 feet.

Unparalleled 62 Aids Hagen Win Golf Meet

Bellcair Heights, Fla., March 17.—Walter Hagen added another title to his belt by winning the Florida west coast open championship with a total of 276 for the four rounds, one of the lowest marks ever made in an open tournament.

Alec Smith of Shenecossett and Laurie Ayton of Evanston Gldf club tied for second, ten strokes behind. Hagen performed a notable feat when he scored a 62 in the morning round, over the 5,782 yard course.

Hagen Has 62 Round.

It was the lowest round Hagen ever has made in or out of competition and is probably a world's record for this length of course. His card was as follows:

Par	4	4	3	5	4	4	4	4	3	—35
Hagen	4	4	3	5	3	4	4	4	4	—33
Par	5	5	3	4	3	4	4	3	3	—34—69
Hagen	4	4	3	5	2	4	4	2	3	—29—62

Hagen took twenty-five putts on the round and on nine greens had but one putt.

Hagen looked to be out of the running in the first round of play yesterday, requiring 75 over the short course. He, however, made a strong comeback during the afternoon round and turned in a 69.

Here Are Leaders' Cards.

The leading cards:

WEBB JAY NOSES OUT GAR WOOD IN MIAMI RACE

Miami, Fla., March 17.—Webb Jay of Chicago, with his Sue J., runabout, nosed out Gar Wood of Detroit, piloting Atlantan Jr., owned by W. J. Dunnally of Atlanta, in the last twenty-five feet and won the ten mile runabout class race in the feature event of the annual Miami midwinter regatta here today. The two boats were side by side practically the entire distance.

It was an unlucky day for Gar Wood, for he was beaten in three races. He was fourth in the special six mile handicap express cruiser event when he had to slow down to avoid colliding with another boat that missed him by inches. One spill occurred during the afternoon, Miss Peggy II., C. R. Pease of Miami, overturning in an effort to pass Sue J. Pease and his mechanician were thrown overboard, but were picked up by a patrol boat.

McTIGUE BEATS SIKI FOR TITLE IN TAME FIGHT

Gets Verdict After Twenty Rounds.

GIBBONS AFTER M'TIGUE

THESE fight fellows refuse to let the McTigue-Siki battle become cold before they get busy with the winner. Eddie Kane, manager of Tom Gibbons, last night called up to say that he immediately would get on the cable and offer the Irish lad $30,000 to meet Gibbons. Eddie didn't say where he would stage the battle, but East Chicago isn't so many miles away and summer is coming.

DUBLIN, March 17.—[Tribune Radio.]—Mike McTigue, the Irish-American, won the light heavyweight championship of the world here tonight when at the end of twenty tame rounds he was given the decision over Battling Siki, the Senegalese.

BATTLING SIKI.

Despite the disappointing nature of the contest from the spectators' point of view, the new champion was acclaimed vociferously by his countrymen when his right hand in token of victory. They had backed him illerally to win, but this was more from patriotic ardor than in belief the Celt had more than an outside chance.

As a battle the contest left a great deal to be desired. There was much swinging and fancy footwork, but no knockdowns, and at the end of the twenty rounds neither fighter showed any particular superiority. McTigue stayed wholly on the defensive for the first fifteen rounds, leaving it to Siki to make such indication of a fight as he desired.

Mike Takes Aggressive.

At the start of the sixteenth Siki was plainly in distress from his efforts to force the fighting, and it was neces sary for his seconds to push him from his corner to resume the fray. McTigue thereupon stepped out and took the aggressive. In the seventeenth three hard rights to the jaw slowed up Siki and for the remainder of the bout he was kept busy on the receiving end of the Irishman's right and left swings.

Whatever advantage there was to the battle lay with the black man until McTigue opened up. Thereafter he piled up points rapidly, although his blows lacked the steam to muss up Siki.

McTigue's defensive tactics, which so nearly cost him the fight, were explained when he was taken to a hospital and an examination revealed his right thumb had been broken. This occurred in the fourth round and accounted for his persistent use of his left hand.

Bomb Injures Children.

The chief excitement attendant upon the bout was in the possibility the Republican irreconcilables would carry out their threats to prevent it. A bomb was exploded near the Scala theater, where the contest was held, just as the principals entered the ring. Two children were injured and windows in the neighborhood shattered, but the rumble of the blast failed to do more than cause a momentary stir of uneasiness among the spectators.

The theater was surrounded by uniformed metropolitan policemen and soldiers with fixed bayonets who prevented any other untoward incident. Every person who entered was searched for firearms and explosives.

Georges Carpentier, who was dethroned as world's light heavyweight champion by the Senegalese last September, was at the ringside and was cheered roundly when he was introduced to the crowd and challenged the winner.

By his victory McTigue becomes holder of the European heavyweight championship in addition to the world's light heavyweight title.

SEEKS BOUT WITH BECKETT.

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—Joe Jacobs, manager of Mike McTigue, announced today immediately upon receiving word that McTigue had beaten Battling Siki for the world's light heavyweight title in Dublin, that he would leave for Ireland as soon as arrangements could be made, probably early next week.

"McTigue has several profitable theatrical engagements awaiting him in Europe now," said Joe. "We'll take them first, and after that Mike will be ready to defend his title against any one in the world. First we want to take on Joe Beckett in London. After the Beckett affair I expect to get McTigue on with Carpentier in Paris."

Los Angeles, Cal., March 17.—[Special.]—Stinging the ball at the proper time and getting splendid pitching from George Stueland, Fred Fussell, and Ed Stauffer, the Cubs again conquered the Angels, 5 to 3, in the second game of the series. Bernie Friberg once more shone, two of his three hits being factors in the victory.

The work of Stueland and Fussell on the slab was encouraging, for they shut out the Angels with three hits in seven innings, Stueland going five and Fussell two. Stauffer was sent in after the Cubs had their five runs.

Stauffer Yields Three Runs.

Stauffer was a bit unsteady and let the Angels score three runs on two bases on balls and a single. He was not thoroughly warmed up when he went in, but between rounds he limbered up some more and stopped his opponents dead in the ninth. He was put in trouble by an error by Adams in the eighth, after which he walked two men, filling the bases. Then he found the plate and disposed of two before Chuck Deal, once a Cub, laced out a single, giving the Angels their third and last point.

Adams Cavorts at Short.

Despite the fact nearly all the youngsters were in the Cub batting order, the club gave the fans a legitimate taste of major league ball.

Adams, playing short after the first round, came up with two brilliant plays and helped to clinch the game with a walk, a steal and a sacrifice fly. Kettle Wirts gave an indication of his ambition by catching the nine rounds, being the first of the Cub backstops to do that this year. He worked smartly with the pitchers and grabbed off a base on balls and a single.

The Los Angeles series closes tomorrow. Grover Alexander will take his initial workout on the rubber. He will start and probably go three rounds. Nick Dumovitch, big local favorite, will pitch the rest of the distance.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

AMATEUR BOXING TOURNEY.

IF boxing was a good thing for our young men in army training camps, why is it a bad thing for young men now?

If two young men engage in a scientific sparring contest for points, how in the name of common sense can you call it a prize fight?

The Tribune Athletic association thinks boxing is a good thing now. It differentiates between modern boxing and the old brutal bare knuckle fights. It thinks the law so differentiates. That is why it is staging a great amateur tournament this week.

There will be blows struck. Some chap may get a bloody nose. A clip on the chin may even send some participant to temporary dreamland. That's part of the game. But whatever happens will be out in the open, with no unfair advantages, no foul tactics, no violation of sporting ethics.

No sport of bodily contact, even football, calls for such reliance on self, such perfect self-control, and such attuning of mind and muscle as does boxing. It is not a sport for effeminates, but it's a sport whose general adoption would result in fewer effeminates.

More than 400 young men wish to win honors as the best in their respective classes. More spectators than can be accommodated wish to view the contests. Why should they be prevented from doing so?

The Wake knows of no reason. See you at Ashland Boulevard auditorium Wednesday night!

The Cross-Roads Store.

In the years that have fled o'er my wayward head
Since I left the humble shack
By the dusty lane through the nodding grain
I have often started back.

But there came the thought of the changes wrought
In the treasured things of yore,
And of friends who'd gone, as the years rolled on,
Along with the cross-roads store.

The motor crane of our modern days
Has closed its door for aye,
Where we used to doze through the winter snows
And talk the time away.
When Hobson's feat blocked the Spanish fleet
We enacted it o'er and o'er;
The war was won, sans ship or gun,
By the gang at the cross-roads store.

San Antonio, Tex., March 17.—[Special.]—A wild heave enabled Kid Gleason's White Sox to win the opening engagement of their twenty game spring training series with the world champions New York Giants here today, 6 to 4. The slip was committed by Fred Johnson, a rookie right hand pitcher, and occurred with the count deadlocked at 4-all in the seventh.

With one gone, McClellan was spared by Bancroft's wild peg to first. Mostil drew a pass, and Johnson suddenly turned and heaved in the general direction of the keystone sack, which was inhabited only by McClellan. Both runners tallied.

Giants Outhit Hose.

McGraw's mob outhit the Gleasonites 11 to 9, but played ragged ball, making four errors.

Louie Rosenberg's clouting featured for the south siders. Willie Kamm's understudy peeled off three singles in four trials.

The Sox jumped out in front in the second inning. Sheely walked, was forced by Taylor, Rosenberg and Schalk singled and Taylor scored. A fast double play by Bancroft, Frisch and Kelly ended this spurt. Jimmy O'Connell, the $75,000 beauty, dropped Hooper's easy fly in center in the third and a sacrifice and infield out netted another run.

Blankenship passed Groh after two gone in the third and Frisch promptly combed a four sacker over the left field wall, tying the statistics. One down in the fourth, Kelly singled and stole, scoring when Hooper, after stopping Snyder's single, overthrew third base.

Johnson Is Generous.

The entry of Johnson into the melee in the fifth was marked by passes to Hooper and McClellan. Mostil singled, counting Hooper, and sacrifices by Elsh and Sheely sent McClellan homeward.

Mack replaced Blankenship in the sixth and after fanning Kelly was jarred for a single by Smith. Johnson doubled to center, scoring his battery mate.

The Sox and Giants meet again tomorrow.

EDDIE COLLINS OFF THIS WEEK FOR SOX CAMP

Philadelphia, Pa., March 17.—Eddie Collins, second baseman of the Chicago White Sox, has come to terms with President Comiskey and will leave for the club's training camp at Seguin next week.

"I had a conference with President Comiskey over the phone and we quickly came to terms," Collins said today. "I'll leave for the training camp either Monday or Tuesday."

LOUISVILLE MAN ACQUITTED IN GAMBLING CASE

Louisville, Ky., March 17.—Ed Alvey of Louisville, widely known among race track men, was acquitted in police court here today of the charge of operating a handbook. The court ruled that Alvey's books and papers which were obtained by the police in a raid on Alvey's offices Feb. 23, were secured without a search warrant and that therefore the alleged betting slips could not be used in evidence.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Four hundred and twenty-four amateurs, representing churches, universities, coleges, high schools, parks, playgrounds, and divers other athletic organizations, will compete in the Chicago amateur boxing championships to be conducted by the Tribune A. A. at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium on March 21, 22, 23, 26, 27, and 28.

These amateurs, who have waited for years to compete in a regularly conducted tournament, will not only contest for individual and team prizes, but by their exhibitions they will enlarge the fund which is to help take care of disabled veterans of the world war. All net proceeds will go into this fund, and officials of the Tribune A. A. will see to it that the money goes to the right cause.

More Interest than Ever.

It has been years since Chicago could boast of an amateur tourney open to all boxers who have not donned the gloves for money. Back in the old days there were a few tourneys, but none attracted the interest of this year's Tribune event. Even the Central A. A. U. championships fizzled out on some occasions because of the small entry list.

That the younger generation is in favor of boxing is shown beyond all question of doubt by the entry in the smaller classes. In each of the 112 and 118 pound classes, fifty-six amateurs will compete for the first three places in each division. The 126 pounds division, known as the featherweight class, has attracted a field of seventy, while the lightweight division has enrolled ninety-six. From this weight to the heavies the entry list decreases until the last class, heavyweight, is reached. Only sixteen big fellows will don the gloves in this class.

Work for the Growing Boy.

In the promotion of its Silver Skates Derby, bike races, and water carnival The Tribune has found that the younger boys are most enthusiastic. This is just the aim of The Tribune. It wants to do something for the little fellow who, sooner or later, must take the place of heroes of today on high school and college teams, not to mention those who will be members of the American team which will compete in the Olympic games in France in 1924.

The experienced athlete has enough done for him. If he is efficient he competes for an athletic club or rides a bike under the colors of organizations which see to it he receives the best competition. If he is a class A skater he is sent to different parts of the country to compete in sectional and national championships.

Little Fellow Out in Cold.

But the little fellow receives no such attention. He must follow in the wake of the hero as best he can. There is not an athletically inclined boy of today but who has an ideal. It may be the football player, the boxer, baseball player, track or field athlete, or performer in some other branch of athletic endeavor that the boy tries to emulate, and he should be given encouragement. This The Tribune is trying to do by promoting its many athletic events.

With such an array of athletic talent, boxing on each night will start promptly at 7:30 o'clock. Contestants must report as soon after 6 o'clock as possible to be weighed in and examined by physicians. One weighing in is all that will be necessary and the same is true of the physical examination.

Lighter Weights on Wednesday.

It has been decided to hold preliminary bouts in the 112, 118 and 126 pound classes on Wednesday, the opening night. Trials in the 133 and 147 pound classes will be held on Thursday night, while prelims in the remaining three divisions will be held on Friday night. It may be necessary to change this arrangement if boxing on any night is delayed. As the entry in the light heavyweight and heavyweight is not large, these two classes can be finished quickly.

In the preliminary rounds the boxers will engage in three two minute round bouts. Two pounds overweight will be allowed at weighing in time, but boxers over this weight must go up in the next class. Men prominent in the boxing world will act as officials, two shifts being required on each night to handle the event with the desired speed.

Report Early, Boys!

Boxers will aid materially in the elimination rounds by reporting, as stated above, in the desired classification. No delays will be tolerated and it will be up to the boys to be on hand promptly and report whenever their names or numbers are called.

Tickets for the show will be placed on sale tomorrow at 11 South Dearborn street, one of the offices of The Tribune company. The prices will be 50 cents, 75 cents, and $1, and only six tickets will be sold to any one person. All seats will be reserved.

From the prices it will be readily seen no commercialism is attached to the venture. They are within the reach of advocates of amateur boxing and the most dyed in the wool fans will see plenty of action for every second of the three two minute rounds.

Ladies are cordially invited to attend, as Pinkerton men will be on hand to preserve order. For this reason those who attend are urged to conduct themselves in an orderly manner and assert the spirit of sportsmanship which will aid materially in making the tourney a success.

DURANT BREAKS EVERY 10 TO 50 MILE AUTO MARK

Los Angeles, Cal., March 17.—E. C. [Cliff] Durant, automobile race driver, had the satisfaction of knowing today that he had broken all world's records from ten to fifty miles, both competitive and noncompetitive, in tests at the Los Angeles speedway under sanction and supervision of the contest board of the American Automobile association, yesterday.

Durant broke all world's five and ten mile records in similar tests Thursday. A car of special make with 183 cubic inches piston displacement was used in the speed trials. Times made by Durant for two days, which, it was said, will be recognized as official, are:

5 miles, 2:32.40.
10 miles, 5:04.05.
15 miles, 7:40.05.
20 miles, 10:12.84.
25 miles, 12:45.52.
30 miles, 15:17.87.
40 miles, 20:24.57.
50 miles, 25:31.05.

Electric timers were used, and George F. Stephenson, technical expert for the service, represented the A. A. A. Fred J. Wagner of New York, veterns race official, was in charge of the trial.

MRS. COLE WINS TWO TITLES ON INDOOR COURT

Brookline, Mass., March 17.—Mrs. B. E. Cole of Boston, became the women's singles indoor tennis champion and joint holder of the women's doubles title in final matches here today. She defeated Miss Leslie Bancroft, 8-6, 6-2, and with Mrs. F. F. Godfrey won from Mrs. George W. Wightman and Miss Bancroft, 6-4, 6-2. These matches on the covered courts of the Longwood Cricket club completed a week of play.

Miss Bancroft's defeat was unexpected, but Mrs. Cole contributed shots and control that were unbeatable.

Miss Bancroft sails for Europe next Tuesday to join the American players campaigning on foreign courts.

Mrs. Wightman and B. N. Dell, a local team, won the national mixed doubles indoor championship, defeating Miss Brenna Hedstrom of Buffalo, N. Y., and W. T. Tilden of Philadelphia, 7—5, 6—4. Mrs. Wightman was formerly Hazel Hotchkiss of California, and this was her seventeenth national championship. Dell is a former Princeton player, born in Jacksonville.

O'Dowd About Convinced He'd Better Quit Ring

St. Paul, Minn., March 17.—Mike O'Dowd of St. Paul, former world's middleweight champion, who was knocked out by Jock Malone here last night, announced today that he probably will retire from the ring.

Local promoters are making efforts to match Malone, who also is of St. Paul, with Johnny Wilson, middleweight champion, for an outdoor bout to be held here in May or June.

PEARSONS TAFT WIN.

The Pearsons Taft basketball team defeated the A. B. Leach fire at the Lake Shore gym. 19 to 17, in the semi-finals of the Investment Bankers' league. C. O'Connell led the score with four baskets.

AMONG THE ROLLER SKATERS.

Ten teams are entered for the twenty-five mile team roller skating race at Riverview Thursday night. Larry Quirk and George Swanson of the Dever A. C. are the favorites. The meet is being conducted by the Dever Boosters.

Entries for the annual ten mile street race of Cicerton A. C. on the northwest side April 1, will close March 24. The race is one of the feature events staged by this club each season. More than thirty racers already are entered.

KANSAS CITY A.C. AGAIN WINNER OF NATIONAL CAGE CHAMPIONSHIP

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 17.—For the third consecutive year a Kansas City team won the national basketball championship when Kansas City A. C., 1921 champion, defeated the Hillyards of St. Joseph, Mo., 31 to 18, here tonight in the finals of the National A. A. U. tournament.

Two Harbors, Minn., took third place in the national rating by defeating Larry Semon A. C. of Hollywood, Cal., 20 to 10. Showing the wear and tear of a solid week of basketball, the two teams played a slow and ragged game, the first half ending 4 to 3 in Larry Semon's favor.

TRIBUNE BOXING ENTRIES

FOUR HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOUR amateur boxers have entered the Tribune Athletic association tournament at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium on March 21, 22, 23, 26, 27 and 28. The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune."

The Question.

Are you in favor of THE TRIBUNE'S A. A. boxing tournament to be held at Ashland Boulevard auditorium on March 21, 22, 23, 26, 27, 28?

Where Asked.

11 South Dearborn street.

The Answers.

William Johnson, 1024 North Laurel avenue, private chauffeur—I look at it this way: It's a good thing for a man of most any age, but it is especially fine for the young fellows of 17 to 22. As a rule, at that age they are walking prize fighters on the street and they don't know it until they get into some ring. It looks as though it is going to be a good carnival. I hope some of the participants will develop into future champions.

Bernard F. Provol, 1638 Chase avenue, assistant secretary Greater Chicago lodge Loyal Order of Moose—Yes, sir, I'm in favor of THE TRIBUNE'S A. A. boxing tournament. I am glad to read that they are receiving a large number of entrants. It is just as essential for the young to build strong physically as well as mentally. The value of physical training was proved in the last war.

Conrad M Olsen, 140 South Dearborn street, engineer—Absolutely. Boxing, properly conducted, is a fine sport, and any organization which promotes boxing for the benefit of the boys and for the sake of the sport itself should receive the support of the public. I expect to go over to the Ashland auditorium a few times.

Alexander Eulenberg, 29 East Madison street, wholesale jewelry—Yes, and I'll be there in time to hear the first tap of the gong. Proficiency in the manly art of boxing is not a whit less praiseworthy than excellence in any other field of endeavor. I myself have given blows and taken them in the gym. The experience is a great deal more pleasant and less fraught with misgiving than our pessimistic busybodies would have us believe.

H. G. Henke, 3611 North Ashland avenue, plumber — I sure am in favor of THE TRIBUNE'S A. A. boxing tournament and any other boxing tournament conducted on proper lines. I expect to see some real fun there. Young men need vigorous athletic exercises. I play football. I have never boxed, but I certainly admire the boys who can take those stiff blows with a smile.

The Old Copyreader

"Many a story is hopelessly written, but the story of life is hopelessly rotten."

THE REWARD.

The chums at twenty smiled on fate,
And looked ahead with minds elate.
Upon a future that was bright
With all the promise youth can write;
Though blessed with nothing save their dreams
They planned their plans and schemed their schemes,
And as the smoke wreathes upward curled
It was to them a joyous world.

The chums at forty, long apart,
Exchanged a hurried heart to heart
Review one evening, read by chance,
Together by life's circumstance;
And though the game so far had played
Some havoc, they were undismayed;
The joy of fighting still was strong
And onward was their battle song.

The chums of sixty met once more,
Each with the thing he'd struggled for:
One owned the wealth that was his aim,
While millions spoke the other's name.
But Fame was dull and Riches stale
And they agreed of slight avail
Against the cost—for they were then
A pair of old and tired men.

TERRY REJECTS CUBS' OFFERS TO RETURN TO CLUB

Los Angeles, Cal., March 17.—Zeb Terry, second baseman of the Chicago National league club, will not rejoin the Cubs. Terry was given his release by the Cubs to enter the real estate business here at the start of the training season and despite tempting offers by Manager William Killefer and Owner William Wrigley Jr., has announced that he will not reenter the diamond game.

Killefer has been anxious to get Terry back on the roster to fill the gap at second base. Although the Cubs have two promising recruits in Grantham and Adams, it is felt by the Cub management that the team would be more secure with Terry in uniform and ready to fill the gap.

TEX RICKARD TELLS AMAZING STORY ON BOXING PERCENTAGES

TEX RICKARD told an amazing story of boxing percentages that illustrates why Jack Kearns is now insisting on a percentage and NOT a guarantee, no matter how fabulous, when Dempsey again goes into the ring. Said Rickard:

"When the match between Dempsey and Carpentier was made none of us really dreamed that the bout would draw so big. When Kearns asked for $300,000 for Dempsey and got it they thought me mad. I guess Jack did.

"If he had asked me for percentage I would have given him 30 per cent. Yes, I would have given him 37½ per cent.

"The bout drew $1,626,580. Dempsey's guarantee was about 18 per cent of that. If he had insisted on getting 37½ he would have drawn down $609,967.50. We've both had a good laugh over it many times since then."

LYNCH IN CITY; MEETS MEAN FOE IN JOE BURMAN

Featured by the bout between Joe Lynch, bantamweight champion, and Joe Burman, who has made some spectacular fights this winter, local boxing fans are taking a keen interest in the show to be conducted by Blackhawk post of the American Legion at the Dexter Park pavilion tomorrow night.

It has been many years since knights of the padded mitts have taken such an interest in a glove contest held in or near Chicago. This is shown conclusively by the large advance sale, although there are still a number of seats available at the usual places. Boxing fans know that any of the four ten round bouts would be an attractive windup for any show.

Lynch Reaches Chicago.

Lynch arrived in Chicago yesterday morning and worked at the Arcade in the afternoon. The champion appeared in good condition and after his gymnasium workout asserted he will do a little training at the same place tomorrow. Joe knows he has a battle on his hands and is prepared to meet one of the most dangerous contenders for his title. Lynch was accompanied by his manager, Eddie Meade, who insists Burman be at weight tomorrow afternoon, when he must not scale more than 119 pounds.

Burman wound up his training by boxing with his sparring partners in addition to going through the usual gymnasium work. Joe's left eye is still sore as a result of a butt in the Schaefer bout last week. Aside from this small bruise, Burman is "in the pink" and will tear loose in relentless fashion. Burman has everything to win and nothing to lose and can be counted on to use his right hand more than usual.

May Be K. O. in This Bout.

Harold Smith of the stockyards and Eddie Anderson of Moline are expected to engage in a thrilling contest in one of the other ten rounders. Both are fast and clever and there should not be an idle moment during the entire ten rounds if the bout goes that long. Both are hard right hand punchers and either may run into a K. O. punch. If Smith is returned the popular winner, he will be matched with Bud Taylor of Terre Haute at a future show.

In the other bouts, Frankie Garcia of Memphis, who has made a decided impression upon local fans, will take on Frankie Schaeffer of the south side. They will weigh 126 pounds. Mike Dundee of Rock Island and Patsy Flannigan of St. Louis will will be the principals in the other ten rounder.

Joe O'Hara of Fort Dodge, Ia., and Billy Sterns of Minneapolis, 138 pounders, will open the show in an eight round engagement.

NEW BASEBALL COACH REPORTS AT BUCKNELL

Lewisburg, Pa., March 17.—After a short visit here, "Moose" McCormick, former major league ball player, who will coach the Bucknell university baseball team the coming spring, returned to his home in Philadelphia. He plans to return to Lewisburg within the next two weeks and will remain here until the close of the university in June.

While here, McCormick spoke to the baseball candidates, outlining the plans for the campaign, which promises to be a successful one, for the ex-Giant will have a squad of veterans with which to work. All of the strong 1922 nine with the exception of Linker right field; Kopp, first base, and Gaskill, shortstop, are available, while there are several men who ought to be able to plug up the vacant gaps in an acceptable manner.

Two more pitchers augmented the group of batterymen which has been working out daily in the cage. They are Austin of Ocean City and Mosser of Reading.

Criqui Sails for U. S. and Title Bout with Kilbane

HAVRE, France, March 17.—Eugene Criqui, European featherweight champion, sailed today for the United States, where he is to meet Johnny Kilbane for the world's title. Criqui was accompanied by his manager and several trainers.

ODD FELLOWS LEAGUE.

The following teams were represented: Golden Link, Lake City, Woodlawn Park, Normals, John Ericsson, Cook county, and Colfax.

NAME OFFICIALS FOR BIG TEN GRID GAMES NEXT FALL

Football officials for the next Western conference season were elected at a meeting of coaches held yesterday at the Auditorium hotel. A number of new men were added to the list.

At a joint meeting later between faculty representatives and coaches the eight game football schedule was adopted, but it was decided not to put the training season short two weeks as proposed by the coaches. It was the general opinion that players would be physically unready for the season's grind with a shorter period devoted to preliminary conditioning.

Talk Intramural Sports.

At a meting of the conference intramural directors G. P. Ward, head of intramural athletics at Ohio State, outlined a plan which will promote such sports in high schools. The Big Ten heads approved of this plan.

Two schools, Chicago and Wisconsin, were represented at the meting for the first time, Iowa now being the only conference school which has not entered the association.

Conference directors of athletics at another meeting detailed plans for a "baseball code of ethics" which will be prepared by Commissioner John L. Griffith. This criticism was also applied to the "razzing" of officials at basketball games.

DREXEL GIRLS RIFLE SQUAD BEAT VERMONT

Burlington, Vt., March 17.—Although the University of Vermont girls' rifle team shot a 498 score out of a possible 500, Drexel institute of Philadelphia, Vermont's opponents in this telegraphic match, made the perfect score of 500 points and won the match. This is the second time in two years that Vermont has been defeated in this branch of sports, and it was Drexel which each time took Vermont's measure.

Drexel, however, in both of these matches had a considerable advantage over Vermont in the use of telescopic sights. The girls firing under green and gold colors use regulation army rifles with ordinary sights.

ANOTHER YEAR OF INTERNATIONAL POLO PROMISED

New York, March 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—A season of international polo competition, rivaling that of last year in which English, Irish, and Argentine teams took part in leading American tournaments, is promised for 1923, according to tentative plans outlined today by the Polo association. England again is expected to send over a representative four, while India and Spain are other probable entries.

The Polo association has added to the program for the national junior championships, to be held at Narragansett Pier, R. I., an event limited to teams with an aggregate handicap of twelve goals. This contest is expected to increase interest in the tournament and afford an opportunity for western teams, especially a number in California, to compete against leading eastern juniors.

NEW TRIER TANKERS WIN SUBURBAN TITLE

New Trier won the swimming championship of the Suburban league in both classes by sumbersing Morton and Proviso in the season's swan song at Cicero last night. Morton seniors were sunk, 43 to 16, and the juniors 32 to 18. Proviso's majors, its only entry, walked the plank, 41 to 18.

Coach E. Jackson's young sea lions swam to the title on a record of ten consecutive triumphs, and never in either division made the acquaintance of Davy Jones' locker. The senior relay quartet won every race, and the junior colors dipped only once.

MICHIGAN MOUND STAFF STILL IS UNDEVELOPED

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 17.—"While the general outfield and infield strength is slightly above normal, the pitching situation is far from satisfactory," is the way Coach Ray Fisher sums up the baseball situation at the University of Michigan at the end of the first three weeks of preliminary drills.

During the course of the early training the Wolverine Coach has three times trimmed his squad, leaving only those men who have shown such ability as would warrant their remaining on the squad to compete against last season's veterans for varsity berths.

Aside from the three veterans, Paper, Knode, and Uteritz, there remain but six candidates for infield positions. Both Haggerty and Keefer have survived all cuts and at present appear to have the edge on the other candidates. Deview also looks good, and because of his ability at the plate there is a strong probability that he will be assigned at least to a utility position.

CAPT. MAC MILLAN TO ADDRESS IKE WALTONS

Capt. Donald B. Mac Millan, explorer, who has made seven voyages to the arctic circle, is scheduled to entertain the members of the Chicago chapter of the Izaak Walton league with stories and pictures Wednesday night at Hotel Morrison. This will be the regular March meeting of the local Walton group and will be preceded by a dinner at 6:30 o'clock.

Six reels of thrilling motion pictures will be shown by Capt. Mac Millan to illustrate his lecture on "Unknown Baffin Land," which he explored on his recent trip. This latest voyage into the arctic took him 5,000 miles in his little power schooner, Bowdoin, the smallest boat ever built for arctic use. Before the expedition returned, many important scientific discoveries were made; the geography of Baffin land was changed; lakes and rivers discovered; studies made of Eskimo life, and thousands of feet of motion picture film taken.

Capt. Mac Millian received his initiation into arctic work while acting as assistant to Admiral Peary at the time of the latter's successful expedition to the pole in 1908-'09.

CULVER VICTOR IN TWO TITLE TANK EVENTS

Culver, Ind., March 17.—[Special.]—Three Indiana-Kentucky A. A. U. championship events and one National A. A. U. swimming events were on the sports calendar at Culver Military academy today. Edward R. Morine of the University of Pennsylvania, Taylor of Illinois A. C., and Dillon of Culver academy, participated in the National A. A. U. plunge for distance, placing in the order named. Morine's best plunge of 81 feet 3 inches in one minute was but 1 foot 3 inches short of the world's record.

The Indiana-Kentucky A. A. U. championship 100 yard swim was won by J. M. Moore of University of Indiana in 1:02 1-5, with Graves and Abbott, both of Culver, second and third.

The 150 yard back stroke was won by Graves of Culver; Schwartzburg of Culver, second, and Willis, Indiana, third. Graves, who is only 14 years old, finished in the fast time of 2:00 4-5.

GRID CANDIDATES START ON SPRING WORK AT INDIANA

Bloomington, Ind., March 17.—[Special.]—"Bib Bill" Ingram, newly elected football coach at Indiana university, arrived here this week and started spring football practice on Jordan field. Twenty-five candidates reported.

In his opening lecture to the candidates the coach stressed the fact that team work and not individual starring wins games. "One of the main reasons for holding spring practice is to become acquainted," he said. "And don't forget that it takes eleven men in every play to make a successful football team." The coach told the squad that little field work will be done until after all have learned the fundamentals. The mentor emphasized importance of training rules, saying that he is going to be frank with the candidates and that he wishes them to be frank with him.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

COUNTING IS A FASCINATING FEATURE OF BRIDGE, ALTHOUGH THE LAST TO LEARN.

COUNTING is one of the most fascinating features of bridge, although it is usually the last which players learn. Counting is a technical term and really means placing the unplayed cards in the various hands. The difficulties of the operation are always exaggerated by ordinary players and it is impossible to become a good player without learning this part of the game. A beautiful example is shown in the deal which follows:

THE HANDS.

S—Q. 8. 6. 5.

West dealt and bid 1 no trump, which closed the bidding. North had the initial lead.

West secured nine tricks.

For the benefit of those who may consider the no trump bid by whist rather strenuous it may be said that two aces and a king constitute a sound no-declaration and the fact that the king is in the same suit as one of the aces does not detract from the strength of the hand.

The declarer's play: After the second trick north was marked with three hearts and south with one. This meant that if either north or south won a trick in another suit the declarer could not win the game, as north and south would secure four heart tricks and whatever the other trick happened to be.

The declarer played his spade suit correctly with such a holding and eight cards in the two hands. One round should always be taken from the hand which holds ace and king, after which it is easier to decide whether to take the finesse. Had the jack been led from the dummy on the first round of the suit, north would have eventually made the nine of spades.

After playing out the spades and observing the compound echo in diamonds by south, the declarer was enabled to accurately play all the remaining cards. South must have the king and jack of diamonds also, as he could not afford to echo without both of those cards, and would have bid to direct the suit had he held this originally.

The other cards in the south hand must be four clubs, with the queen, or jack, or both, and a single heart. North held originally five hearts, including ace, ten, four spades, two clubs, and two diamonds. The north hand, therefore, did not count at all in clubs or diamonds. With this knowledge the declarer led the queen of hearts from the dummy, deliberately giving north three tricks in the suit, but at the same time forcing two discards on the south hand, which evidently made the five of clubs in the dummy a winner.

If, at trick nine, south had discarded a diamond instead of a club, the declarer would have made the ten of diamonds in his own hand instead of the five of clubs in the dummy. The opponents would not defeat the play and it would have done no good, however, for north to refuse to make his remaining hearts.

The play or north: North played well in refusing to win the second round of his own suit, as it had no card of reentry, and by leading a heart in his partner's hand made three more heart tricks possible. When the declarer led the queen of hearts north, a good player, realized the situation perfectly and played with extreme care. If, at trick eight, the declarer had discarded a diamond instead of a club, north would have sacrificed his last trick in the heart suit and led a diamond, enabling south to make one diamond and one club, and saving the game, but the declarer was too wary and north was helpless.

The play of south: The discards by south at tricks four, five, and six were the only plays of consequence from that hand, and it did not matter in the least whether south discarded three diamonds or two diamonds and one club. It did matter prodigiously, however, that south showed strength in the diamond suit, although the play was entirely conventional. South could certainly win the second round of diamonds or the third round of clubs and should merely have discarded small cards from each suit with the object of giving as little information as possible or if he gave any information that it should be wrong.

There could be no question from the viewpoint of south that the declarer held the ace of diamonds and therefore no possibility that north might ever win a trick except in the heart suit, nor was there any danger that north might be obliged to discard any of his hearts, as the club and diamond in the north hand must be entirely worthless. For all these reasons any information as to his holding which south might give would be of benefit to the declarer, while it could help north not at all.

LUNDGREN AFTER SIXTH "BIG TEN" BASEBALL TITLE

Urbana, Ill., March 17.—This is the question that Western Conference sport followers are asking as the baseball season approaches: Will Lundgren, baseball coach at the University of Illinois, termed by George Huff as probably "the greatest college baseball coach in the United States," win his sixth consecutive Big Ten championship this season? His record is three wins at Michigan and two at Illinois.

Already, in the gigantic armory at Illinois, baseball men are hard at spring practice and on March 29 they will entrain for their annual southern trip.

Trained at Illinois and pitcher and captain of the baseball team in 1902, Lundgren started on his rise to fame when he led his men east and defeated the leading teams of the seaboard states. The late Jake Stahl was his catcher. In 1902 also he joined the Chicago Cubs and was a member of three National league and two world's championship teams.

TRACK AND NET ONLY ACTIVITIES NOW AT CARNEGIE

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 17.—[Special.]—With basketball out of the way Carnegie Tech athletic activities this spring will be confined entirely to track and tennis. Coach Beeler of the track squad and Chuck Garland, who will handle the tennis team, have already announced early plans for what is promised to be a strenuous season in both branches.

The advent of warm weather last week brought out a bumper crop of candidates for the track team. All of the cross country runners from the 1922 team have reported, also a number of football stars, who are to try for places in the field events.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

A NEW HUNTING AND FISHING CAMP IN ALASKA.

WE have just gotten word of a new hunting and fishing camp in southeastern Alaska, the first of its kind in that part of the territory, and the proposition sounds so good that we wish they had started the camp one year earlier. Although there is excellent hunting and fishing in southeastern Alaska there has never been attempt until now to entertain the outdoorsman and to provide accommodations for him. The best of it is that a trip to southeastern Alaska is comparatively inexpensive.

As for this new camp it sounds so good to us that we are ready to pawn our wordly goods in order to raise enough dough to get up there. The last letter received from Dr. Harry De Vighne, a sportsman of Juneau, who is interested in the camp, tells so much about the place that we are going to pass it along to you. The doctor writes:

"This is the official dope on the camp. We have picked out the very best spot we could find for the purpose in view. It is twenty-two miles from Juneau the capitol of Alaska, three miles up the Taku river, thirteen miles from the Canadian boundary and there we are building a real camp. Our cabin, 20x40, is almost finished, with big fireplace and kitchen attached. We have fifteen tents, 16x16, comfortably furnished with real spring beds with sheets, mind you, and stove for every tent. We have two baths and modern plumbing in two of the tents.

"There are plenty of mountain goat, bear, blacks and grizzlies, and some moose within five miles of camp. We have three motor boats and scows for the river. Guides have been engaged. Five miles from the camp is Turner lake, the best trout fishing in the country. There we will have a tent and a guide for the fishing fans. Also good trout fishing a couple of miles up the river at Moose Creek. Five glaciers are within five miles of camp, three of which can be climbed.

"Now, Bob, there isn't a bit of bunk about this venture. We are prepared financially and otherwise to deliver the goods and it is not primarily a venture for immdiate profit either. By the way, do you know that it was yours truly who really gave me the hunch on this proposition? When you told me that we were overlooking and neglecting the sportsman-tourist it set me thinking, and thus Twin Glacier Camp, our camp, was born."

Selection of the American golf team which will compete in the international matches for the Walker cup at St. Andrews, Scotland, on May 18 and 19, was announced yesterday by Robert A. Gardner, chairman of the selection committee of the United States Golf association.

The team of ten will include four former national champions, in Gardner, Chick Evans of Chicago, S. Davison Harron of Chicago, and Francis Ouimet of Boston. Other members will be Harrison R. Johnston of St. Paul, Maxwell R. Marston of Philadelphia, Oswald Kirkby of New York, George V. Rotan of Houston, Tex.; Fred J. Wright Jr. of Los Angeles, and Dr. O. P. Willing of Portland, Ore.

Will Sail in April.

The players will sail April 17 on the Mauretania and will compete in the British amateur championship at Deal, Kent, which starts May 7, then go to Scotland. The men will have about two weeks to practice before the British championship.

Invitations were extended to about twenty-five of the leading players. Rudy Knepper, Bobby Jones and Jess Sweetser were unable to accept because they could not get leave of absence from their universities. Jesse Guilford of Boston was not heard from, and Dr. Paul Hunter of Los Angeles, who probably would have been given a place, was compelled to decline on account of his medical practice.

Most of the members are nationally known, and the team is quite strong enough to give the Britons a hard contest.

Rotan Texas Champion.

George Rotan, a veteran player, has held the Texas championship a number of times. Dr. O. P. Willing, who was reported to be playing the best game of any of the Pacific northwest golfers, competed in the national amateur championship at St. Louis in 1921, defeating Reggie Lewis of New York, and then losing to Jones. Fred Wright Jr., who is a former Massachusetts champion, went over with the last American team.

PEACE LOOMING IN OFFING FOR OLYMPIA FIELDS

That the problems of the Olympia Fields Country club, which divided the memberships into two sections, will be amicably settled, is indicated by the action of the board of governors at a meeting last week. Three committees were appointed, building construction, underwriting, and real estate, and on these there are several members of the Round Table faction, which opposed the Greater Olympia scheme.

The underwriting committee is to raise a fund to help members to pay their assessments if occasion demands. There is no doubt of the ultimate success of the Greater Olympia plan and of greatly increased values in memberships within the next few years, it is declared. The underwriting committee will consist of E. E. Botte, A. Alonzo Stagg, Frank Coyle, F. C. Barkman Jr., and G. A. Blair, chairman.

The real estate committee will determine the best method of selling building lots on the club property. Its members are A. W. Draper, F. Toolen, G. S. Galloway, F. B. Houghton, and Jacob M. Lenz, chairman. The building committee will plan for the construction of the new clubhouse. Its members are Everett C. Brown, J. J. Pelley, J. N. Davis, W. C. Taylor, E. E. McBride, J. W. Stevenson, and A. M. Saxe, chairman.

OHIO STATE HONORS ATHLETE OF 40 YEARS AGO WITH VARSITY "O"

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—Turning back the pages of athletic history forty years, the Ohio State university has honored David F. Snyder of Springfield, O., with his varsity "O."

Award of the coveted letter to Mr. Snyder by the athletic board was for his prowess in track. In 1883 he was the all 'round track star of the university and was awarded the Franklin prize, an annual honor for general athletic proficiency.

In Snyder's day football was undreamed of at Ohio State; baseball was in its infancy, and interclass track meets drew the spotlight. In 1883 the first Ohio intercollegiate meet was held. Mr. Snyder is the oldest athlete to be honored with the varsity "O." The award was made through the efforts of Springfield alumni.

Illinois Racing Bill Will Reach Capital This Week

BY FRENCH LANE.

The Illinois racing bill backed by business men and prominent sportsmen from many parts of the state will be introduced in either the upper or lower house at Springfield this week.

This announcement was made last night by officials of the Chicago Washington Park club, sponsors of the measure.

The bill calling for 100 days of racing under pari-mutuel wagering, regulated by a commission of three members appointed by the governor, and limiting all tracks to a profit of not more than 10 per cent on their investments, is the nearest to ideal ever to go before a body of state lawmakers, according to racing and breeding men in many parts of the country.

Expect Action Shortly.

The measure was drawn up several weeks ago, but numerous changes in the original draft have been made in order to satisfy the different Illinois racing and breeding bodies. Copies now are in the hands of the printer and will be ready for distribution early this week, at which time the original bill will put in an appearance at Springfield.

Action in the general assembly is expected within a short time. Many members of both houses have already had a chance to take a look at the bill. An early public hearing will likely be ordered and the bill may be either passed or rejected by early April, giving local tracks a chance to get ready for racing later in the season, as the Hawthorne course is the only one over which a meeting could be run in the early part of the summer.

Has State-wide Support.

The racing measure will go to the capital under conditions much different from those under which similar measures have been introduced at former sessions. It is the first bill—probably due to the class of men behind it—that has ever been able to win much support downstate. It also has the backing of both the harness and running race bodies, with scores of breeding organizations for it, because all profits over the 10 per cent allowed each track go into a state fund to further the breeding industry.

While plans are going forward for the meeting scheduled to open at Hawthorne May 26, little activity is looked for among any of the local associations until after it can be determined what progress the new bill will make in the two branches of the legislature.

TONSORIAL ARTISTS CLIP COAL BARON IN PINEHURST FEATURE

PINEHURST habitués recently enjoyed the annual match between the managers of the three barber shops at the North Carolina resort against H. B. Swoope, a Pennsylvania coal baron, who took on their best ball against his individual round. Half prices or double prices at the barber shops for a month were the stakes involved in the contest. The best round played by any of Swoope's three opponents was 110, and all of them had double figures for some of the holes. Their team work, however, was good, and they finally won with a best ball of 87 against Swoope's 91.

SOUTHERN COLT, AT LONG ODDS, DERBY WINNER

New Orleans, La., March 17.—[Special.]—New Orleans scored its biggest turf victory in the last thirty years at Jefferson park this afternoon when Amole, a son of Vulcain-Washer Woman, owned by the Southland stable, a home concern, and trained by F. P. Letellier, sometime drayman, captured the Louisiana Derby, worth $9,175 to the winner, in a driving finish over Calcutta and Setting Sun. The winner was ridden by J. J. D. Mooney, a local boy. He was quoted at $12.50 to 1 by the oralizers. Thirteen went to the post. The time for the nine furlongs was 1:57 4-5. Ten thousand saw the race.

Amole made a show of his field. In spite of the fact that he broke from an inside post position he beat Body, of the Idle Hour stock farm entry, to the first turn and cut out a winning lead before the field had gone a quarter of a mile.

Going down the back stretch, Amole had a lead of two lengths and retained that advantage until the half mile, where Setting Sun moved up on the outside and looked as though he might win. At this point Mooney shook up Amole a trifle and the undersized son of Vulcain went to the front and was never bothered thereafter.

Shamrock, the 2 to 1 favorite and regarded the only colt of any class, finished a poor fourth. Jockey Butwell did not seem able to get him running at any stage of the race.

BANQUET CRANE FIVES.

Crane Tech basketball teams which were in the semi-finals were tendered a banquet by the school, at which new captaincy selections were announced. Edelcup will pilot the Herbs and Wolner the heavies.

HOPPE COMING HERE FOR WEEK'S CUE EXHIBITION

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—Willie Hoppe has received his share of the prize money for retaining his championship against Jake Schaefer. He announced that he had decided not to accept a vaudeville contract for eight or ten weeks, but intends to start an exhibition tour a week from Monday. Accompanied by Peterson, he will go to Chicago for a week's play and then go to Milwaukee. After he completes his tour he intends to quit competition for the remainder of the season.

"I will rest until the tournament next fall," said Hoppe. "I have been playing since early in September and am beginning to feel the strain."

I. A. C. STAR AND 8 RIVALS PLAY FOR CUE CROWN

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—Nine competitors will strive for the national three cushion carom championship title in the tournament that begins Monday in Brooklyn. The tournament marks the fifth annual holding of the multiple cushion classic under the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players.

Robert M. Lord of Illinois A. C., Chicago, stands as one of the formidable contenders for the championship this year. In the absence of Frank I. Fleming of Champaign, Ill., winner last season, the faith of the western lovers of the game is pinned upon Lord.

Peterson and Cutler to Play Balkline Cue Series

New York, March 17.—Charles C. Peterson of St. Louis and Albert Cutler of New York have been matched to play a series of 800 point balkline matches for the "shortstop" championship. They will play for a diamond medal donated by the Brunswick company and $500 a side. The first match will be played April 13 and 14 at New York and the second April 19 and 20. If a third is necessary it will be played in Chicago.

NOTES OF THE GOLFERS.

1906 SOX AND CUBS SCATTERED TO THE FOUR WINDS

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

MUCH water has gone over the wheel since the fall of 1906, and the heroic deeds of Cubs and White Sox in the world series of that year live in the memory of only a few of the present day fans. Titular series have come and gone since, but none stands so vividly in the records as the struggle in which the underdog emerged triuphant over a foe since classed "the greatest of all time."

Practically all the men who participated in that series under the leadership of Frank Chance and Fielder Jones have long since written finis on their baseball careers. Two of the then regulars have passed out. Eight of the others still cling to their first love—two as managers, four as coaches, one as owner, and one as player. The remainder have scattered to the four winds, some to enjoy the harvest of wise investment, some to struggle along with their days of glory only a memory.

Unexpected Outcome.

The 1906 series stands out above the rest purely because of its unexpected outcome. The 1914 Braves-Athletics series might be cited as similar, but it wasn't. The Braves were victors in four straight because they encountered a team that had gone into a decline. Such was not the case with the Cubs. As proof they went on for years afterward winning pennants when most of the Sox of 1906 had slipped into the discard.

The two regulars who have gone on the long journey are "Jiggs" Donohue and Harry Steinfeldt, the former the Sox first sacker and the latter the occupant of the third bag under Chance. Both died close to ten years ago.

The eight who haven't lost their fondness for the game are Frank Chance, Frank Schulte, John Evers, Nick Altrock, Orvie Overall, Frank Isbell, Pat Moran, and Ed Walsh. The one time peerless leader comes back this season as manager of the Boston Red Sox after having spent seven years on his orange grove at Glendora, Cal.

Schulte with Oakland Last Year.

Schulte last year played the outfield for the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast league. He is living there now, comfortably fixed, and probably will endeavor to make his legs hold out for one more season.

Johnny Evers is taking life easy at Troy, N. Y., the town he left way back in 1902 to seek fame under the big tent. He was only a frail, peppery kid in those days. In fact, he was so tiny that base runners used to tell him they were careful about sliding into him at second for fear of breaking him in pieces.

Frank Isbell, the "Old Bald Eagle," who played second base for the south siders, still is at Wichita, Kas., whence he trekked in the late winter of 1910 after getting his major league release. He owns the Western league club in that city, and now, after a few years of lean pickings, is said to be in the $100,000 class.

Pat Moran, second string Cub catcher, who figured in the series only to the extent of being employed twice as pinch hitter, is managing the Cincinnati Reds.

Altrock hangs on at Washington, partly to instruct young pitchers and partly to afford American league fans amusement over his clownlike tactics. In his travels the one time great left hander hasn't gathered much in the way of worldly goods, but to him that matters not.

Walsh Back with Sox.

Besides Altrock only three Sox hurlers—Ed Walsh, Doc White and Yip Owen—figured in the games of that fall. Last season Walsh took a flyer as a big league umpire, but retired to his home at Meriden, Conn., before the season was over. He recently signed up as coach of the White Sox. White, a dentist by profession, is athletic director and baseball coach at Central high, Washington, D. C. Owen is an overseer in the shipping department of the Ford plant at Detroit.

Billy Sullivan, who did the catching for the Sox that fall, lives on his apple orchard near Newberg, Ore. Like Chance, he found fruit growing highly profitable. Out in that same corner of the country is Fielder Jones, who managed the Sox and played center field. He is in the timber brokerage business and well fixed financially.

The Sox shortstop, George Davis, now resides at St. Louis, where he is employed in the Ford assembling plant. Lee Tannehill, who shared the short berth with Davis during the fall struggle, is at South Bend, Ind. He is a salesman for a Chicago packing house.

George Rohe, third baseman with the Sox, is managing a photo department in a large drug store at Cincinnati Reds.

Pat Dougherty, the Sox left fielder, is leading the quiet life in his old home town, Bolivar, N. Y. Eddie Hahn, who played right field, has fared none too well since age forced him off the diamond. He is a clerk in a cigar store at Des Moines.

Of the four Cub hurlers who figured in the series, two have done well since quitting baseball. "Big Jeff" Overall owns an orange grove at Visalia, Cal., and is a bank director there. Chance signed him recently as pitching coach for the Red Sox. Ed Reulbach is in New York, prospering in the piano manufacturing business.

Brownie a Semipro Manager.

Old faithful Mordecai Brown of three finger fame last season managed the Lawrenceville (Ill.) Havolines. Some years ago Brownie was set back financially by a wildcat mining investment in California. Jack Pfiester, fourth member of that famous quartet, is a state highway inspector in the vicinity of Loveland, O.

Johnny Kling, who did the catching for the Cubs, has fared better financially than any of his old mates. A billiard hall at Kansas City nets him big returns, as does an office building which he leased just before rents started to soar. He is reputed to be worth in excess of a quarter million.

Joe Tinker, the first link in the famous Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance chain, was a hustler from the day he broke into baseball. He tried his hand at various things and usually was successful. Now he is a real estate expert in Orlando, Fla. This winter he disposed of a $60,000 Chicago apartment building.

Artie Hofman, "Circus Solly" they called him when in his prime as outfield companion to Jim Sheckard and Schulte, makes Chicago his home. At present he is not engaged in any regular occupation. Sheckard is in much the same fix.

BABE RUTH HITS HOMER AS YANKS WIN GAME, 9 TO 2

New Orleans, La., March 17.—Babe Ruth hit a home run in the fifth inning of the Yankee-New Orleans Southern league team exhibition game here this afternoon. Dugan was on first when he cleared the right field fence with a high fly. It was Ruth's first home run for 1923 exhibition games. The Yankees won, 9 to 2.

NEALE TO PLAY IN SEMI-PRO RANKS

Cincinnati, O., March 17.—Earle "Greasy" Neale, coach of the University of Virginia baseball and football teams and former Cincinnati National outfielder, will play the dual rôle of manager and outfielder of the Bellevue, Ky., semi-pro baseball team in the Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio league this season, it was announced here today.

Ride in the Peerless and Learn What Owners Call a New Experience

Owners of the New Peerless go a long step farther than either ourselves or the makers.

They declare that nowhere in all their motoring experience have they encountered anything like its riding and performing qualities.

From the standpoint of economy they are likewise enthusiastic. For example, they report that only after an incredible number of miles is it necessary to remove the carbon from the Peerless engine.

All this accounts in large measure for the numbers who come in daily to inspect the New Peerless.

When you take your ride—which you may arrange at any time—you will be impressed with the steadiness with which the car holds the higher speeds, and the marked ease and buoyancy of its riding.

You will discover, also, a number of big little things. For instance, fewer places to lubricate by hand than on any other car; again, the mere act of unlocking the ignition automatically turns on the running lights—a valuable safeguard at night.

If you would like to inspect and ride in a car as deliberately designed for the individual as the most expensive custom-built automobiles, you will be heartily welcome.

After all, only the car itself can tell adequately what Peerless has accomplished. May we expect you?

COURT SELECTS GARDINI AS FOE FOR CALZA, BUT—

George Calza, the Italian heavyweight wrestler, has caused more furore in the local mat game than the Madigue-Siki bout created in Dublin last night.

Circuit Judge Ira Ryner indicated yesterday that the injunction restraining Calza from wrestling under any promoter's auspices, unless he wrestled first for the Midwest A. C., in fulfillment of his verbal contract with the club, will be dissolved if Calza will appear for the club next Tuesday. Counsel for Calza informed the court that the Italian wrestler would work if he would be relieved of the restraining order.

On Friday a committee of newspapermen met on instructions of Judge Ryner, believing it was empowered to select an opponent for Calza. This it did, and returned the selection of the court. There appears, however, to have been some misunderstanding regarding the instructions, the court wishing to secure a list of available opponents.

Court Is Matchmaker.

When the matter came up yesterday, Judge Ryner, wishing to end the squabble between rival promoters for the services of Calza, virtually assumed the rôle of matchmaker by agreeing to a proposal made by counsel for John (Doc) Krone that Renato Gardini be selected to meet Calza. To this counsel for the Midwest A. C. agreed, and the promoters immediately started to get in touch with Gardini in spite of the fact that they have clinched a championship match for him with Ed (Strangler) Lewis at the Coliseum on April 2.

Midwest A. C. officials, while they agreed several days ago to the March 30 date, feel that the show, if Gardini can reach Chicago by that time, would be what is termed in sport vernacular as a "bust," with only two days in which to advertise the bout.

However, they are willing to go ahead if they can get Gardini here in time. They are of the opinion that Renato will feel well within his rights in refusing to accept the bout on such short notice. The whole matter must rest until word from Gardini is received.

Krone May Use Calza.

If the Calza-Gardini match is not staged next Tuesday, Promoter Krone announces, he will use Calza at his next show, under his injunction against the city athletic commission, which ties the hands of that body, created by the city council to control the mat game. Krone has not announced the date, but says it will be set for early in April. Calza's opponent has not been picked.

The Gardini-Lewis match was clinched while the warring factions were fighting it out in court. A wire received from Lewis said that the terms ($10,000, win, lose, or draw) were acceptable and that he will notify the promoters, who shall hold the money guaranteed Lewis.

He states that the date is O. K. and that he will forward his $1,000 forfeit as soon as notified that Gardini has posted his. Lewis said that there may be one or two minor changes made in the articles, but if they are not satisfactory they can be adjusted on his arrival here.

INDUSTRIAL PIN TEAMS TO START MEET ON APRIL 7

The third annual Chicago Industrial Bowling association tournament will begin April 7 at Beisinger Randolph alleys with any pin man who has been in the employ of a firm affiliated with the Chicago Association of Commerce prior to February 1, 1923, eligible to compete. Any organization that has not enough men to constitute a team may enter the doubles and individauls.

The tournament last year was the largest industrial tournament ever staged in Chicago and from the entries and reservations received, it is estimated that when the entries close on March 31 the entry of firms will have reached 600 teams. Information can be secured from C. C. Hintze, secretary of the Chicago Industrial Bowling association, at room 501, 10 South La Salle street.

WORDS FOLLOW WIRE SHOOT OF CO-EDS' TEAMS

Seattle, Wash., March 17.—Because co-ed marksmen at the University of Tennessee shot from prone position, instead of standing, in a telegraphic match with the University of Washington that resulted in victory, 518 to 493, for the southern girls, a warm correspondence is going on between the institutions. The Washington girls shot standing and the Washington athletic authorities assert that such a position was fixed by agreement.

"The ordinary difference in scoring among men in prone and standing positions is twenty points," said W. R. Hale, coach of the girl marksmen at Washington. The difference in women would be even more, because it is harder for them to hold the heavy regulation rifle when standing."

ONWENTSIA CAPTURES INTER-CLUB SHOOT

Shooters representing the Onwentsia Country club yesterday won the seventh inter-club team shoot of the Country Club league staged at Onwentsia Country club, shattering 469 targets, three more than the other teams which tied for second honors. The winning team had the least number of added birds, 28, while the South Shore shooters had next best actual score, having an allotment of 30.

In the team shoot, F. Carter turned in the highest actual total, bagging a 95, but he fell short in the run for the day's highest count, lacking a handicap of extra birds. C. Antoine of South Shore was the only shooter to get a 97 total. He made an actual score of 94 and was given three added birds.

C. B. Pike, with a 24, won the 25 target event, finishing one better than C. H. Hassell. Three shooters broke 22 targets and the same number were in the 21 class. Forty-five shooters were out. Scores:

BREYER DEFENDS SWIM TITLE IN PRINCETON TANK

Ralph Breyer, whose three victories in the Maroon tank Friday night gave Northwestern the championship of the Big Ten conference, will defend his national intercollegiate record in the 440 at Princeton university in the national meet Friday and Saturday, according to an announcement from Coach Tom Robinson yesterday.

Breyer's time for the event, made Friday, is 5:24 2-5. His closest competitor in the east is Deibel of Rutgers, whose fastest time is 5:30.

Breyer also holds the national record in the 220 at 2:23 3-5, but he will not defend it in the east, as it is not likely to be endangered. Against the Chicago Athletic club he paddled the distance in 2:22 1-5.

POLOISTS PLAN INTERNATIONAL MATCHES HERE

Plans to stage an international polo championship tournament in Chicago this season, with teams competing from the various army posts in the United States and Canada, have been announced by John S. Peters, former aid to Gen. Pershing, who is now affiliated with the 65th cavalry division.

According to early arrangements, the nine areas under the jurisdiction of the United States government, along with teams from various station posts in Canada, will be represented.

The final in the big international meet would be played in Chicago, according to the plans of Mr. Peters, for a perpetual trophy which will be donated by a group of prominent Chicago citizens. Mr. Peters has been put in charge of the polo department of the new Washington Park Breeders' association and plans to play the tournament at their proposed new plant in Riverdale.

Letters have been sent to the commanding officers in the nine United States service areas, and favorable replies have already been received from

ROOK AND PAWN ENDING AS CHESS TITANS ADJOURN

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—Spirited play marked the opening moves in the second game of the United States championship chess match today between F. J. Marshall of New York and Edward Lasker of Chicago at the University club. Marshall, with the move, selected the Vienna opening, and the play ran into the variation adopted by Tschigorin against Pillsbury at Hastings. Lasker, however, varied from Pillsbury's continuation at his ninth turn.

The Chicago man, in order to enliven the contest, offered the sacrifice of his knight on the eleventh move. Marshall chose to disregard the offer, but when it was still open three moves later he captured the knight, apparently with a safe game. By this time, however, Marshall had not castled, and his only difficult problem was to find a safe place for his king. Lasker was under time pressure toward the end of his second hour and had to make ten moves within ten minutes.

Marshall made a weak twenty-first move, as the result of which Lasker won back his piece, and when the game was adjourned shortly after 7 o'clock the position had changed into a rook and pawn ending. Lasker had slightly the better pawn position. Play will be resumed tomorrow at 3 p. m.

Acting on receipt of word from Paris that the International Lawn Tennis federation had abandoned the practice of awarding tournaments is, perpetuity to the same cities, the executive committee voted to apply for membership in the federation.

IOWA-BADGER DEADLOCK CLIMAX TO KEEN BASKETBALL RACE

BY TED ISERMAN.

A HECTIC season of Big Ten basketball closed with the Purdue-Indiana tilt Thursday night without the championship of the circuit being definitely established, Wisconsin and Iowa being tied for leadership.

The Hawkeyes had a big bid for the laurels up until their unexpected defeat by Indiana March 5, when the Hoosiers stifled Coach Sam Barry's organization, 23 to 21, Nykios proving the chief factor in the victory.

Purdue was regarded as a contender for championship honors until well into the season, but the Boilermakers failed to come through.

Maroons Finish Strong.

The Maroons ended the season much more auspiciously than they began it. Defeated in their three pre-season practice tilts, the Midway cagemen were beaten by Iowa in what was the first conference game for both quintets.

The question of the superiority of the two teams that are tied for first would be a difficult one to decide. Various accusations may be made against both fives, yet fundamentally the teams are about on a par. Both employ the short pass system, the Iowans being especially accurate, brilliant and speedy in their tosses, relying more on the passing talent of the players than upon dribbling, whirling and other phases of floor work. The Badgers' game, however, seems more flexible.

Free Throwing Five.

To the accusation that the Hawks are a free throwing five and owe their wins to the ability of Funk, Iowa supporters can answer that their favorites are only three points behind the Badgers in the field goal scoring department. Reflecting the tight defensive game which is characteristic of Coach Mather's as well as Coach Meanwell's game is the rather low average number of points scored by Wisconsin in each encounter. The Badgers have an average of about 24 points, the Hawkeyes being credited with about 28.

Misfortunes in the various camps have proven disastrous for several of the teams, Ohio having lost its mainstay in Dudley, who suffered a broken leg in the Northwestern tilt. Michigan was handicapped in the latter part of the season by the loss of Miller and later of Haggerty through ineligibility.

Though a championship for no one team can be recorded this season, Iowa has the leading point scorer and the best free thrower in Funk. Owing to an error in the box score of the Indiana-Iowa game March 9 Funk was accredited with only 141 points. Harrison Barnes of Chicago being given credit for the championship of the conference.

By scoring nine free throws in this game the Hawk established a lead that Barnes failed to overcome in the Wisconsin-Chicago battle, played the following Saturday.

Ely ranks first at throwing field goals and has thirty-eight foul heaves to his credit. Dickson of Chicago is second on basket throwing with forty-eight.

Triumph Over Baldness!

THE THOMAS DISCOVERY

Moves to Larger Quarters

Testimonials:

(Names and addresses are kept on file for your inspection.)

Chicago, Ill., February 28th, 1923.

Gentlemen:—
I am well satisfied with the results obtained from your treatments for the regrowing of my hair. My case was of old standing, shiny bald, and today my head is completely covered with a crop of new hair about one-half inch long. I took 18 treatments and I never expected that it could be done, but the proof is on my head. You may refer to me as a satisfied client.
Yours truly,
E. H.

Chicago, Ill., March 3rd, 1923.

Dear Sir:—
I have completed the series of twenty treatments in which you guaranteed a growth of new hair on my bald temples. You succeeded beyond my expectations as they are fully covered with a new growth of hair and I am pleased with the results. I can honestly recommend the Thomas Treatments as sure and efficient in scalp rejuvenation. I thank you for the valuable service.
Sincerely yours,
C. S.

Chicago, Ill., October 25th, 1922.

To Whom It May Concern:—
This is to certify that about a year ago my hair fell out from no apparent cause whatsoever, and I became almost totally bald. I thereupon consulted a few eminent doctors; they gave no encouragement or rendered any help; only sent me from one doctor to another. I gave up hope of ever having hair again.
Inadvertently, I saw the Thomas advertisement in the classified telephone directory, went to them at once and was told they would positively regrow the hair on my bald head or give me back my money. I began taking their scientific specialized treatments for the regrowing of my hair June 13th, 1922, and ending this date, I have a complete head of hair, about two inches long; a strong, healthy, luxurious growth. This speaks for itself what The Thomas' Original Discovery for Baldness had achieved on my head. I can recommend them to the public as absolutely conscientious and reliable in their statements or claims.
Sincerely yours,
L. C.

Chicago, Ill., March 8th, 1923.

Dear Sir:—
I am glad to have the privilege of endorsing your method of scalp treatments because of the marvelous achievement on my scalp. My trouble was frontal bone baldness, and hair dry and very brittle and simply would not grow. After taking 27 of your treatments the old hair has grown over one inch and assumed a healthy appearance, and the bald part is entirely covered with new hair and growing.
I can conscientiously recommend your treatments to any one in need of them.
Yours truly,
A. W.

Chicago, Ill., March 8th, 1923.

Dear Sir:—
I am certainly glad to testify as to the efficiency of your specialized treatments for growing hair on bald heads. I was totally bald except for a little short fuz on the crown. I received my first treatment Nov. 11th, 1922, and after twenty treatments my hair is over one inch long. I part it, a complete head of hair. Any one that says it can't be done will have a surprise in store for him if he takes the Thomas treatments. I can recommend them as the only hair growers in Chicago that positively guarantee hair or money back.
Yours truly,
J. J. C.

Chicago, Ill., March 3rd, 1923.

Dear Mr. Thomas:
In reply to your question whether I am satisfied with the Thomas System of Scalp Treatments for the regrowing of the hair will unqualifiedly say "Yes."
My trouble has extended for good many years, like many others, have tried various scalp treatments but found no results. When I came to you Dec. 18th, 1922, my hair was falling like the leaves of trees in autumn, and no hair on crown of head. Results: Hair stopped falling completely, new hair on crown of head almost one inch long so my friends tell me, and the scalp feels like it did when I was a kid. Thanks for the marvelous results obtained due to your treatments.
You are at liberty to refer to me any bald head that says "it can't be done" or any one in need of your services.
Very truly yours,
C. S.

Chicago, Ill., March 1st, 1923.

To Whom It May Concern:
This letter is for the purpose of endorsing the Thomas Original Discovery for Baldness, a new scientific method that had rejuvenated my scalp to the extent that the hair I had on my head which was never cut for six years began to grow and developed into a healthy, luxurious growth; besides an abundance of new hair where the old hair fell out, even the temples that were entirely bald are now coverd with a heavy crop of healthy hair.
In the past I have tried numerous remedies, but they all failed to produce results. I am glad to testify that The Thomas' are the real hair growers and can recommend them to any one in need of their great services.
Very truly yours,
J. M.

MOTORDOM

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question Miss Annabell Frost, 3012 Fulton street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Should automobile drivers be required to pass an examination and take out a license before being allowed to drive a car?

Where Asked.

7 South Dearborn street.

The Answers.

J. T. Curran, 9036 South Michigan avenue, auto salesman—Yes, because there are so many drivers who don't seem to know the traffic rules and regulations. They are continually getting other people into jams. If put through an examination they would not only have to learn the traffic rules but they would get some pointers about running their cars that would be appreciated by other autoists.

Mike Baglio, 1126 Cambridge avenue, clerk—They should, for one reason, to find out whether the fellow who gets out on the street with a car is crazy or not. Some of them are; some are not. That way they'd find out. If they examined everybody, and only licensed the fellows who were half way right with a machine, there wouldn't be so many accidents in Chicago.

Fred Blaser, 852 East 65th street, salesman—Absolutely. As a matter of fact, it is not such an easy thing to learn to drive a car safely, even though it may seem to come natural. No one should be allowed to drive a car on the streets of a city like Chicago until he can at least pass an examination. As it is now all drivers look alike. The car carries a license number; perhaps it would be better if it also carried the driver's license number.

Glen I. Barr, 834 North Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, salesman—We have a class of foreign teamsters who are now driving trucks two-thirds of whom are not intelligent enough to pass an examination to drive a car. This same class has no regard for the man on foot. The average business man shouldn't have to pass an examination, as they are careful enough. Of course if such a law went into effect they would all have to take it.

Samuel P. Kaiser, 3345 Douglas boulevard, office manager—Yes. The main reason why there are so many accidents today is because there are so many incompetent people driving machines. There are people who have been driving cars for years who are not now and never were safe behind the wheel. Another thing, people should be fined and the license revoked if caught speeding or driving carelessly or if caught driving while intoxicated.

Signs of the Times.

Times are out of joint if one must judge by the various advertising signs posted along our highways. One often finds in driving that they are barely holding their own if the mileage indicated on the signs is taken as correct. Again, one may find that his speedometer is not registering properly when he finds that he has covered a mile, judging from the signs, in much less than one minute.

Where proper provision is not made for signing highways by state highway departments the proper placement of advertising signs may be a help to the highway user. Incorrect signs or ugly signs should not be permitted along any road. One does not have to be free from superstition to disbelieve in signs as seen in many places.

Big Roads Meeting.

Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, New York highway commissioner; Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, Washington; Charles J. Bennett, Connecticut highway commissioner, and H. G. Shirley, chairman of the Virginia highway commission, have been asked by Gov. Gifford Pinchot to speak at the nation-wide highway conference to be held in Harrisburg, Pa., Friday and Saturday, March 23 and 24.

Acceptances received by the governor indicate presence at the conference of America's leading road builders. The sessions are to begin Friday morning and continue until Saturday afternoon.

WHERE TO PUT IT.

The radiator is the only place for alcohol in an automobile.

Even Auto Death Rate Fades When Business Grows

LIFE insurance companies point to the increasing death rate for automobile accidents. In 1922, in proportion to population, the number of automobile fatalities was higher than ever. But the great and encouraging fact from the standpoint of a motorist is that accidents are not increasing as rapidly as motor vehicles. Per automobile on the roads, fatal accidents are nearly 50 per cent fewer today than they were in 1914.

If you were an owner or an operator of an automobile in 1914, the chance was one in 356 that your car would be involved in a fatal accident. In 1922 the chance against you was but one in 800.

According to a study just completed by J. W. Perry, general manager of the automotive department of Johns-Manville, Inc., in 1915, one out of every 453 automobiles figured in a fatal accident; in 1916, one out of 468; 1917, one in 503; 1918, one in 670; 1919, one in 675; 1920, one in 788; 1921, one in 795, and 1922, one in 800.

THE NEW 1923 FIVE PASSENGER
HAYNES 57
SPORT SEDAN

WITH the protective advantages of the closed car, this newest Haynes combines a transcendent completeness of equipment, and appeals to those motoring instincts from which the present love of the sport model has grown.

There are no extras to buy. Bumpers front and rear, a spacious trunk, disc wheels with six 32 x 4½ cord tires, sun and vision visor, polished protection bars at the rear of the body, handsome individual steps—all these are as much a part of this car as its rich Burgundy Wine colored body and the famous Haynes-built light six motor.

This motor is started by a light touch of the driver's finger on a starter button which is part of the new Haynes instrument panel. Besides complete control of the starting and lighting this panel now contains a convenient gasoline gauge—an example of the thorough completeness with which Haynes engineers and designers have anticipated every need of the modern motorist.

This Week
see the Haynes at the convenient and beautifully appointed display rooms where we serve Haynes owners in our territory. Here you will find a representative showing of the complete Haynes line, and the utmost willingness to serve you to your complete satisfaction.

There is only one way accurately to characterize the Single-Six.

To say it is a Packard immediately places it in that exclusive class of cars from which the superlative kind of motoring is expected as a matter of course.

The Single-Six is entitled to this classification because it directly inherits all those qualities that make the name Packard the accepted measure of character in the fine car field.

Chicago Prepares Warm Welcome for Motor Tourists

Twelve Free Camp Sites Ordered in Forest Preserves.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

CHICAGO will be made the central control for thousands of motor tourists this season, following the establishment, about May 1, of twelve fully equipped free camp sites in the internationally famous Cook county forest preserves.

Ransom Kennicott, chief forester of the system, announced plans for the long needed improvement yesterday after the county board had approved Commissioner George Miller's resolution for the establishment of the camps.

They will be located on the main highways entering Chicago, and each will offer shelter, running water, toilet facilities, firewood, and open air cooking ranges for the free use of automobile parties. Most of them can accommodate scores of cars. Their location, in the heart of the finest natural woodland preserves in the country, less than an hour's run from the loop and near food and comfort supplies in county towns and cities, is expected to insure their immediate popularity.

Surplus war materials, already received by the county board, will make up the better part of the camping equipment. Field ranges, big enough to accommodate three or four families at the same time, will be set in concrete bases at the edge of the big shelter houses in each camp. These shelters will include a wood framework covered with heavy canvas and divided by two partitions, running the length and width of the buildings. Sides of the buildings will be open, but the partitions will afford perfect shelter against wind or rain. They can be erected at a cost of about $50 each, according to the chief's plans.

The new camps will be free to all automobile parties for forty-eight hours. If tourists desire to remain in the preserves longer they can secure permits to camp for several weeks in other parts of the preserve system. A caretaker with police powers will have charge of each of the free sites.

Camp locations, picked with a view to their easy access from the main roads, the beauty of their surroundings and like desirable features, have been selected by the preserve service. They include:

Green Bay road at Glencoe;

Waukeegan and Dundee roads near Glencoe;

Milwaukee avenue south of Wheeling;

Milwaukee avenue at Niles;

Rand road at Des Plaines;

West River road one mile north of Des Plaines;

Intersection of Higgins and River roads;

Washington boulevard in Maywood;

Roosevelt road and the Des Plaines river;

Fifth avenue and 22d street, La Grange;

Ogden avenue at Lyons;

Beverly Hills;

Chicago Heights, Dixie highway.

The last two sites were used extensively last year. Other points in the preserves, which surround the city, gave ideal outings to thousands of local people, but the great tourist body has never been given particular encouragement in making Chicago its camping headquarters. The cross country trail parties, which last year numbered well over 1,000,000 in western states, was inclined to detour around Chicago and take advantage of the free camps established in practically every one of the smaller cities and towns along the interstate automobile routes. It was found that the majority of motor tourists, rich and poor alike, prefer camping when the weather permits. They pay their way liberally and make the camp site a financial asset to any community.

Action of the county board insures a warm Chicago welcome for the trail people and a substantial increase in the number of summer visitors to the city.

Stop the Chatter.

Brake rods are apt to chatter when they become loose or worn. An easy way to eliminate a great deal of this noise is to loosen the rod and slide a rubber hose over the one nearest to the frame of the car. Sometimes it is necessary to put a hose on both rods.

THE CHANGING WORLD

Not long ago driving with the top down was the most popular of outdoor sports. More than half the cars seen on any city street or country highway in fair weather went wide open to the breezes. Now the car without a top is an unusual sight where motors run. But one car with the top down is to be seen in this picture, snapped behind the grandstand at a recent Los Angeles speedway race. [P. & A. Photo.]

Gas Secrets.

The correct proportion of gasoline for a perfect fuel mixture is .07 of a pound of gas to a pound of dry air. It is possible to operate on a mixture containing as much as .12 of a pound of gas to the pound of dry air, which is nearly twice as much gasoline as is needed. This wide range of mixture strength constitutes the greatest factor in wastage of gasoline. The majority of car owners run more nearly at the maximum strength than at the minimum, which would give them better results. They are using nearly twice as much fuel as there is any need for.

SOURCE OF REVENUE

More than $400,000,000 was paid last year in the form of excise taxes, registration fees, gasoline taxes, wheel taxes, and various other levies put on by state and city on the automobile.

Stars of Track Turn to Famous Hoosier Saucer

FOR the eleventh time the most famous of automobile speed contests in the world will be run May 30 on the Indianapolis motor speedway, the 500 mile International sweepstakes. This event, for an aggregate cash purse of $100,000, holds the record for sporting events in America, and since 1914 has always played to more than 100,000 speed fans. The record was established in 1922 when 135,000 people saw Jimmy Murphy win the tenth annual race.

There has been some question in the minds of the fans about the coming race due to the consideration of a bill in the Indiana legislature to prevent any sporting contests on Memorial day. The bill was vetoed by Gov. McCray.

Next May 30 the stars of Europe and America will battle for the big cash prize and the glory which goes with it. Four cars have been entered to date, the first by Harry Miller of Los Angeles, who has not named a driver, and the other three by the Packard Motor Car company of Detroit. The Packard team has not been named but Ralph de Palma and Joe Boyer will pilot two of the Detroit made cars. This is only the vanguard of the American field. Europe will have entries of cars from England, France, Germany, and Italy in the race, although the entries have not been formally made. T. E. Myers, secretary and general manager of the speedway, visited Europe last fall and was promised the entries.

The Indianapolis race has been the crucible of the motor industry. In its ten previous races the engineering fraternity has been able to solve many of its mechanical problems. The race started in 1911 with engines of 600 cubic inches piston displacement, when seventy-five miles an hour was a world's record. The size of the engines have been consistently reduced, until this year the race will be run with engines of one-fifth the size of the first race and a maximum speed of a third more than at the inception of the race. This race has developed the long stroke, small bore, economical engine and refined the design and metals of the entire automobile chassis.

General Sales Manager E. T. Strong of the Buick Motor company, now in Chicago, brings rosy reports of the factory business outlook. The executive, enroute to the Pacific coast, told District Sales Manager H. C. Carter that Buick production has remained constantly at the high water mark since last August with no signs of abatement in sight.

George Berry, identified for several years with the truck industry in Chicago, has been given charge of the Reo "fleet" business for the Chicago branch of Reo, according to announcement by Clarence E. Eldridge, manager.

DORT SIX

Demand for the Dort Six in Chicago has now reached such tremendous proportions that despite shipments of carload after carload from the factory we are being taxed to the utmost to make deliveries. Its overwhelming popularity, owners tell us, is due primarily to the brilliant performance of its amazing oil-cushioned motor which stamps it as a car profoundly different and superior. In fact, these owners say, no other car has ever so fully met their ideals of fineness at a properly moderate price. You can own the Dort Six for a payment of only one-third down. Convincing Proof

You make no mistake when you select the series 23 Studebaker Special-Six Touring Car. You can determine, in advance, why it is so desirable a car to own by doing four simple things.

Come in and inspect it carefully—from radiator to stop-and-tail light. Note its long graceful lines, the beauty of its finish and upholstery, its sturdy construction, roominess and unusual equipment.

Get behind the wheel yourself. See how conveniently all controls are placed. Notice what a relief it is to have a one-piece, rain-proof windshield, giving unobstructed view of the road ahead. See how easily it steers—how faithfully it holds the road.

Test its acceleration, power, flexibility. Drive through traffic at low speed in high gear. See how conveniently it can be parked where space is limited.

Then compare any car within $300 of its price with the Special-Six. Compare the specifications, performance, comfort, appearance and refinements.

And finally talk to some Special-Six owners. Ask them what they think of the car. Inquire about its dependability, its endurance, its economy of maintenance. Ask them frankly about their all-round satisfaction with the Special-Six.

The Special-Six possesses every essential for lasting satisfaction.

Studebaker's overhead per car is low because of large volume, the virtual elimination of parts-makers' profits and because Studebaker builds three models of six-cylinder cars with only one manufacturing and marketing expense. These savings, which are considerable, are reflected in the price to you.

The name Studebaker stands for quality, durability, comfort and integrity.

Auto Plants Make Final Effort in Race with Demand

Farmers Rush Into Truck Market with Cash Orders.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., March 17.—[Special.]—The deluge of orders for passenger cars and trucks has descended, and with no indications of abatement, manufacturers are at their wits' end to supply the demand. In fact, it can't be done. A brave effort is being made, however, to keep pace with the unprecedented demand for spring deliveries now asked of the Michigan factories. Many of the factories which almost doubled their January and February figures this year, are still behind the orders.

The industry has ceased looking for business—it is coming to it in volumes far greater than the most optimistic predicted. The rail situation, still a source of concern, has failed to dampen the ardor displayed in local factories. A shortage of freight cars is still great, although embargoes at most points have been lifted.

One of the most serious questions at the present time, and one that will surely curtail production, is the inability by many of the plants to be provided with sufficient high grade automobile steel. The great demand for cars, and the speeding up of all factories, has caught the steel plants either unprepared or physically unable to satisfy the demands. Automotive plants are close behind the steel plants, or on equal terms with them. The dealers are begging for more cars and the builders are begging for more steel.

Truck sales were never better. Orders are coming in steadily with requests for deliveries at the earliest possible moment. A peculiar feature of the truck business lies in the fact that at least 50 per cent of the buyers are paying spot cash. Where the farmers of the great west used to buy one truck and take their time in paying, they are now placing orders for two, or three, and are paying cash, and the city industries are adding substantially to their already large fleets.

Automobile men are watching with interest the advancing prices of commodities. Industrial conditions throughout the country were never better. This spells increased demand for commodities, and with increased demand comes higher prices.

But, as yet, there have been no increases in the prices of automobiles or trucks in but two or three cases, and those were announced some time ago. Factories are reaping a wonderful financial harvest with the present prices, and no present indications point to a general increase.

Present conditions in the industry would indicate that there are few skeptical persons who believe that the stories of a marvelous demand for cars are greatly inflated. Buying is right now on in full blast. Those who place orders within the next month will undoubtedly be told that their cars will be delivered to them "at the earliest possible moment."

From Toledo comes the report that cars called for within 250 miles of the Willys-Overland plant must be driven away, the railroads refusing to handle them. This condition exists in spite of the fact that the production has been 800 cars daily since March 2 and will be increased to 1,000 before April 1.

Figures just given out by various automobile plants are interesting.

The Packard is now in its greatest production period with 100 cars daily. With 22 working days in February the Chevrolet averaged 1,400 daily, or more than 30,000 for the month. The Rickenbacker production for the short month was 50 per cent greater than January, and March will top February by 33 per cent. One shipment of 25 carloads was sent to California this week. Hupp sold 3,400 cars in January and 3,610 in February, and March will show a production of 4,000, limited only by transportation facilities. This is twice as great as that of the corresponding months of 1922.

Paige-Jewett has 6,000 orders on hand for delivery before the first of April. More than 1,000 in excess of the plant's production capacity. Fifty per cent of its shipments are by the driveway route.

Oldsmobile production showed a gain of 149 per cent in February over the same month of one year ago. The Maxwell Motor corporation has a 1923 production scale of 60,000 cars. This is 10,000 greater than that of 1922. In addition the Chalmers has a 12,000 car schedule. Dodge Bros., with a daily capacity of 725 cars, is working to its limit, but unable to fill orders. The Moon February sales were greater than the combined sales for the first five months of 1922, according to President Stewart McDonald. February was the company's second largest month.

Studebaker sales during 1922 totaled 110,269 cars. Erection and equipment of new units are now completed and in operation, giving the concern a daily capacity of 600 cars, or about 150,000 for the year.

Unfilled foreign orders of the Dort Motor company are 260 per cent greater than at this time last year. The Nash plant at Milwaukee plans for the immediate speeding up of production, but orders now on hand preclude the catching up with demand for several months.

The growing public demand for the New Overland is evidenced by this train load of cars ordered by one of our Chicago dealers.

—the twenty-five and better gasoline mileage of the Overland—its Timken and New Departure bearings in front and rear axles.

—the all-steel body and baked enamel finish of the Overland—its longer lines, higher hood, lower seats and all-round greater beauty.

CLEVELAND SIX

The Quality Makes the Price More Startling

WHEN you hear a man speak of a quality car, you instinctively know it has more than four cylinders.

But do you know that of the quality cars, 75% are powered by six cylinder motors? And that of 68 such cars costing between $1500 and $10,800, only 5 are fours? Obviously there is an established preference for the six.

And if you ride in a Cleveland Six, you will understand why.

In the Cleveland you will find a motor that takes hills without a flying start and that makes traffic driving a matter of using the accelerator, and not the gear shift.

You will find singularly attractive Fisher-built bodies—gracefully proportioned, attractively finished, comfortably upholstered and completely appointed.

You will find a chassis so staunch and rugged that it delivers thousands of miles without even minor adjustments.

Down to the smallest detail, you will find it characterized by the fine craftsmanship which is the only basis of quality—and the only basis of lasting satisfaction.

And that is why its price is startling.

Weight and Speed Tests Made Basis for Bridge Plans

AMES, Ia.—Research information obtained during the last summer by the Iowa experiment station relative to the effect of sudden application of loads and the speed of motor vehicles on highway bridges is being used in the design of a $28,-$31,000 suspension bridge connecting Philadelphia, Pa., and Camden, N. J.

G. S. Webster, consulting engineer and chairman of the board of engineers on design, recently wrote to Anson Marston, dean of engineering and director of the engineering experiment station, asking for a complete report of the investigation, which was partially published as a progress report in bulletin 63 of the experiment station. Mr. Webster stated that he had not yet been able to get reliable data on highway bridge impact and that the work performed at Ames would be of great value to him in his studies of the Delaware river bridge.

This bridge is to be of the single deck type, with a main suspension span of 1,750 feet and two side spans of 710 feet each, flanked by viaducts and earth fill. There will be a clearance for ships of 135 feet above mean high water. It is designed to carry six lines of traffic and has a roadway of fifty-seven feet.

The experiment station, in cooperation with the United States bureau of public roads, is intending to continue the research this summer under the direction of Almon H. Fuller, professor of civil engineering, who had charge of the work last season. When the project is completed it is expected that the present specifications for highway bridges will be altered, as it is being found that the present heavy trucking and the high speed of automobile traffic is more severe on the bridges than was expected.

Advocates Mirrors.

Accidents on the highways could be greatly decreased by the passage of uniform state laws requiring every truck to carry a mirror, giving a view of the road immediately to the rear, and by requiring every horse drawn vehicle, as well as automobiles, to display some sort of light when using the roads at night.

This is the opinion of M. O. Eldridge, director of roads of the American Automobile association good roads board, after making a careful digest of the traffic laws of all the states of the union. Mr. Eldridge, in a report to the secretary of commerce, sets forth that thirteen states have laws requiring the mirror on trucks, but that very few have any regulation for horse drawn vehicles.

Sweeping Probe of Gas Prices Asked by A. A. A.

OUTSTANDING features of the American Automobile association executive board meeting held in Detroit last week, were a demand for a thorough investigation of gasoline prices in the United States, and strong governmental support for the development of crude rubber plantations.

There was strong evidence of collusion of gasoline prices, according to a report which was read, despite the fact oil companies denied any such attempts.

This matter was brought before the meeting following the report of the recent investigation by the United States senate committee, which looked into gasoline prices. A resolution was adopted by the executive board recommending that the attorney general take steps to prosecute those responsible for alleged price fixing.

A report showed that since the British owners had caused a protective tariff to be placed on crude rubber, the price had gone from 14 to 37 cents at Ceylon, India, within a few months. The action was condemned by the A. A. A. board, which recommended that the United States government aid in the development of rubber plantations in this country and South America.

ADJUST THE VALVES.

When the intake valve tappet has too much clearance it closes too early for the engine to absorb a full charge of fuel. The result is that the engine on full throttle works as if the throttle were only part way open. On the other hand, when the clearance is insufficient, hot gases leak through, burn out, and leave the valves and seats pitted, forcing frequent regrinding. It may even be necessary to resurface.

Going to buy a New Car this Spring?

~ then consider these things:

1 Every week, more and more buyers are choosing Oaklands. In little more than a year, the demand for the Six-44 has taxed the production facilities of the Oakland factories.

2 Oakland is so confident of the superior merit of its engine that it places upon every engine a written 15,000 mile guarantee against excess oil in the combustion chamber. Oakland is the only company to offer such an unusual guarantee!

3 Oakland is the only company that gives you a definite gauge with which to judge, in advance, the actual mileage the essential parts of the Oakland Six will deliver—free from trouble or expense.

4 Oakland service stations are keeping accurate records of upkeep expenses on Six-44's. In Cleveland, for instance, the average upkeep last year was only $8.06 per car. Other cities report similarly low averages.

When You Buy An Oakland—You Buy Known Mileage

You see new Oaklands everywhere! Every week, you meet them on the streets in increasing numbers! Have you considered the reasons for Oakland's phenomenal success?

It is simply the result of Oakland's purpose to build the finest light-six in the world—a purpose realized some eighteen months ago in the Six-44.

Oakland's success has been justly merited—merited by definite superiorities that will become more and more evident to you the more closely you inspect the car.

It is these definite superiorities—that enable Oakland to offer buyers a definite gauge by which they can estimate the minimum number of miles their Oaklands will deliver. It is these same superiorities that enable Oakland to give a special 15,000 mile engine performance guarantee.

And it is this same superior quality that alone is responsible for the unusual records—in open competition and in private service—that have been established by Oaklands during the past year.

Twice, you will remember, Oakland won important national economy and endurance contests. In Cleveland, actual records show an average annual upkeep cost of only $8.06.

If you are considering the purchase of a new car this spring—you simply cannot afford to overlook the Oakland.

It is a beautiful car—and an extremely comfortable one. It has ample power for any emergency; its six cylinders insure a remarkable smoothness of operation at all speeds. Its economy has become the subject of universal comment. The table of mileages shown below estimates, with remarkable accuracy, the minimum number of miles you can expect from your Oakland.

Compare these facts with your own personal experiences with any cars of similar price. Analyze the Oakland. Then remember that Oakland—a division of General Motors Corporation—offers this splendid car upon a basis of definite and actual mileage.

You will then readily understand why more and more discriminating buyers are daily convincing themselves that no other light-six offers the dollar-for-dollar value so evident throughout the Oakland line.

To Owners of Low Priced Cars

If one car lasts you twice as long as another car—even should the second car be only half its price—you would do better to buy the more durable vehicle.

It would cost you less for maintenance; it would give you better performance; its service would prove far more consistent and reliable.

That is why you would do better to buy the Hupmobile.

The Hupmobile gives you greater economy of upkeep and operation than most lower priced cars; and it affords the unfailing service, and the durability, of cars two and three times its price.

MOTOR-DOM

Spirits of Dead Cars Haunt Many Roads of Service

Auto Usefulness Goes On Long After "Bus" Is Junked.

WHAT becomes of the old, worn-out automobiles?

They are sturdy pieces of mechanism built for many years of service, but to all the time finally arrives when days of usefulness are over.

They do not, like the deacon's famous "one-hoss shay," disintegrate, but there must be some end to them, for none of them last forever.

Some hundreds are wrecked every year when careless drivers try to beat trains to grade crossings. Thousands are destroyed by fire as statistics of insurance companies show. Other thousands are wantonly destroyed by ruhning them into old stone quarries, lakes or even the ocean, in order to collect insurance on them. Many are dismantled slowly by rural owners who display much ingenuity in utilizing the parts. But after all these, there remain tens of thousands to be accounted for.

There are over 12,000,000 cars in use in this country today and the annual output in the United States is more than 2,500,000. This means that the number of cars "passing out" every year must be larger than can be accounted for in any of the above enumerated ways.

The truth is that a great majority of decrepit cars pass into the hands of motor undertakers, known under the trade name of "parts dealers," and by them are scrapped and almost everything but the sound of the honk becomes a source of salvage.

There are hundreds of companies in this country doing an extensive business in buying and junking old and obsolete models, and their yards are in truth motor car cemeteries.

These automobile junk men buy old cars which roll to their yards under their own power sometimes and there they are taken apart by skilled hands.

A visit to one of these motor car plants will disclose high piles of assorted parts. In one corner will be a pile of radiators as high as a bungalow; in another will be a vast heap of axles. Scattered around are large piles of springs and motor blocks.

In large bins are piles of brass, copper and aluminum fittings. During the war these items were among the largest sources of revenue from scrapped cars. In those days scrap copper sold for as high as 40 cents a pound; brass brought as much as 25 cents a pound, and aluminum sold readily at 30 cents a pound.

Even the old frayed tires yield profit. In fact there is little left after the motor junk man gets through dismantling old cars.

Most of the old cars that find their way into the motor car cemeteries are purchased from city owners. In the country, farmers find many ways of using their old cars long after they have ceased functioning as vehicles.

The rubber and small metal parts are sold to traveling junk men, but a farmer can attach the motor of his car to the windmill; he can use the seats for swings, suspended by chains on his front porch, and the wheels he can find use for in making improvised haulers for use on the farm or for hauling his boat to and from his favorite fishing lake. When he is finally through which his car all that remains is the metal carcass, which is left to rust away.

Some of the large dealers in worn-out cars frequently handle and dismantle several hundreds of machines every year.

QUEEN OF SPEED

Italy might find several less attractive representatives of the motor speedway than Signora Avanzi, what? This is the way she looked recently in a tour of triumph through the streets of Milan after having won three hotly contested hills from some of the best speed talent on the continent. More Room Behind Train Than Ahead Says Club Report

ACCIDENT fatalities at grade crossings are setting a record for frequency recently in the southern part of the state, according to the safety bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Officials say in their report that they are at a loss to understand why so many motorists fail to realize that there is as much room behind the train as there is in front of it.

There is only one safe way to avoid accidents at grade crossings, points out the safety bureau, and that is when approaching a crossing where there is not a clear and unobstructed view of the track in both directions to stop, look, and listen. If the way is clear and no train approaching, shift into first or second gear and hurry across.

Don't shift gears again until clear of the tracks. This precaution is necessary to minimize the chance of flooding the carburetor and stalling your car in the middle of the railroad right of way in case you should see a train approaching and nervously push the accelerator down too rapidly.

An additional precaution to be followed where there are two or more tracks is, after you have waited for a train to pass to allow it to travel far enough so that you may see the other track is clear and that there is no train approaching in the shadow of the one just passed. Many people have been killed because of the failure to take this precaution.

ENEMY OF NOISE WOULD LIMIT USE OF MOTOR HORNS

THE Chicago crusade against unnecessary commercial din and street noises was given a perceptible impetus last week when the Yellow Cab company advised its drivers to use their warning horns only when safety demands the "honk."

Numerous Chicago concerns operating truck fleets equipped with piercing whistles and like warning signals, have issued similar orders, and a few have changed their equipment to less objectionable devices, according to P. A. Houlihan, retired general manager of the Chicago and Alton railroad, who has interested himself in this phase of the crusade.

"Sixty per cent of the noise made by automobile horns is unnecessary," he declared. "The hornless automobile may become necessary. Scores of Chicago drivers persist in driving with the horn instead of the intelligence and the result is added confusion and danger to both motorists and pedestrians."

Protest Ordinance.

Members of the Automobile Associated Trades of Illinois have launched a campaign for the revision of the recently passed Chicago ordinance which requires licensing of shops engaged in all kinds of motor repair work.

A massmeeting has been called by the association in the Fort Dearborn hotel Tuesday night in which plans for the campaign will be perfected. The body, chartered last December, is an affiliation of various automobile crafts in the city? It recently took over the Automobile Master Mechanics' association and the Batterymen's association, according to F. H. Avery, president, and also includes the service of the National Bureau of Special Investigation. The body's object is the raising of automobile repair standards in Chicago, officers say.

ALASKA GROWS.

Three years ago Alaska had only 200 automobiles, according to Firestone statisticians. Now there are more than 1,000.

MOTOR RULES HELP AMERICANIZATION WORK IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Mich.—[Special Correspondence].—Among the agencies and institutions which foster citizenships in the ranks of Detroit aliens, the automobile takes a position near the top. The police department regulation that persons who would drive automobiles must possess declaration papers at least, is also an aid in Americanization.

A majority of the persons who visit the license bureau are aliens. There many of them learn for the first time that before they can apply for a license they must have first papers and declare allegiance to American authorities and customs.

As a result of that ruling there is a daily file of aliens going to the naturalization bureau for their first papers. Armed with proper papers, they return to the bureau ready to drive like true Americans, provided they get past the tests of reading the "stop" and "go" signs and can recite the traffic ordinances.

FARM AND GARDEN

Will County Calls Hubam Clover Best of Legume Crops

By Frank Ridgway.

WHEN Herbert W. Mumford, the new dean of the agricultural college at the University of Illinois recently pointed out some of the important changes needed in Illinois' system of agriculture, he said: "A very large increase of legumes, such as clover, sweet and cement, alfalfa, soybeans, and cowpeas, is needed."

Farmers in various parts of the state, realizing the wisdom of such advice, are greatly increasing their legume acreage this year, which will result in the improvement of soil fertility and increase the protein feed produced to be used in balancing live stock rations.

One of the Best.

Through concerted action of farmers in Will county, thousands of acres will be seeded to legumes this spring, manifesting belief in Dean Mumford's recommendation. The experience of farmers in that county in growing legumes, particularly biennial and hubam clovers, during the last few seasons, has done much to develop practical production methods that will aid other growers who are planning to try out some of the leguminous crops.

"We find Hubam one of the best legume crops to grow in our country," says Edward A. Winkler, a legume enthusiast and an extensive beekeeper, who is primarily interested in the growing of clover to furnish nectar for bees. "Hubam works in nicely with our cropping systems. It is grown along with other crops usually, and produces a valuable feed, greatly improving the physical and chemical condition of the soil, besides yielding a heavy harvest of nectar for honey bees."

Sow It in March.

The latter part of March, Will county farmers find, is the best time to sow Hubam clover seed, just before a rain or while it is raining in the spring when the ground is spongy. In this way the seeds work into the ground about one-fourth of an inch, which is the right depth. It is sown in with fall grains, such as wheat, or rye, or with some spring crop like oats. If sown with oats the seeding is done after discing at the rate of eight or ten pounds of seed to the acre; then the soil is rolled. Richness and degree of acidity determine to some extent the rate of seeding.

Mr. Winkler says if the soil is black and no acid is present, about six or eight pounds of seed to the acre is plenty; if a clay soil, poor, and the acidity is high, from twelve to fifteen pounds of seed will be needed to the acre, even if the limestone is added.

Ensilage Parts Differ.

Several farmers in Will county, big planters of Hubam clover, do not use corn in making ensilage, but sweet clover alone. However, some believe that a much better silage can be made where one-third corn and two-thirds sweet clover is used.

Hubam can be used to a better advantage than ordinary clovers because of the time of blooming and maturing, according to Mr. Winkler. Biennial clover matures too early to be put into the silo with corn, while Hubam is in the right stage when corn is in its prime for making ensilage.

Another advantage is that the ground used for growing Hubam, which is an annual, for silage also produces a grain crop the same year, while the land used for growing the biennial, a two year plant, produces only one crop.

Revolutionizing Honey Business.

"Hubam is produced in a single season, and I believe the stems are not as strong and woody as the biennial, which does not mature until the second year," says Mr. Winkler. "Sometimes the biennial clover is pastured in the fall of the first year and by the time it is ready for use the next summer, the second year, the stems are old and strong, and I think it produces a stronger milk, butter and honey than Hubam.

"This new clover, Hubam, is revolutionizing the business of producing honey," adds Mr. Winkler. "I can produce honey at 6 cents a pound by pasturing my bees on Hubam, and it costs at least 15 cents a pound in sections of the middle west where Hubam is not grown. I haven't any to sell at that price, nor am I preaching lower prices for honey, but we might just as well face facts and produce our honey at a much lower cost if we are to sell it and make a profit."

Plenty of Nectar.

With Hubam clover seed selling at 30 cents a pound, growers in Will county are able to make about $70 an acre after shrinkage has been deducted where they harvest the crop for seed. Beemen figure that every acre of Hubam is worth $10 to a colony of bees—one acre furnishes plenty of nectar for a strong colony.

"Alternating Hubam and grain together one year with corn the next we have come to the conclusion that it improves the fertility of our soil and increases the yield of both small grain and corn," says the Will county farmer. "Hubam is a heavy nitrogen gatherer—the nitrogen is taken from the air by the clover plants—and it adds nitrogen to the soil rather than removing it as grains and other non-legumes do. Hubam plants have long roots that loosen the soil, aerating it, thus favoring the development of beneficial bacteria. They bring up other plant foods from the lower layers of the soil, rendering them available for the crops that follow. Whether Hubam is cut and used as silage or hay, the plant food removed by the clover is returned to the soil in the form of manure."

Prize for Longest Root.

Roots of Hubam plants often penetrate the soil to a great depth. Last year the Will County Hubam Seed Growers' association, an organization of farmers, offered a prize of 50 cents a foot for the longest Hubam root grown in the county. Dave Boughton of Joliet, won the prize with a Hubam root that measured sixty-two and a half inches, more than five feet in length. Mr. Boughton said that this was only a lateral root, that a part of the main root had been broken off in digging it out of the ground.

From one to five tons to the acre is the rate Will county growers apply limestone on the soil where Hubam is to be grown.

Most of the cutting is done with a binder. Some use a mower. The cutting for hay or silage is done about the time all the blooms fall. This works to the advantage of the beekeeper, giving the bees a chance to gather the nectar before harvest. This clover is often too rank to be plowed under without cutting.

The best time to cut Hubam for seed is when two-thirds to three-fourths of the seed pods have turned brown to black, according to growers' experience.

Not Seeded in Fall.

Hubam, being an annual, is not seeded in the fall because it is killed by winter freezes. However, many of the thick coated seeds that fall on the ground come through the winter and germinate in the spring, producing strong plants. Several farmers in Will county last fall drilled wheat in Hubam stubble fields and believe they have enough clover seed on the ground to give a fair stand this summer.

Disposing of Perishables.

Aaron Sapiro, cooperative marketing authority and attorney for Pacific coast growers, has been employed as counsel for the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers. This agency has signed up 50,000 carloads of perishables and will handle the selling of these farm products this year.

Saying the Last Word on Live Stock Feeding

The eighteenth edition of "Feeds and Feeding"—the book DeWitt C. Wing, editor of the Breeders' Gazette, calls "the Bible of Live Stock Feeders"—is now being rolled off the press by the thousands to meet the demands of farmers and breeders all over the world. Probably more copies have been printed of this student and breeders' handbook than any other agricultural book written.

The last edition has just been rewritten by F. B. Morrison, professor of animal husbandry and assistant director of the agricultural experiment station at the University of Wisconsin. Early editions were written by W. A. Henry, emeritus professor of the same university.

In this illustrated volume of 770 pages the author has taken up every phase involved in transforming feeds into meat. It covers all feeding problems of all classes of farm animals, including dairy and beef cattle, hogs, sheep, and horses, and takes into consideration the important discoveries made in recent years concerning the science and practice of live stock feeding.

Prof. Morrison has rewritten the book to include the latest information and to adapt it to changed economic conditions since the world war. Just as in previous editions, the results of many important investigations, completed so recently as not yet to be in print, have been furnished by scientists throughout the country, in order that the findings might be presented in this revision."

Ask for Guarantee.

Do you remember away back when pioneer farmers spun their own wool, wove their own cloth, and did their tailoring at home? It was not difficult for a farmers or his wife to detect a cotton thread in a home made woolen blanket or a suit of clothes. Their trained, sensitive fingers, keen eyes, and "truth in fabric" made laws unnecessary in those days. Sensitive fingers and keen eyes are apparently needed today, and the American Farm Bureau federation officials are urging farmers and their wives to ask for a guarantee with goods that are supposed to be made of wool.

Bureau Session at Capital.

For the first time in two years the executive committee of the state farm bureau will meet at Springfield. The committeemen will open their first sessions this week and will be on the ground floor at the capital prepared to take an active part in farm legislation that is coming up at this session of the legislature.

POULTRY TIPS

If you have a good poultry tip you would like to pass on to other breeders, send it to the Agricultural Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Poultrymen have learned it pays to candle every egg that goes into the incubator. If only a few eggs are to be incubated, each one can be candled separately, but the breeder of many chicks does not always have time for this. Instead of candling them in the rush to get all the incubators going he often plies in the eggs and takes a chance on their being fertile. Every infertile egg takes up space that could be used in incubating a good egg. Candling may be done with a fair degree of accuracy by passing an electric light bulb under the tray after the eggs have been put in the incubator. Infertile or stale eggs may be detected in this way. This is not to be recommended if time will permit thorough candling, but it is better than using uncandled eggs.

Farmers who do not have electric lights installed in their poultry houses may use ordinary lanterns to good advtnage to lengthen the day for their birds. A lantern will furnish enough light for the hens to see their feed and winter egg production may be increased.

Eggs are easily chilled at this time of year. Unless they are gathered three or four times a day they are likely to be exposed on cold days long enough to kill the germ. An ordinary living room, where the temperature is kept around 70 degrees, is a good place to keep the eggs that are being saved for the incubator.

GARDEN NOTES

Never plant sweet potatoes, pumpkins, or squashes in the garden where you expect to grow two crops in a single season. All of these crops require from 130 to 150 days to mature. The bush squash, however, matures in from sixty to eighty days, but the vine squash utilizes the full season.

The smooth pea is the one to start early, especially in lake shore gardens, because it is harder than the wrinkled type. Wrinkled peas often rot in the ground if planted too early, while smooth peas will germinate even when the soil is cold and wet.

Radishes and spinach are two of the gardener's old standbys for early planting on ground where at least two crops in a single season are to be grown on the same plot. They are not only hardy but mature early enough to be out of the way for another crop.

In planting the second crop it is a good plan to stimulate the growth by adding bone meal. Scatter it over the surface thinly, rake it in, and then sow the seed. It is soon worked into the soil, and within two weeks the plants begin to show signs of the plant food they get from the bone meal.

If plants are kept growing at a rampant pace in the warm hotbeds right up to the time they are to be transplanted in the open garden they are likely to be sappy and spindling. Harden them off gradually as transplanting time approaches, give them a breath of fresh air frequently, and do not subject them to sudden changes of temperatures. If this is done losses will be less, the plants will start off much more readily, and will remain thrifty throughout the season.

Kentucky Farmers Meet.

Coöperative marketing of southern crops will be the outstanding feature of the annual meeting of the Kentucky Farm Bureau federation which is to be held at Louisville on March 29 and 30. O. E. Bradfute and Walton Peteet of the national organization will be among the principal speakers. Mr. Bradfute also will speak before a meeting of midwest bankers at Oklahoma City, Okla, March 28.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

(Copyright: 1923: Fairchild News Service.)

NEW YORK.—New prices of knitted underwear named by the large firm of P. H. Hanes Knitting company show advances of 15 to 20 per cent over opening prices named in December. The radical increase causes a stir in the market. Prices are regarded as more nearly on a par with present costs of raw materials.

NEW YORK.—Unfavorable weather is checking activities in the manufactured fur market. Producers feel that with a late spring, the furs already bought by retailers will carry them over. Some are now planning for fall.

LONDON.—While other markets are picking up, gloomy reports are arriving from the Dundee linen market. It is declared Scotch linen industry is passing through a "most serious period."

PARIS.—The wholesale blouse market is not extraordinarily active in export business but buying of batik blouses for the United States continues. It is being brought out at cheap prices.

LONDON.—Wholesale millinery market reports indicate retailers are buying good quantities of women's Bangkok hats.

CHEMNITZ, Germany. — Americans are briskly buying knit goods, and gloomy forebodings for the local market are swept away. Manufacturers are making up for losses suffered in the depression of home trade.

LONDON.—U. S. industrial penetration of Britain is progressing, but it is not being advertised here. American silk stockings find a broader market. Even Skinner's satin and some woolens and worsteds now are being imported from the United States.

Apperson is the first to free the driver's compartment of both gear-shift and emergency brake levers. The Apperson Pre-selecting, Mechanical Gear-shift makes this possible.

APPERSON — Built on KNOWLEDGE — EST 1865

It has literally taken thirty years to produce the present Apperson. There isn't an ounce of theory in the whole car—no surmise—nothing experimental, even in the most trivial detail. It is truly built on knowledge.

You will be favorably startled with this car's unusual ease of handling, in traffic squeeze—in flat-to-curb parking. Of luxurious proportions (130 inch wheelbase), yet it parks as easily as a small car.

Notably quiet—free and effortless in steering—snappy—worlds of power. Its clean accessibility and simplicity of design is astounding.

The Apperson pre-selecting mechanical gear-shift is controlled by a touch, without taking the hand from the wheel. The emergency brake control is on the instrument board.

All accessories are harmoniously inbuilt, every practical requirement being anticipated and provided. A permanent top, with curtains carried in concealed compartments; six cord tires; wood or wire wheels optional; cowl ventilator; trunk rack and body bars, with dust and rainproof trunk fitted with suitcases; double type spring bumpers front and rear; sun shade, windshield wings and automatic windshield cleaner; rear-view mirror; gasoline gauge and motor temperature indicator on the instrument board.

Yes, 1923 has produced a higher standard in automobiles.

Mechanical excellence has always been a deciding factor in placing Apperson cars. This car is its own reason for ownership. See this Apperson. Ride in it. Drive it. It confidently invites your most searching attention.

TRADESMEN 'SEE' CHINA WITH RATE ON FREIGHT CUT

BY SCRUTATOR.

Hastened by recent reduction of freight rates to the coast, Chicago business is taking renewed interest in China. The cuts, which range from 10 to 33⅓ per cent, are far short of an even break with the rates from the Atlantic seaboard via Panama. Railroad men say that these rates cannot be met. But the reductions give Chicago manufacturers a sporting chance. They can shoot at the orders and bag a few anyhow. Much Chinese business has come to Chicago regardless of rate handicaps because no other city could supply what was wanted.

The advantage enjoyed by the Atlantic cities may be realized from this incident. A few months ago a Chicago house saved $90 in freights on a shipment to Shanghai by routing it east to Philadelphia and thence through the canal. Pacific coast ports are adversely affected by such conditions, but they enjoy benefits that the midwest does not share. Even before the war, wheat from Oregon was finding its way through the newly opened canal to Savannah and Charleston.

Chicago's reawakened interest in the Chinese markets led to the organization of the China club, now headed by R. M. Calkins, a vice president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway, who has had first hand contact with the Chinese railroad game. Like all other railroad men, who have ever been in China, Calkins is a bull on Celestial rails. How can a man help it, when he sees a country whose one province produces thirty bushels of wheat to the acre, from land cropped forty centuries, and two thirds of the price of the grain is taken from the grower to pay for transport to the nearest river port?

The China club's activities will not be confined to business, but include the promotion of better relations of every sort between the two peoples.

Of the 400,000,000 Chinese—to use the conventional figure—it is reliably reported six-sevenths live on one-third of the area of the republic. China today pictures on a large scale, what America would have been if our civilization had clung to the coasts and water courses. Two-thirds of the Chinese republic remains to be developed, as America was developed in the nineteenth century. Capital and railroads are the keys. China has only 7,000 miles of railroad. The bulk of her freight is moved to navigable water on the backs of men, at a cost of fourteen cents per ton mile and up. American railroads haul freight for one cent and one mill per ton mile.

Contrast this wage of 17 cents per day with the cost of horse labor on Iowa farms, figured from 8 to 13 cents per hour, actual working time. Dobbin's living wage of hay, oats and stable accommodation is more in two hours than the Chinaman's daily pay.

China's development is no tomorrow thing. It's on the way. The question for Americans is whether they are going to get in the game, or be frightened out of the world's biggest bet by parochial politicians and propagandists of national decay, who would smother our commercial future with such shibboleths as "imperialism," and "capitalistic exploitation." Organization of such societies as the China club here will encourage Americans in China who are forging ahead. American firms in China have increased from 48 to 412 in the last nine years. In 1914 we did 6 per cent of China's foreign business, now we do 17 per cent of it. Chinese imports of American textile, agricultural and propelling machinery more than doubled from 1919 to 1921.

TARIFF RULE FEARED

BY J. B. POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, March 17.—An announcement in China that the British government has drafted a plan for the reorganization of the Chinese customs and tariff has aroused apprehension in American commercial and financial circles in China, due to a belief that President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes have done nothing to protect American obligations.

Dr. J. G. Schurman, United States minister to China, says he is awaiting action by the American government and he has not done anything to prepare for the special tariff conference which soon will be convened in Peking in accordance with the terms of the Washington conference. The special tariff conference is considered here as of equal importance with the Washington conference in unscrambling the financial and economic problems of China.

The departure this month of Frederick Stevens of Morgan & Co., member of the banking consortium, and John J. Abbott of the Continental and Commercial National bank of Chicago with no results accomplished increases the apprehension. American banks and business houses are involved in defaults of the Chinese governments to the extent of more than $50,000,000 and they are looking to the special conference with the hope of getting their obligations protected through an increase in the Chinese tariffs.

The failure of Messrs. Harding and Hughes to appoint an American delegation and to draft definite plans leads local American interests to think that Great Britain and Japan again may control the situation and freeze out the Americans.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The optimistic tone of the weekly mercantile reviews and brokerage house letters, combined with the more hopeful news from abroad, encouraged operations on the long side of the market yesterday. The relatively easy money rates also were an important factor. Equipments showed the most consistent strength. American Locomotive climbing 2½ points to 107⅞, a new high for all time; Baldwin rising 1⅝ to 142, and Lima Locomotive, Pullman, and General Electric each closing 2 points higher.

Sinclair Oil was another strong and active feature, nearly 100,000 shares changing hands, the closing price of 33¼, up 2⅛, representing a new high for the year. Pan American issues made partial recovery from yesterday's heaviness on the announcement of the head of the company that their properties have yielded and are still yielding excellent returns.

Motors showed moderate strength on announcement of a price increase of $75 to $150 by the Hupp company, regarded as the forerunner of others, and the retirement of $311,400 preferred stock of Moon Motors at 105. Studebaker crossed 125 for a net gain of 1¼. Rubber and tire stocks made only a feeble response to announcements of additional advances in tire prices.

Erratic fluctuations again characterized the trading in Piggly-Wiggly, which ranged between 83¼ and 72, closing at 69½, up 4¼ points or slightly less than half of its loss of Friday. Sloss-Sheffield Steel preferred and Reynolds Spring were conspicuously heavy, but good buying was noted in Delaware and Hudson, Associated Dry Goods, American Water Works 6 per cent preferred, and Producers and Refiners.

With many grades of finished steel products up from $3 to $8 a ton or more since last September, the price of steel rails continues to be quoted at $43 a share. The current price of standard rails is now $2 a ton below the price of steel billets and as a result predictions are made in the steel industry that rails will be advanced from $7 to $10 a ton in the near future. When the price of steel rails was fixed at $43 a ton on Sept. 14, 1922, to take effect on Oct. 1, the railroads were given the option of placing orders at the lower rate prior to Oct. 1, subject to delivery in monthly installments prior to June 30, this year. Many of the larger railroads which were in a position to finance purchases placed orders sufficient to cover their requirements for the greater part of this year at the old rate of $40 a ton.

RAILROAD NOTES

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report favorable conditions on most lines in view of the heavy volume of traffic. The percentages of out-of condition cars is said to be surprisingly low considering the enormous burdens the roads have been under. The demand for rush shipments of structural material is increasing. The general merchandise movement is exceeding the movement of a year ago. Officials of southern roads report a heavy movement of lumber and building materials, a demand for all the cars available for coal and steel and iron shipments, and a free movement of perishable goods from the south to the north. The general merchandise movement is well ahead of a year ago.

While eastern trunk line railroads are preparing to take into court the order of the interstate commerce commission which requires them to sell interchangeable mileage after May 15, nine small railroads which the commission exempted from the necessity of selling the mileage books have applied for permission to do so. The petition asserts that the smaller lines would lose a large amount of passenger traffic if they failed to give the same rates and facilities to travelers that competing trunk lines give. A large number of other short line railroads, however, will not put in the mileage book system unless required to do so.

In order to refund outstanding mortgages obligation, the El Paso and Southwestern railroad applied to the interstate commerce commission for authority to issue $3,085,000 in 5 per cent improvement mortgage bonds. The securities will be exchanged for an equal amount of other mortgage bonds of the road due Jan. 1, 1923. A second finance application from the Texas and Mississippi Valley railroad asked the commission's approval for another 5 per cent issue amounting to $1,058,100, to reimburse the railroad's treasury for expenditures on additions and betterments.

In absorbing switching charges on grain in transit at Toledo and at the same time adding such charges to the rates at Detroit an examiner of the interstate commerce commission reported the Michigan Central, New York Central, Detroit and Toledo, and Wabash railroads are maintaining a discrimination against Detroit commercial interests. It recommended that the commission require the roads to give similar rates at Detroit to those which they have in effect at Toledo.

WHEAT SWINGS TO HIGH LEVEL; OTHER GRAIN UP

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat prices continued on the upgrade, with May wheat at a new high on the present movement and at the best figure since Feb. 15, the finish being at the top, with net gains of ¾@1c. Coarse grains derived the greater part of their strength from sympathy with wheat. September corn sold at a new high for the season, with the finish ⅛@⅜c higher. Oats and rye gained ¼c for the day.

Grain markets developed more activity the last week, especially in wheat, while there were numerous breaks early, offerings were readily absorbed and a strong upward movement was in progress during the closing days. At the last net gains were 2@2¾c on wheat, ⅝@¾c on corn, ⅛@⅜c on oats, and 1½@2¾c on rye. Provisions were unsettled, with lard 15@20c higher and ribs 5@12½c lower.

Short Covering in Wheat.

Heavy covering of short wheat through commission houses credited to a local professional was a factor in making the upturn to the highest point of the day for May. Offerings came mainly from commission houses on resting orders and from eastern interests who bought on the recent break. Foreigners bought all deliveries at the start. Local traders were somewhat more bullish.

The continent took a moderate quantity of cash wheat at the seaboard, but the United Kingdom failed to follow the advance and Liverpool closed only ½d higher for the day. Forecast was for high winds and much colder weather with only moderate snowfall. Domestic cash demand showed a little improvement. Omaha sold 45,000 bu wheat to go to Chicago late on Friday, but routine news failed to have any effect on values.

Light Trade in Corn.

Trading in corn was not large and was mainly of a local character. Shorts covered early, and for a time resting orders from commission houses on resting orders and from eastern interests who bought on the recent break. Foreigners bought all deliveries at the start. Local traders were somewhat more bullish.

The continent took a moderate quantity of cash wheat at the seaboard, but the United Kingdom failed to follow the advance and Liverpool closed only ½d higher for the day. Forecast was for high winds and much colder weather with only moderate snowfall. Domestic cash demand showed a little improvement. Omaha sold 45,000 bu wheat to go to Chicago late on Friday, but routine news failed to have any effect on values.

Light Trade in Corn.

Trading in corn was not large and was mainly of a local character. Shorts covered early, and for a time resting orders at 75c for May checked the bulge, but the final upturn in wheat caused increased buying, making the finish at the top. Cash demand was fair, with the basis on No. 2 grades ½c higher as compared with May.

Oats held within narrow limits and averaged higher with other grains. There was some buying of May early by a cash house. Receipts were small and the cash showed a tendency to advance on the May.

Germany Buys Russian Rye.

There was no unusual activity in rye, and with reports that Germany had bought further liberal quantities of Russian grain there was increased pressure on the bulges despite the strength in wheat. Some rye was sold at 11c over May f. o. b. New York for export.

Provisions weakened on commission house selling and in sympathy with hogs and lard closed 17½@20c lower, with ribs off 10@12½c. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date aggregates 478,000, against 360,000 last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

With grain prices finishing at the highest of the week, there was a more friendly feeling to the constructive side of the market and an increased disposition on the part of most operators to look for a further advance should foreign markets continue strong and export business demand good.

There has been immense covering of short wheat and a great deal of corn of late. This makes those who have been rather skeptical about following the long side take profits and look for a reaction unless there is continued good foreign buying like that of the last two days. Foreigners bought all wheat futures at the opening, as their markets were strong.

Selling of wheat in Chicago against purchases of futures in Winnipeg was a feature in the trading. Winnipeg traders were liberal sellers of July wheat here during the day.

"The revival of the export business in wheat and corn means much to the bulls at this time," says T. J. McLaughlin. "This is due to the dangerously light stocks in Chicago elevators and afloat. Stocks of wheat are only 2,144,000 bu and of rye 601,000 bu. Hedges are being removed daily and with the crop scare period at hand it puts the shorts in a very uncomfortable position."

The forecast for another severe cold wave with temperatures in the Canadian northwest 25 below and storm conditions over the Dakotas tended to make shorts in wheat nervous and induced a great deal of evening up on the part of local traders.

A local miller sold 20,000 barrels of flour at 30 cents advance. He reports a better general demand as the result of the strength in wheat in the last few days.

Primary receipts of grain for the week were 15,380,000 bu, a decrease of 4,667,000 bu from the previous week, more than one half being in corn. There were 1,086,000 bu less than last year and 411,000 bu in excess of the five year average. Wheat receipts approached the largest in five years for this period, and corn and oats were of fair average. Chicago received 4,326,000 bu of grain, of which 2,400,000 bu were corn. There was a decrease of 1,629,000 bu in all grains for the week and a gain of 8,000 bu over last year.

Charts showing the daily and monthly range of wheat prices for 81 years have been compiled by Prof. J. H. Boyle of Cornell university. They present many interesting features.

Cables from London indicate that if the demand for wheat from the Argentine continues ocean freight rates may advance owing to the supply of tonnage being under requirements. The movement of the new corn crop from there may commence early. There is a good demand for boats for April, May and May-June loading.

Germany has bought 4,000,000 bu of rye from Russia so far, part of which already has arrived, according to private cables. The quality of the grain is very satisfactory. A later cable said Germany had bought further liberal quantities of Russian rye.

Unite to Protect Railroad Securities.

We wish once more to urge on our readers the necessity of protecting their investments. It is not enough to purchase a security and then sit back and passively allow the business in which they have invested to take its course. The security holder should watch his investment and do all in his power to safeguard it and make it profitable. Probably nowhere else is the necessity for protective action more vital than in the field of railroad investments.

The successful operation of the railroads of the country is dependent on a number of factors and subject to many and varied influences. Favorable or unfavorable legislation may mean profits or loss. Traffic and freight rates, taxation, the arbitrary fixation of wage scales, may prevent the roads from earning a reasonable profit. Strikes may wipe out their profits and cause heavy losses. All these factors can be controlled by the public. Those most vitally interested are the holders of railroad securities, as the success of their investments depends on the success of the roads. As individual, however, these security holders can accomplish little or nothing. It is only by uniting in large numbers and exerting their combined influence that they can work for their common advantage.

There now exists an association composed of railroad security holders, the object of which is to protect and stabilize the securities of the carriers of the country. This is known as the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities. S. Davies Warfield is president of this association and its officers and executive committee include many of the big financists and bankers of the country.

This association represents in its membership both large and small owners of railroad securities, both bonds and stocks. Many of the large mutual life insurance companies (such as the New York Life and the Metropolitan Life) are members, as are a large number of the mutual savings banks of the country. These institutions hold enormous amounts of railroad securities, the ownership of which actually rests in millions of people holding insurance policies in these companies, and savings deposits in the savings banks. Many of these are actually unaware of their ownership, and the association is the only organized representation of the interests of these security owners.

In addition, a large number of national and state banks and trust companies hold membership in the association. Also trust estates and other fiduciary institutions, as well as commercial firms and bankers and brokers. There is also a large number of individual members, both those actually owning railroad securities and those interested in the railroad questions, although not actually owners of such securities. The association now represents through its membership some $11,000,000,000 of railroad stocks and bonds.

This is an important and powerful organization, which for several years has exercised a profound influence on railroad legislation and administration. It took a prominent part in the negotiation for the settlement of the shopmen's strike last summer. Its headquarters are at Baltimore, Md. It is of great importance to all holders of railroad securities to protect their investments by affiliating themselves with this or some similar organization. Without uniting for their common protection their investments may be ruined.

Hog values suffered a sharp reaction yesterday, due to an oversupply on the week-end trade. Prices slumped fully 15@25c, with lightweights reflecting the most discount, top price dropping 25c at $8.60, while average price lowered 15c at $8.30. Receipts at 15,000, including 3,000 "directs," were more than double general expectations, swelling offerings on sale to nearly 40,000, 11,891 being carried over from Friday. Packers favored lightweight butchers, purchasing droves costing mostly 15c below Friday. Average figured 15c above previous Saturday, with top off 5c.

Receipts of hogs last week at 199,400 were 17,500 smaller than previous week, 41,200 larger than a year ago, and 50,800 above the ten year average. Estimated average weight last week at 240 lbs., stands heaviest since October, being 3 lbs. heavier than previous week, 10 lbs. heavier than two weeks ago and 6 lbs. above the ten year average. Last week's average price of hogs at $8.20, advanced 5c over a week ago and stands $3.95 under the ten year average.

Narrowest price range of the season featured the general cattle trade last week, with values unevenly higher than the previous week. Top for load lots moved up 15c to $10.15, and the general average price of good beef steers gained 20c at $8.85, standing 90c above a year ago. The tendency of values was lower after Thursday.

SHEEP SELL HIGH.

In face of several sharp breaks in the lamb market last week, aged stock held up surprisingly well, with the week's general average price figuring 5c above previous week at $8.00, being the highest since May, 1922. Lambs on the other hand sold at the lowest point of the year thus far. However, a reaction was recorded at the close, with late sales ruling 25@40c above the week's low point.

Rules Cotton Quotations Not for Odd Lot Exchange

New York, March 17.—Federal Judge Learned Hand today sustained a motion of the New York Cotton exchange to restrain Frank Moore, president, and the Odd Lot Cotton exchange from making use of quotations of the New York Cotton exchange in their business, pending the hearing on the equity suit begun recently by the Odd Lot exchange against the New York Cotton exchange. The action, brought against the New York Cotton exchange, the Western Union Telegraph company, and the Gold and Stock Telegraph company, under the anti-trust laws, charges the defendants with unlawful conspiracy in refusing to distribute cotton quotations to the plaintiffs.

a Word to the Wise about 7%

SEVEN PER CENT is a high yield from First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds in the present market—there's no denying the fact. Recently 7% bonds meeting our standard could not be procured. Clients were satisfied with 6 or 6½%. If our purchasing department could not secure first class 7% bonds, our customers knew that they simply were not obtainable. Today, owing to the spring building demand, we again have a limited stock of 7% bonds.

Advice Well Worth Heeding!

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS yielding 7% are scarce and likely will be scarcer—this you naturally conclude from the above statement. The really dependable issues such as we recommend exclusively may be practically out of the market a few weeks hence as they were a short time back. You feel therefore the impulse to buy all these high yielding bonds you can NOW, provided of course you can get this desirable income with unquestionable safety. Is this, then, our advice?

ABSOLUTELY. With eighty-eight years of experience in Chicago real estate, we know what is safe and what is not. We obtain for you the highest income possible with safety. If we could get 10% or 8% with safety, we would do so. But we cannot. Even many of the 7% bonds offered us are not for a moment considered. For every issue purchased a number are rejected as not meeting our standard. But—at present—we are securing a few 7% bonds that are absolutely as safe as any we have ever offered and will satisfy you.

Get 7% Now

THE POINT then is this:—Get 7% while you can—but get it with safety. This House has never lost a dollar of any bondholder. So our recommendation of 7% bonds means a real opportunity. Profit by it. These bonds are sold in amounts of $1,000, $500, $250 and $100. Also on terms of 10% down, 10% a month. They yield 7% NET, the Federal Income Tax of 4% being paid for the bondholder. Call, write, phone Main 1865 or mail coupon.

Eight ways to test the safety of your investments are given in this interesting booklet, "How to Select Safe Bonds." This important booklet (the coupon will bring your copy) has been prepared from the long and successful experience of George M. Forman & Company. Every investor, large or small, should know the facts it gives about getting higher yield with positive safety.

EIGHT WAYS to Test the Safety of Every Investment

1 Is Your Investment Protected by Property of Permanent Value?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why investments should be protected by property having a permanent value well in excess of the amount of the entire loan.

2 Does Your Claim Command Payment Before Other Obligations?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells what securities come before all others in obligations to pay promptly and fully.

3 Has the Property Sufficient Earning Power?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why a safe property must have an annual earning power of at least two and a half times the total annual interest on the loan.

4 Is the Property Adequately Protected by Insurance?
An important consideration, as fire often wipes out overnight a valuable property.

5 Is It Properly Managed?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why proper management is essential to insure prompt payment of interest and principal upon maturity.

6 Is the Title Clear?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells a sure way of insuring against loss through faulty title.

7 What Is the Moral Character of the Borrower?
As important as proper management—explained in this interesting booklet.

8 Who Offers the Securities You Buy?
"How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why even the experienced investor must depend for safety entirely upon the reputation and length of service of the Banking House offering the investment. It tells of the conservative policy of painstaking investigation and selection which has made it possible for George M. Forman & Company to sell bonds for 38 years without loss to a customer, large or small.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Trading in the local unlisted securities market was somewhat less active and net changes were relatively small. Interest, however, is broad, and the market had the appearance of assuming a temporary restful attitude.

Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was fairly active, selling as high as 56½. This gain was partially relinquished in the late session, stock being offered at 55, with buyers at 54¾. A fractional improvement was made in Butler Brothers at 38¼@38½. Sullivan machinery continued in good demand, rising some 3 points at 90 bid, 93 asked. Ford of Canada on few sales advanced sharply from 435 to top sales and a close of 446. Brisk buying of Packard preferred forced this issue up approximately 3 points to 95 bid, 99 asked. Some few trades of National Grocer common were reported at 6½. Bids of 82¾ for the preferred failed to bring out offerings.

McCord issues were erratic, common advancing a major fraction to 7¾ bid, 7½ asked, while the preferred was offered as low as 46 without attracting possible buyers. Northwestern Yeast was slightly easier at 197 bid, 200 asked. Firestone Tire and Rubber was off 2 points at 83 bid, 85 asked. Despite an extremely heavy volume of trade, Paige-Detroit was unchanged at 19¾ bid, 19½ asked. Burroughs Adding Machine was lower, sales ranging between 133 and 131. Burley Machine changed hands at 43¼ and 43¾. Chicago Railway Equipment common was fairly active, sales ranging between 33 and 34. The preferred was generally wanted at 26½, with odd lot offerings at 27. Sales of Albert Pick preferred were made at 98 and 99. Little interest was noted in Timken Axle or Motor Wheel, the former selling at 11 and the latter at 10¾ and 10¾.

Moderate price recessions marked a dull session in the sugar issues. Quoted bid and asked prices follow: Columbia, 6¾@7¼; Godchaux, 89 bid; Holland, 5¾@6¼; Michigan, 5¾@5¾; Utah-Idaho, 5¾@5¾.

Few price movements were to be noted in public utility shares and trading appeared to be fairly evenly distributed over the list. Commonwealth Power Railway and Light common continued its upward trend, closing at 36 bid, 37 asked, up approximately 5 points. The new Commonwealth Power corporation preferred changed hands at 70¼ and 71¼. Cities Service issues were nominally unchanged, the common being quoted 1886190; preferred, 60%@69%; Bankers' shares, 19@19¼. Some few trades of American Gas and Electric were reported at 170 and 171. American Light and Traction common showed little change at 130 and 133, but the preferred was 1 point lower at 92½ to 93¼. American Power and Light at 176 bid, 180 asked, was up 5 points. Northern Ohio Electric preferred relinquished 3 points at 31 bid, 33 asked. United Light common sold at 108, ex the stock dividend of 5 per cent, while the 6 per cent preferred closed at 80. The 7 per cent participating preferred was put on an 8 per cent basis and closed at 94½, ex dividend 1¾ per cent.

The New York Times.

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—Possibly because the realizing sales of the two preceding days by speculators for the rise had established more equilibrium in the market, prices on the stock exchange were steady at the week-end. The day's changes were mostly unimportant, but such movement as occurred was upward.

At the end of the week, however, Wall street had obtained no clearer view of the market's real condition than it possessed at the week's opening. The only obvious fact was that professional operators had tried to inaugurate another continuous advance with the general public's following, that they had not succeeded, and that therefore the stocks acquired for the purpose had been sold out.

Stocks Show No Decided Trend.

Comparisons of today's final prices with the closing of a week before gave little clew to the market's tendency. Numerically, net declines and net advances for the week pretty closely balance. It has been a meaningless market. Such margins are not unusual when a prolonged advance or decline has halted, but they never give safe ground for inference.

The strength of the economic and industrial situation is undeniable. So is the fact that the financial markets will have a long respite from disturbing proposals of legislation. But stock exchange prices have a way of reflecting events and situations, not by orderly progress but by a succession of fits and starts, which merge into a general movement when looked at in retrospect, but which seem like a constant reversal of opinion from the viewpoint of the moment.

Foreign Exchange Rates Firmer.

Exchange on Paris was strong again today and closed at a good advance for the day, but it did not touch Friday's highest rate. On Europe's markets the franc went slightly lower.

The indications have been pretty plain that the rumors of a German overture to France came from official Berlin, but neither the politicians nor the markets could be sure at the week-end whether these intimations embodied an actually adopted purpose or were merely put out to test the sentiment of France and her allies.

The reasonable probability is that the Cuno ministry is feeling its way in a somewhat difficult position and has not reached any concrete decision which cannot be either modified or abandoned. All that appears to be evident is that Germany wishes to make terms and will have to be the first to move for that purpose.

Tax Payment Expands Loans.

Expansion of $69,041,000 in loans is shown in the weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks, bringing the total up to $4,731,662,000. Net demand deposits increased $4,394,000, the total being $3,840,736,000, after deducting $126,035,000 government deposits, as compared with $33,768,000 deducted the preceding week. The change in government deposits, of course, reflects the quarterly tax receipts. Surplus reserve decreased $10,537,100, leaving a balance of $6,708,930. Details of the statement, with comparisons, follow:

Cambria Stockholders Oppose Plan for Merger

New York, March 17.—[Special.]—The minority stockholders of the Cambria Steel company, which is controlled by the Midvale Steel and Ordnance corporation, are expected to launch strong opposition to the proposed merger with the Bethlehem Steel corporation. Such opposition is due at the adjourned meeting to be held in Philadelphia next Tuesday. Lambert Fairchild of this city, who represents Edward B. Graves of St. Paul, Minn., and is fighting against the proposed merger, yesterday said that he had served notice upon the officers and directors of the Cambria Steel company to oppose the proposed absorption of the property by the Bethlehem Steel corporation, which had offered the Cambria stockholders common stock in exchange for the present holdings of Cambria stock.

Trade Comish Complains Against Tobacco Firms

Washington, D. C., March 17.—The federal trade commission today issued a complaint against the American Tobacco company and several middle western companies and individuals, alleging an agreement to fix and maintain standard resale prices of tobacco products. The other defendants are the Scotten-Dillon company, the Tobacco Products corporation, C. F. Adams, Harry E. Sloan, and the Midwest Tobacco Jobbers association of Kansas City, its officers and members. The complaint charges maintenance of resale prices by conspiracy and concerted agreement not to sell to dealers unless they in turn agree to resell at the standard prices; refusal to sell to dealers not abiding by the respondents' price list, and sale only to certain agreed on subjobbers at subjobbers' prices.

New German Certificates for $50,000,000 in U. S.

New York, March 17.—Farson, Son & Co., members of the New York stock exchange, today announced they were receiving subscriptions in the United States for a $50,000,000 issue of German government noninterest bearing treasury certificates. The certificates, which are guaranteed by the German Reichsbank, are payable in United States dollars on April 15, 1926, at 120 per cent of par. They are of $100 denominations.

A representative of Farson, Son & Co. explained in connection with the sale of German dollar certificates in this market that the issue is a new German government temporary internal loan, being floated in Germany to aid in the stabilization of the German mark.

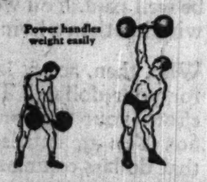
Why Jewett Six Wins Wise Buyers

Paige Engineering—Paige-built Quality—Big-Six Performance—at $995!

JEWETT Six is the only car of its size and price built by a maker of high-grade sixes. Wise buyers have endorsed it to the tune of over 25,000 cars in its first year. For this amazing acceptance there must be reasons all can appreciate! To many, the mere fact that Paige reputation, engineering and workmanship are embodied in the Jewett, is conclusive. To you, however, who have not yet verified them, we say: see these Paige-designed features in the Jewett for yourself before you buy any car!

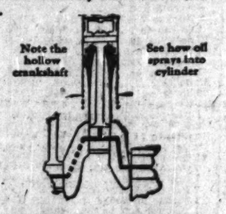
Fifty-Horsepower Motor Fills the Hood!

You don't have to be an engineer to appreciate Jewett's exceptional power. Just see how its motor fills the hood. Compare it with other cars in the same class. As a matter of engineering fact no car within $200 of the Jewett price has a motor of equal piston displacement—249 cubic inches. Its six cylinders, 3¼x5 inches, deliver full fifty horsepower. Running at a moderate speed insures longer life at lower upkeep than high-speed motors.



Ample Power for Weight Gives Amazing Performance

Power compared to weight determines car performance. Easily the strong man handles the hundred-pound weight which the weaker man can scarcely lift. Just so the underpowered car must strain to do that which the amply powered Jewett does easily. Accelerate, if you can, 5 to 25 miles in 7 seconds with any other car of Jewett's size.



High-Pressure Oiling—2 Gallons a Minute

There's a big difference in oiling systems. Low pressure oiling to engine main bearings is not to be compared with Jewett high-pressure oiling. The Jewett high-pressure, hollow crankshaft system forces 2 gallons per minute through all main and connecting-rod bearings, then sprays the entire internal mechanism. Metal never rubs metal—always a thin film of oil between. Smoothness and silence are particularly noticeable results of this ideal lubrication. The continuous oil flow carries heat away from bearings. There is a remarkable absence of friction; and greater motor life at less upkeep expense is Jewett's advantage over cars equipped with the circulating and splash system.

Rugged Construction Gives Endurance and Comfort

Get it clearly in your mind that the Jewett is not a light-weight, lightly-built car. Mere "lightness" in itself is furthest from the Paige standard of sound engineering. Here is a frame full six inches deep, with correspondingly wide top flange. A unit of strength, reinforced by inbuilt corner braces in front and four sturdy cross members, which brace diagonally all points of strain. This staunch construction insures freedom from disalignment of mechanism, unlimited endurance, and substantial riding comfort. Jewett's solidity and steadiness of road motion do much to make the long drive unfatiguing. Women, especially, find their sense of cozy security in a really substantial car [the touring model weighs 2805 pounds] a source of continued satisfaction.

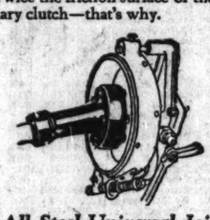
Paige-Timken Axles—99.8% Dependable!

It is important that a car of such power as the Jewett should have a thoroughly sound rear axle. Nothing but Paige-Timkens could possibly handle this power efficiently and enduringly. We checked up on the first 20,000 Jewetts in use and found that only two-tenths of 1% had had any axle trouble at all—even including those due to accidents. Extra tough steel and ample size give this Paige-Timken rear axle of the Jewett a great surplus of strength for safety.

New Gear-Shifting Ease from Paige-Type Clutch

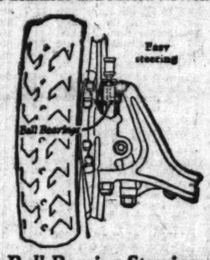
Jewett is the one car you literally do not learn to drive! Shift gears without pausing, or pause as long as you wish—you never "miss" nor is there any clash. The reason?—a light-weight driven clutch member weighing only 3½ pounds has one-third the usual weight, and with one-third the momentum quickly adjusts itself to speed changes. Jewett's remarkable gear-shifting ease gives it an irresistible appeal to women.

With the new Paige-type clutch, however fast you lift your foot you can neither stall the motor nor jerk the car. Twice the friction surface of the ordinary clutch—that's why.



All-Steel Universal Joints Oiled Once a Year

You know the trouble and annoyance of trying to grease the universal joint. Usually it isn't done—the mechanism suffers instead. Here is a new type universal joint built of the finest steel—oiled, not greased—with sealed-in lubrication that is good for 15,000 miles. Dust and dirt never enter; oil never escapes. Operates indefinitely without wear and therefore without the usual back-lash and rattles. Few features of the Paige-built Jewett are more practically useful to the owner who demands untroubled service.



Ball-Bearing Steering Spindles Give Touch Guidance

Easy steering is one of the most delightful features of Jewett performance. At each end of the Paige-Timken front axle are ball-bearing steering spindles that respond to the slightest touch on the wheel. The old tension and strain of a "stiff wheel" are forgotten, and the frailest woman finds Jewett a pleasure to handle.

Remember: the only car in its class built by makers of high-grade sixes! It gives you big-six performance, Paige-built quality, at $995! Please come in and look, verify, try out this Jewett, or phone for demonstration now. (292-B)

THE POTTERS

PROLOGUE.

Excitement beats rapid wings over the Potter household as Pa outlines to Ma the beginnings of their new fortune . . . Rankin, formerly Pa's associate in business and now a wealthy promoter, has painted an erubescent future for the Potters in his new scheme: The Cosmic Radio Corporation . . . even Mamie's affair with her rich young employer fades into temporary obscurity . . . even Bill's furtive romance with the adorable Annabelle dissolves into the gray, if pulsing, background . . . even Red's flashing crimson pales to a light pink . . . what's going to happen? . . . we can hardly wait . . .

Scene I.

The living room in the Potter apartment; the end of a more or less perfect day . . . Bill is at his interminable radio . . . Pa and Ma, weary and worn with reading the evening comics to their unappreciative four-year-old, have hustled him to bed with dire threats . . . there is a lull, known to parents as the Children's Hour, which is the hour after the children have gone to bed . . .

MA (in scoffing unbelief):
Just a scheme, that's all. Another one of them get-rich-quick schemes.

PA (loftily):
That's all you know about it. You women make me sick. Sit here in the house all day and think you know everything about everything.

MA (sniffing):
Radio! Last time it was oil. With your luck, if you invested anything in radio, everybody would quit using it.

PA (triumphantly):
Is that so? Last time it was oil, eh? Well, it was oil. And you made me sell. We'd 'a' been rich if you'd 'a' left me alone.

MA (stumped):
Is that so! (Trying not to seem too curious.) What is this—this radio scheme, anyway?

PA (offhand):
You wouldn't understand it. All about rheostats, and grids, and things like that.

"Say, me and Marconi know all there is to know about it."

MA (practically):
What's a rheo—er—er—what you said just now?

PA: You mean a rheostat? It's a . . . a . . . let me see . . . it's a . . . (Ha! a bright idea!) You tell your mother, Bill what a rheostat is.

BILL (wickedly):
You tell her. You can tell her much better than I can.

MA (inexorably):
Yes, you tell me, Pa; you know so much about those things.

PA (nervously):
What's the difference? You wouldn't know after I told you. Anyway, this scheme is much bigger than that. It's a tremendous idea. It will give us a monopoly on all the radio in the world. Anybody who sends or receives will have to pay us royalty.

BILL (practically):
Apple sauce.

PA: A lot you know about it, young feller.

BILL:
Say, me and Marconi know all there is to know about it. Why, you don't even know what a rheostat is.

PA: Is that so! What's the difference whether you call it a rheostat or a . . . a wash boiler? The principle's the same, ain't it?

BILL:
Is it?

Pa: Of course it is. And this is a big principle . . . just discovered . . . so, how could you know anything about it? You, with your little penny ante set, listeningin on concerts that you could hear as well if you stuck your head out the window.

BILL (stung):
Is that so!

PA (triumphantly):
This proposition of ours will fix you fellers listening in one things and not paying for it. We'll make you pay for what you get.

BILL:
I suppose after you get a corner on the air you'll get the salt concessions on the oceans. Rankin's too smart for you, Pa.

PA (graveled):
Is that so! Trouble with you young squibs is you believe everything you read is so. You haven't had enough experience in life. You haven't lived. If you read tomorrow that the earth was flat, you'd believe it.

BILL:
I bet you couldn't prove it isn't. How would you prove it?

PA (after a moment's pause . . . well, how do you prove the earth's round?):
That's enough from you, now. I was talking to your mother.

MA (slowly):
I've been thinking. You know, Rankin struck it rich in that oil stock you didn't hold on to.

PA: That YOU didn't hold on to, you mean.

MA (easily):
Have it your way. You're always fussing.

PA: Who? Me?

MA: See! Just as I told you. Well, anyway, maybe

"That's all you know about it."

this Rankin has got something good there, but . . . but how are you going to know before you've put our money in it, and then maybe it'll be too late?

PA (earnestly):
That's what I've been trying to tell you all evening. There's going to be a big meeting of all the experts and principal stockholders in New York next week, and Rankin is going down there.

MA: Well?

PA: Well, and he's going down there and . . . and he wants me to go along.

MA: YOU?

PA (defiantly):
Sure, me. It isn't going to cost me anything. Anybody who'll put at least two thousand dollars into this will have their expenses paid to attend the meeting. If they aren't satisfied that it's a good proposition after they've heard it all explained, they will have their money refunded, every cent of it.

MA (excited):
Oh, I've always wanted to go to New York!

PA (baffled):
But . . . but . . . you . . . you . . .

MA (defiantly):
Yes, yes . . . me, me. If you're going to New York, I don't see why I can't go to New York. What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

PA (worried):
But—but this is business.

MA (gayly):
I won't interfere with your old business. I'll go to the shows and go shopping.

PA (with a groan):
Shows . . . shopping . . . ooh migod . . .

MA (with girlish glee):
Ohhh, it'll be wonderful! And I can see all the new clothes and . . . (Sadly.) What will I wear? I haven't got a decent thing . . .

PA (sorrowfully):
Ooooooh, what did I start, anyway?

Scene II.

Diary Dear: He loves me! He hasn't said so in so many words, but "My heart has told me so." Oh, Diary, and he's so wonderful, too. So thoughtful and polite when he takes me out, and he always seats me first and carves my meat for me, and his cuffs are always so neat. And then he's so masterful with the waiters; not loud and boisterous, but so determined and sure of himself. There was a word in the movies the other night that just describes him, Diary; it was one of those western pictures, and it said the hero had an air of "imperious reserve." That's him, Diary—imperious.

And why shouldn't he be? He's wonderfully successful, and still a young man yet. Not as young as Red, but much more mature. Yes, that's it. Red is so kiddish and irresponsible. Yet I know I could never love Dave as much as I love Red; at least, I don't think I could, although love is a funny thing; whenever I think of it I can't help thinking of that little poem we used to write in our school books:

"Love is a funny thing,
Shaped like a lizard;
Runs around the heart
And jumps into the gizzard."

Isn't that silly, Diary? You didn't think I could be so silly, did you? But I feel so happy tonight I don't care what even you think of me. There! now, isn't that wicked! And I was just complaining that Red was so kiddish. But then, things that are all right for a girl to do aren't always the things men can do, are they? And, anyway, I don't think Red will ever be so successful and serious as Dave. Dave is such a serious name, isn't it? Sounds so dependable and faithful. Yes, that's the way he seems to me, so dependable—but Red, O dear Red, I love you even though you are so fiery and hard to manage.

And that brings me, Diary to the very thing I wanted to tell you tonight. Ever since that evening when Red came and Dave came too, and they almost came to blows—that is, I think they did—well, anyway, Red has been very cool to me. He is frightfully jealous of Dave, and accuses me of being interested in him just because he makes lots of money. "Well," I said to him, just like that, "well, there's nothing to stop you from making lots of money, is there? You're just as smart as Dave, aren't you?" And he says, "That guy? I'll say I am. All he can do is write ads, and anybody can do that. Just look who's doing it now. I could do it myself." "Well," I said to him, just like that, "well, why don't you?" "Just for that, I will," he said; "and, what's more, you wait and see if I don't put it all over this apple sauce expert of yours." And I said to him, "Well," I said, just like that, "well, go ahead, Red; I'm pulling for you. It isn't that I care for money, although a good income is not to be sneezed at, but I wouldn't want to be married to any man I wasn't proud of. Any girl likes to have a successful husband." "Don't worry about me," he said; "I'll be a successful husband." "I mean a successful man for a husband, that's what I mean," I said. Then he said, "Very well, I'll go get a job in an advertising agency right off, and then you watch my smoke; I'll make that Gleason guy look like rubles—you wait and see." And I squeesed his hand, Diary dear, and said, "I'll wait, dear; that is, if you don't keep me waiting too long."

And now I've told you everything except that Pa has got a new scheme to make money. This time it's radio, and he wants to go in with Rankin again. Wouldn't it be wonderful if he really did make a lot of money? Then Red and I could get married anyway, and I could let him have enough to furnish up a nice suite of offices for an advertising agency of his own. I can just see it now, Diary—all Windsor chairs and cretonne curtains, not too conspicuous, probably a small flowered design; and then one of those taupe chenille rugs, and one of those silver bud vases on his desk, with a rose in it, next to my photograph in a simple but expensive silver frame. Wouldn't that be wonderful, Diary dear? I can hardly wait to see if Pa really does make money out of this radio scheme, although it would be a miracle if he did. I wouldn't have Pa's luck in money matters for the world. Oh, yes, one thing more, Diary, before I snuggle into bed: Ma is all excited over going to New York with Pa. She doesn't know yet whether she's really going or not. Pa says he can't afford it, but I guess she'll go, all right, if he does. I wish I was going, too. Well, maybe I'll go there on my honeymoon. Go through there on my way to Europe. Oh, Diary, wouldn't that be wonderful! Just like they say in the movies . . . Nice, Monte Carlo, the Riviera . . . that last one sounds like a movie house—maybe that's what it was named after . . . well, Diary, I'm about dead for sleep. I'm going to roll in for the night and dream of Dave . . . or Red . . . I wonder which? Good-night, Diary.

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Of "The Awful Truth."

"THIS is to be the older woman's age, the flappers are going to surrender their place in the limelight." Miss Witherspoon says; "and I think styles are going to revert to the Victorian. The general trend of fashions is toward the bustle and long skirt of Disraeli's time. Large bows on the back of dresses tight across the front hint at the transition. King Tut, pooh! He'll last for about a minute. Then he'll be deader than ever."

Miss Witherspoon ought to know whereof she speaks, for she has been a designer of clothes as well as an actress. She didn't like that work so well because people never liked things as simple as she insisted they should be.

The dress Miss Witherspoon wears in the sketch is of the type which she wears the greatest part of the time. She doesn't like suits, nor sports clothes. Kimono sleeves, with a deep cuff and facing of Alice blue georgette, swinging panels, shirred on to the sides, large gold embroidered roses at occasional places are the features of the garment. A close turban of black hair cloth, set in the front with a small blue and rhinestone ornament, the luxurious black fox throw, black satin colonial pumps with gunmetal buckles, daintily clocked, are the accompanying impedimenta.

Miss Witherspoon's evening dresses are mostly chiffon, because she believes excellent quality materials are requisite to good dressing. One dress, chosen when all ideas of moderation and quietness flew to the winds, matches the shades of Miss Witherspoon's copper bronze hair. It has a base of metal cloth, covered with a large meshed beaded slip. The girdle is of the metal cloth, long on one side.

JUDITH ANDERSON.
Of "Peter Weston."

"I'D much rather talk about dogs than clothes," exclaimed Miss Anderson, with a shrug of disdain. "I think people should wear what they're happy in—if they like bizarre things, let 'em wear 'em. For myself, I can't be bothered shopping and picking things out. Once in awhile I bring myself to time and try to look decent, but most times I just forget all about 'em. I'd like to wear trousers all the time."

And yet it would be hard to imagine a more feminine attire than the dainty white organdy frock of the sketch. It is suggestive of iced lemonade, leghorn picture hats, and green shade on a golden hot day. The bertha and the side panels are edged in deep Viennese point lace. There is embroidery on the tight, basquelike bodice and on the panels. The girdle is powder blue—the color named by Australia, from whence Miss Anderson came five years ago. The velvet ribbon is plaited, with a myriad tiny knotted streamers falling from one side, which is graced by a spary of pale peach taffeta roses and baby blue forget-me-nots. White satin brocade slippers fit the summery costume for any season.

Miss Anderson likes best to appear in black.

HELEN SPENGLER

RUTH SHEPLEY.
Of "Two Fellows and a Girl."

MISS SHEPLEY numbers the steen millionth ardent recruit in the army of simplicity-in-dress lovers. She has no decided tastes, no fancies, no hidebound rules of dress. She likes anything in wearing apparel, with the great big qualification that it must be simple.

Miss Shepley, arising early after a strenuous first night, dons this street costume to go to rehearsal. The dress is navy blue Canton crepe with an accordion plaited skirt and a Russian blouse upon which slithery white trees writhe gracefully and red and green birds turn handsprings in embroidery. A voluminous seal wrap with a chinchilla collar, and a black haircloth hat (purchased in Paris last fall—"simply won't wear out") with monkey fur whiskers shooting off at regular intervals around the brim, are the outer layer of this costume. The shoes are high black patent leather with a moderate heel and high oblong cut steel buckles. Gossamer chiffon hose are the accompaniment.

Miss Shepley is quite sure that she likes black better than any other color.

WINNIE LIGHTNER.
Of "Scandals of 1923."

CATALOGUING Miss Lightner's taste—under the Doesn't Like column are "fluffiness, long skirts, pointed toe shoes, and jewelry." Does Likes are one piece dresses, poke hats, French shoes, odd types of dresses that nobody else wears, and a peach colored georgette evening frock, banked above ach hip with gay Frnch flowers, and beaded with opalescents of the pale peach shade.

This juvenile brown taffeta dress is full of skirt, and snug of basque, and has two ruffly lace bibs, one in front and one in back, and a sash just as big as the one you wanted when you were in fourth grade to swish behind you when you flounced. The hat, shaped like the dingdong model of a day gone by, is black straw. A flat piece set on the back, faced with fancy straw and covered with gray to black shaded leaves, gives the effect of Cupid wings. A neat little white edged bow in the front is the only other trimming on the hat. Sand colored hose with sand suede and brown kid low heeled, strapped pumps, finish the "brown study."

ZOE BARNETT.
Of "Blossom Time."

PREPARED to practice a new song, read a book, or just be comfy, Miss Barnett looks as thought she were an up to date pirate, ready to rob a rum runner, in this black velvet pajama outfit. It is trimmed in French blue ribbon embroidered in rosebuds which match the cerise facing at neck, sleeves and trousers bottoms, as well as the ribbon tie binding Miss Barnett's head and trailing in a long end. Patent leather mules, with low heels that don't clump much, large dull gold hoop earrings, and jewelry in the form of many chased gold bracelets, make this boudoir costume entirely unsuitable and wholly delightful.

Street clothes Miss Barnett likes tailored to the nth degree. But she wears mostly sports things—flat shoes, skirts, and bright colored sweaters—because she claims she works too hard to spend much time thinking about clothes. When she does really dress up she shies away from red, for she says that the color has a tendency to harden one's face. She'll wear orange, though, and she likes green.

She thinks that the present styles are the most beautiful and most sensible women have ever worn. "Why," she says, "women have never walked before. Women have never breathed before. Now that they've come into their own, they're going to maintain their rights. Corsets and high pinching shoes can't come back."

Black is Miss Barnett's favorite color.

Pictures of other well dressed women on the Chicago stage will appear next Sunday.

Your Mental State When You Phone.

What she may think of us she must keep to herself.

What's your brand of? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Wonder what a telephone operator thinks about the human race in general? Wonder what we'd think if we knew what she thought about some of us, who nurse the private opinion and exploit the public one that we would never do or say anything to hurt another's feelings?

What a fine old revival meeting if we sinners—yes, I'd be there, too—were called up front and made to repeat before an assembled throng our interpretation of the golden rule as we practice or have practiced it at times when we wanted a number and did not get it the instant the call word and number were out of our mouths! A passerby who stumbled in upon us might think from the language he heard he had hit a Billy Sunday p. m. minus the salvation angle. Outrageous language delivered in outrageous tones he'd hear. Blasphemous barks and yelps and whines, aye, and words, too. Every variety of temper from mild to insane. Tones graded from slight impatience to bitter condemnation.

If there is a point on the compass indicating the duality of humans it would lead direct to the telephone instrument in the hands of a peevish, irritable, bad tempered person. What is the psychology of the conversion of a normal enough temperament under other circumstances suddenly gone wrong with the act of picking up the receiver?

Operator Has No Comeback.

Cowardice for one thing. Ragged nerves awaiting an opportunity to explode. An undisciplined mental state.

Cowardly because I doubt if one of us would dare to use the tone or language we do in these irrational moments were we face to face with the individual. Cowardly because she has no comeback. What she may think of us she must keep to herself and does. She's a better man than we are, Gunga Dhin, because she has self-control.

She does not rail at us when the mistake is ours of indistinct pronunciation, talking away from the telephone so that we cannot be heard, impatiently moving the receiver hook up and down so rapidly she has no chance to break in. No, the telephone operator is trained to serve us to the best of her ability and always to give full measure of a smile with the voice under all conditions, to inject a palliative "please" and a "thank you" when she asks you to repeat the number.

How many of us say "please" when we ask for a number?

The telephone companies require that each applicant take a four weeks' training in geographical location, in pronunciation of exchanges and distinct numerals, in voice inflection, and in the courteous retort under all circumstances.

Might Save Wasted Energy.

Wonder if such a course ascribed to the telephone using public would not minimize the wasted energy and outbursts of temper.

Lesson No. 1 might include a knowledge of the fact that the girl who responds when you pick up the receiver is a human being, young, as a general thing, apt, well mannered, a girl whose duties are exacting, who has as much right to nerves as any other girl, who is responsive to the kindly intonation in a voice, who at times must put up a heroic struggle to stifle an outburst in her own defense. An educational movie might be presented at this lesson showing the same person with the imperative voice demanding quick action and railing at a few seconds' delay, approaching a glove counter on a bargain day. She does not yell at the clerk, "Give me these gloves. I want them right away or I'll complain to the manager." No, she awaits her turn and says in perfectly agreeable tone, "I'll take this pair, please." If she has to wait a couple of minutes for package and change she does it complacently.

She has been trained to this more placid frame of mind by shopping experience. And, besides, she would not dare reveal a bad temper to the onlookers nor to the girl behind the counter.

Trains the Nerves.

It is not so much in defense of the telephone girl I write this, but to try to point out the folly of a telephone temper, because it uses up energy that, applied to legitimate things, would incur profit, instead of total loss. To prove further that by one's mental attitude in this daily habit of telephone using you may school yourself to a better self-control in other things as well. If we are a nation living upon your nerves, here is a national opportunity to train those nerves.

Let the telephone girl herself be your object lesson.

Whether you have your own private opinion about these girls and their service ability, you have to admit they have better self-control, because, being human beings, if they had not office regulations alone would not prevent them occasionally from breaking out with a few plain facts about what they think of us. They work under a constant pressure that few of us who have not visited central offices believe. I venture to say that the high strung, nervous person, who is usually the telephone "crank," would not survive a full day of it.

Yet, I found in my investigation that a telephone central office is at least one place in the world where the golden rule is applied for our benefit, whether we return the compliment or not; that the operators generally believe or have trained themselves to the belief that the majority of telephone users are reasonable and perfectly willing to coöperate in getting the right connections quickly; that the desire to give good service actuates the operator to a remarkably high degree and because it does only unusual duress can irritate her; that when you get cross and grouchy and fail to do your part she is more apt to feel sorry for you than to be grieved at you.

Part of Your Job.

As a "coöperator" in the more even scheme of things all she asks is that you be sure to have the right number, speak it carefully and distinctly, talking into the telephone with your lips about half an inch from the mouthpiece, and to move the receiver hook up and down slowly, not rapidly, when you wish to recall the operator.

"Doing this is part of your job," she says. Every time you fail on these points you put difficulties in the way of the operator trying to serve you.

Following these instructions, I wish to inject right here, is excellent training for better mental poise.

Let us take a tip from the girl herself and today when we pick up the receiver let us do it in a "do unto others" spirit. Let us return her compliment and believe that she is perfectly willing to coöperate with us in getting our connections quickly; let our desire to play fifty-fifty with her actuate us to a high degree and only under durance vile let us be irritated. Then there won't be "any sech" durance, unless we manufacture it ourselves.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend to send may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

EVERY ONE CAN HELP.

SPRING brings thoughts of house cleaning and gardens and outdoor sports to most of us—but it also brings a need which we can meet now better than at any other time of the year. This need also is one that everybody can help to meet, and invalids pass the laden days more The need is for articles to help shut-ins and vnialids pass the laden days more pleasantly, and perhaps even to help them improve their lot.

If you'll think of your own home, as you check it over in preparation for spring house cleaning or moving, you'll see how easy this need is to meet. Undoubtedly in odd corners you have a lot of books and magazines that you no longer want. Perhaps you have phonograph records that are never played and merely are cluttering up the cabinet. Such articles, given to shut-ins and invalids, are all but priceless—so why not put them to work in this good cause?

Many have other articles, too, that will be more helpful than you could imagine, unless you've actually seen the need. Crochet books, cuttings of cloth for use in making quilts, even beads—many and many a shut-in will spend happy days and weeks, if you'll give such articles. Technical books, which would help ambitious young men learn some subject they could turn to advantage when their health improves, also are in demand. If you have text books for a correspondence course in business or engineering, about the house, for example, they might well be the means of starting some man now an invalid upon the road to a lifetime of prosperous, productive citizenship.

Think over what you have, and let us know!

Struggling Heroine Asks Help.

I need French books, both elementary and advanced, and am not in position to purchase them. I am trying to help a widowed mother. The youngest is 15 and in high school. The eldest, next to myself, is subnormal. She is 18, but cannot go to school, nor can she hold any kind of position. I am working and trying to save money to send her away to see if anything can be done for her. I am trying this late in life to finish high school, so that I may be better able to help my mother. She is very small and wears 16 year old dress, or size 36. My brother takes a size 36 or 38; he is large for his age. The girl does not need clothes so badly, for she does not go out. I am very handy, and anything too large I can easily remedy. M. N. M.

I feel certain M. N. M.'s appeal in behalf of her widowed mother, sister, and brother will not go unanswered.

An Appeal from Michigan.

Living near me is a man of 37 and his widowed mother, close to 70. He has been in an invalid chair for thirteen years and has been blind for the last seven years (inflammatory rheumatism). His hip and knee joints are set in a drawn up position and he sleeps and eats in his chair all the time. He is very cheerful in spite of all. They are dependent on the city. Different folks help in various ways to make things comfortable for them. They had an old horn style phonograph give them and that is about the only recreation they have. I would like to have you ask if any one having any old disc records of any make would please send them to me and I will take them to the parties. I will gladly pay all charges on them. E. P. G.

There are some, I am sure, overstocked with records who would be only too happy to divide with the invalid. This call comes from Benton Harbor, Mich. It will afford me great pleasure to send along his address.

A Plea from the Poor Farm.

I am in the tuberculosis sanitarium in Oak Forest. The doctors say I am not tubercular; therefore they are planning to transfer me to the poor farm, because I have no home. I could not find work in Chicago, as I cannot speak above a whisper and my eyesight is poor. I wish to ask if any one happens to have some beads they would like to pass on. Some one may have a discarded lamp shade with a bead fringe around it. I can make beaded articles on wire, such as flower baskets, napkin rings, etc.; but I have no suitable beads left. Could I also ask for a dress for Sundays for the warmer weather, size 38, and a pair of slippers, 4-D, low heels? I would be so grateful for these things. A. D. W.

Surely a simple request—simple out of all proportion to the pleasure it will give! Hasn't some one the articles that will meet this need?

Here's a Cat for Some One.

I have a beautiful young tiger cat I wish to find a good home for. Leaving the city, we are forced to give him up. He is a great pet and thoroughly house broke. K. L. M.

Thank you. Attention, cat lovers—but please don't all speak at once.

Wants Movie Magazines.

Are there several motion picture magazines of any kind about six months back which are no longer wanted? I shall immediately forward or refund postage. L. K.

We'll ask and see.

Shut-In Asks Music.

"I would be so glad to get 'Half Hours with the Best Composers.' I am a shut-in. I have a piano and can play, but cannot afford to buy music. "E. D."

To anyone who can gratify the request of E. D., I shall be pleased to send her address.

Daughter Is Invalid.

"My daughter, 18, was in the hospital several weeks. She is home now, getting along nicely, but she will be a long time getting over this breakdown. She can't walk—she is crippled in the feet. It is lonesome for her. I wish you would ask if any readers have books, beads, yarn, quilt pieces, or fancy work books to spare. She would appreciate them. She is weak, but still she wants something to help pass the time. I thank you many times for your kindness. F. I. W."

I trust Mrs. W. pleads not in vain for her invalid daughter.

No One to Help Him.

"I am a patient at a tuberculosis sanitarium. I have been here for over a year and need a few things. I have no people at all. If one of your kind readers has an old suit of clothes, 38 size; cap 7, also some old shirts size 15, I would appreciate them. F. R."

Who has some clothing to help out here? I'll send along the patient's address.

HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY CARELESS WASHING

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulsified in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it is very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

Homey Charm in House of Wooden Sides

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped addressed envelope for personal reply.

THERE is a subtle appeal in the wood sides frame house which touches a most responsive chord in the hearts of many home owners. Certainly houses of this material have a homelike appearance, than which nothing is more desirable for a dwelling. The effect is quite distinctive from that produced by any other materials, some of which have a coldness and aloofness which does very well for apartments and large buildings but which, unless carefully manipulated, does not "set well" when used for a small home. However, in the last few years the architectural fraternity has taken great strides forward in developing attractive qualities for small homes, employing all of the common materials ordinarily used in building construction. Those who wish to build their own homes can now readily obtain the particular effect which most clearly reflects their own tastes.

The delightful dwelling, of which illustrations are shown herewith, was designed by Architect Daniel E. Shea of Springfield, Mass. It is constructed of wide clapboards, painted white, with green blinds. The roof is covered with dull brown shingles. Stucco has been used on both chimneys and on the second floor for that portion of the front side of the building between the windows. This constitutes an attractive setoff for the clapboards and blinds.

Besides the fact that the front of the house is, beyond doubt, interesting, with its flower filled window boxes under each window of the upper story, there are, in the interior, several innovations in design which make this home decidedly different.

Directly inside of the front entrance there is a hallway, at the left of which is a convenient closet. Further on, at the left hand side, is the kitchen; straight ahead is the dining room, and at the right hand is the large living room.

The modern trend is shown in the location and layout of the kitchen. Being in the front of the house, it has one window which overlooks the street. This enables the housewife, who is doing her own work, to be apprised, quickly, of the approach of any visitor. There is another window at the side, which, used in conjunction with the one first described, affords good ventilation. There are two large, built-in pantry cases, reaching to the ceiling, in which all of the materials in common use may be placed. This convenience practically does away with the necessity for an old style pantry closet.

The kitchen is large enough for breakfast use, but, if it is so desired, the small pantry, just outside, may be converted into a breakfast alcove without difficulty. All that would be necessary to accomplish this would be to change the location of the entry door, moving it a little towards the rear of the house. Used as a pantry, there is room for a good sized refrigerator. There is also a place for a cabinet and case, which should be shallow and readily accessible. Equipped in this way, it would be most admirably suited for what might be called a cold room.

The dining room is lighted on three sides, and overlooks an attractively arranged garden, in which a grape arbor and small fountain are centers of interest. The garden part of the yard is separated from the drying yard and vegetable plot. Properly planted, it would furnish delightful privacy, and would be a good place for the children's playground. The dining room opens on to a glassed-in porch with a red quarry tile floor. It is accessible also from the commodious 19x11½ foot living room. This room is exceptionally well lighted by double hung windows on three sides, the fireplace forming the central decorative feature. The customary furnishings may be attractively placed in a room of this size, without necessitating a sense of crowding.

Upstairs there are three bedrooms, each having its own closet. The two larger rooms have three windows apiece, providing cross ventilation and plenty of light. The other bedroom, though somewhat smaller, is also a corner room, having two windows. The bathroom and linen closet are accessible from the upper hallway.

Particularly interesting is the large bedroom, 16x11½ feet, which occupies an entire wing of the building. There is a charming spot, suitable for a window seat, overlooking the garden. This room, with its many lights, gives promise for cheerfulness.

Only a portion of the basement is excavated, space being provided for the boiler and fuel room and a small laundry and storeroom. It hardly seems likely that the space for the laundry is adequate for most families, so the home builder should consider having an additional portion of the space excavated to provide ample space for hanging clothes on winter days. Both the boiler and fuel rooms are inclosed in dust tight partitions, reaching to the ceiling, insuring cleanliness throughout the house.

The entire basement ceiling has been plastered on metal lath in order to safeguard the home against fire. Similar construction has been used around all of the openings in the floors and in the partitions wherever the furnace heating ducts are placed. This conforms with the recommendations of Secretary Hoover's building code committee, which recommended better protection around chimneys and furnaces for small dwellings.

A house of the type designed by Architect Shea can readily be built on a 40x100 foot lot, still leaving ample space along one side for a driveway leading to a garage in the rear.

Answer to Queries.

E. W.: Have natural colored casement cloth curtains in your sunroom. Use a fiber rug in alternating, twelve inch squares of black and ecru on the floor.

* *

H. O. H.: Have chintz overdrapes in your living room. These could be figured in amethyst, dull rose, and sage green on a light gray ground. Have a deep gray rug. Putty colored voile glass curtains would be nice at the dining room windows.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

RECALLING HAPPY DAYS.

HENRY, DEAREST: Do you realize that this is the first letter I have ever written you since those days, how long ago they seem, when I used to write polite notes beginning "My dear Mr. G——" and ending "Sincerely yours"? And in between there was only an invitation to dine or some such trifle. I cannot believe that those days are only six weeks ago, as time is counted on calendars. I can scarcely remember what I was like nor how I filled my days before the golden glory of our love flooded the world with sunshine for me. Please, dearest, don't smile your funny, twisted smile when you read that. I'm in earnest, so terribly in earnest.

Shall you save this letter tied in pink ribbons with a sprig of lavender in the bow? That is what the heroes in novels do, isn't it. And then just at the wrong time the letter is found. Now you'll be frowning and thinking I am silly and frivolous. I am silly; I was born that way, and O, beloved, I must laugh a bit tonight lest I weep.

You cannot think how desolate the world is without you. I feel like a little lonely atom walking in a great empty gray space. The people around me seem vague, phantomlike, the sun has gone under a cloud, and even the mountains, our mountains, dearest, are dwarfed now that you are not here to look at them with me. I think I shall be only half alive until you come back to make me whole again.

Are you taking care of yourself, dear? I am obsessed with a fear, such a childish fear, but I cannot cast it from my heart. I am so afraid you will never come back to me that these wonderful weeks will fade away into a dream. I think of your kisses, of your arms about me, and, instead of the tide of joy that used to flood my heart I think "perhaps I'll never have such happiness again. Perhaps it's all over." Dearest, dearest, it isn't so—tell me I'm a fool, scold me, but promise me you are coming back to me, that our dream is to be fulfilled.

I am hysterical and I made up my mind not to be. Forgive me, darling, for I meant to write you a happy letter. But how can I when my happiness is miles away with you, with you and with my heart that I have given into your keeping. Take care of them for me and take care of your dear self and keep on loving me as I shall love you forever and forever. ANNA.

More Beautiful—and Less Expensive

Your baby can have a lovelier carriage today than ever before. Not only is it more graceful in its curving, unbroken lines, and flawless in its weaving; it is less expensive.

The remarkable Lloyd Loom—the invention of Marshall B. Lloyd—is responsible for this transformation in baby carriages. It weaves a smooth, strong, endless strand of finest wicker into a graceful bowl shape, without seams, corners or short ends. And, because it weaves thirty times as fast as hands, a Lloyd Loom Carriage can be bought for a lower price than has ever before been asked for a fine baby carriage.

Every feature contributes strength, beauty and convenience—the resilient, oil-tempered springs; fifth wheel reversible gear; continuous steel pushers; special wheels; patented automatic hood adjustment; sturdy construction to resist hard wear; handsome corduroy upholstery; lasting enamel finish.

Good dealers everywhere can show you Lloyd Loom Carriages.

The only carriage woven in desired shape from one endless wicker strand.

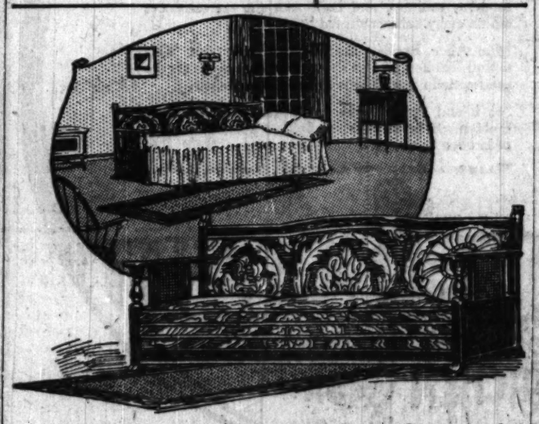
If Hair is Turning Gray, use Sage Tea

YOU can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.



Convenient! Seats for three or four, and sleeping accommodations for the unexpected guest; the Davenport Bed provides them all. Good furniture stores carry a variety.

Patterns by Clotilde

1,651—Blouse. Sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2¾ yards of forty inch material.

1,249—Skirt. Sizes 26, 28, 30, and 32 inches waist measure. Size 28 requires 3⅛ yards of forty inch material.

1,646—Misses' and juniors' dress. Sizes, 12, 14, 16, and 18 years. Size 14 requires 3⅝ yards of thirty-six inch material.

1,655—Woman's apron. Cut in one size only. 2¾ yards of twenty-seven inch wide material and nine yards of edging will be required for making it.

How to Use the Patterns

PATTERN No. 1651 is really a blouse and skirt combined as a dress. No. 1651 is the blouse pattern, the skirt pattern is No. 1249. Both are needed to complete the outfit, but each one can be used separately with excellent effect.

The blouse has a plain back and plain front with applied double bands stitched on from shoulder to bottom, giving the effect of tucks, and one piece sleeves, slashed at the back and left free from wrist band at the back. The pattern is also perforated for a shorter length sleeve if desired. There is an inset tucked shield, and at the waist line a soft ribbon tied in moderately long loops and ends, will make a pretty finish. Crêpe de chine, printed or plain, will make up well, and if the plain is used, why not embroider your monogram on the left side of the front?

The skirt pattern, No. 1249, is a one piece, straight gathered one, in a raised waist line; and the side panels may be plaited or gathered. One of the crêpes or satins will make up beautifully in this design, and the plaited panels will really be better than gathered ones. If you like, the lower edges of the panels can be hemstitched when the plaiting is done. Lay the hem carefully across the bottom of each panel, basting it in small, even stitches and take them to some firm that does plaiting, etc.

Two materials will combine attractively in pattern No. 1646. Woolen serge, for instance—making the lower part of the dress, the collar and cuffs of a check; and the upper part of the dress of a plaid color. Or if a wash material is chosen, why not use chambray or gingham in a plain color combined with a check?

The seam lines should be clearly marked on every part of the pattern; and in setting the skirt pieces onto the upper parts, the upper skirt edges should first be turned in, and basted down if necessary. Then lay the middle front of the skirt on the middle front of the waist and pin in place; then pin smoothly towards each side. Do this same way on the back. After they are basted and stitched the sleeves should be made and set in.

Cross stitch embroidery, or the plain blanket stitch would be good looking where waist and skirt join; and in the little "V" shaped places, a small flower or conventional design of a contrasting color could be appliqued on; or some design embroidered in colors.

Whatever is used to outline the adjoining should be used on the collar and cuff edges.

The dress is slashed and closed in the center front at the neck, and this opening may be bound with the dress material. Of course, if something contrasting is used for the collar and cuffs, it will be pretty to bind with that. A narrow strip of the material should be hemmed and set on the under side of the opening, fastening it to the right edge. It can be hemmed to the wrong side of the binding without letting the stitches come through to the right side. Then fasten to the left side with a couple of the smaller sized snaps. There is no beauty in having these slashed openings spread apart, showing the skin underneath.

Pattern No. 1655 is for one of those enveloping aprons that the majority of women need sometimes. It is easy to make, easy to get into and out of, and should wash and iron easily, all good points.

The apron is cut in one piece and the back laps over the front at the sides and buttons there. Sateen, percale, or gingham will, any of them, make up well, and the edges should be faced with shaped pieces. A single row of feather stitching or chain stitching outlining the neck and sides from top to bottom, would be pretty, and one could add a patch pocket if desired. A single initial or a monogram embroidered on the left side of the upper front would be most attractive.

STATE ST., JACKSON TO VAN BUREN ST.

Rothschild's $100,000 ONE-DAY SALE OF Furniture

The Most Gigantic Day in Furniture History Will Break at 8:30 Next Monday Morning

Just a year ago today we sold $180,000 worth of high grade furniture in one day and then and there we began to prepare for this sale. For weeks the furniture has been rolling into our stock rooms with a rumble of thunder. It is here! We are ready!! To say "train loads" of furniture would not be any exaggeration. The great "clock of time" is ticking off the moments with machine gun speed. 8:30 A. M. tomorrow will be here before you know it. Buy Monday and pay monthly.

150 people will take orders on Monday. A year ago it was estimated by prominent furniture magazines that most of the time 900 customers were on the floor at one time. For this reason we invite you to do your selecting early.

These Specials Are for Monday Only

They must either be charged to your regular charge account, or 25 per cent paid on a monthly account, or be paid cash in full, or part paid C. O. D. of 25%.

Many fine Chicago furniture stores have been telling you that furniture is advancing rapidly in price. They tell the truth, but Rothschild's are "Price Cutters." This One-Day Sale will enable you to save a large sum of money.

See the Bedroom Suite we formerly advertised at $437.50. Tomorrow, it is $195

See the Dining Room Suite formerly in Gum Wood at $182.50. Tomorrow in Solid Walnut, $119.50

We Advise Everybody to Shop Early

It will be impossible to take care of the crowds during the busy hours. Be here at 8:30.

Rothschild's—Sixth Floor.

We cannot accept telephone or mail orders on the specials advertised on these two pages. Please call in person as early as possible.

Large Purchases May Be Held Until May 1st

Single suites, odd pieces, and small specials must be delivered promptly. We consider it fair to have it agreed that in a tremendous One-Day Sale like this, when it is so hard to get enough salespeople, that these sales are made with the understanding that they are not subject to cancellation.

Adjustments

We must use all of our adjusting help to sell furniture tomorrow. Please defer all furniture adjustments or inquiries until Tuesday. We thank you for this help. BUY tomorrow.

SEED BOOKS FOR COOKS.

THE real cook loves the seed catalogue. Any one aspiring to be a real cook should cultivate a liking for seed catalogues. We have now reached the season when the cook who would get relief from monotonous meat and potato and pudding ideas should read seed catalogues. There is something most appetizing about many a description of a vegetable that may send you at once to market to get it and to kitchen to cook it.

I love seed catalogues. I collect them from the seed growers, and even when they are old I cling to them as to a battered dictionary. I love their fresh chromo illustrations. For me they have the charm that strikes the eye and the merit that wins the soul as well as wins through to the soup pot.

By the way, and just as an aside, I want to say that two of the new catalogues list borage and to thank one grower for calling this to my attention; but, Sir Company, I would have liked it better if you had not been so capriciously uncertain about my sex. I particularly dislike being called Mr. Jane. Of course you tried to hit it right by using all possible prefaces to my name on the envelope. And I would like to say to you, never, never, never to "boil" any vegetable in salted water and then throw that water away. Boil it not. Vegetables contain sugar which melts in hot water. They contain precious salts—vegetable salts, not mineral—which also dissolve in water. They contain aroma which what most people call boiling is sent out into the air, but it should remain with them.

And there is not one vegetable in the world that cannot be advantageously cooked under a cover, if gently. Chopped onions in butter can be cooked in three minutes sometimes, under cover, and be as sweet as sugar. The aroma, or call it "smell" if you will, has been kept in the onion, too, and its flavor is therefore delicate instead of strong, delicious instead of diluted, etc. No, Mr. Seedsman, you tell us wonderful things, joyous and helpful things about edible plants, but I think it would be a little better if you did not try to teach us to cook; that is, unless you know just as much about cooking as of growing foods.

But there is so much to love and praise in seed catalogues, let's not wax critical, but take what we do not like in them as perhaps provocative of worth while decisions. Of course, some catalogues are more up to date about food matters, outside the field and garden, than others. One catalogue, for instance, says truly, in reference to lettuce, that it "has become a year round necessity on our tables with the discovery of vitamines and the part they play in maintaining good health," and again, "The value of spinach in the diet has been established by the vitamine investigation."

And since we have mentioned spinach, it is interesting to note that the variety King of Denmark, or "Anenskov," seems to be featured by all the seed growers as supplying a long cut spinach need with its compact and low rosettes. One catalogue says that it is likely to replace all others for spring planting because it continues to grow and holds its fine qualities after all other sorts have gone to seed.

Beans.

It seems that east and midwest differ in ideals about green shell beans, like limas and some others more old fashioned. The midwest says that they should be "tender, sweet, and juicy," rather than "dry and mealy," and the east says of an improved lima, "The quality is exceedingly fine, the beans cooking rich and mealy." The cook knows that people are most likely to be pleased if they like them mealy, for it is hard to cook market beans so that they will be anything else than that. Market limas are shelled, lose moisture by evaporation, breathe vitiated air, and it is hard to cook them to make a perfection dish of beans.

One catalogue has a "masterpiece bean" and speaks of certain string beans as "snap shorts." A true snap bean, we can learn from seed catalogues, should have meaty pods, yet we find these rather seldom in the market, those truly meaty.

Sweet or Sugar Corn.

The sugar content of Stowell's Evergreen, one of the catalogues says, is 5 per cent, "and within thirty minutes after it had been picked this begins to decrease through chemical action." We eat too much tasteless corn, although growers are trying to produce varieties that will not lose their sweetness so rapidly as this.

The woman who goes to market will profit if she knows something about how an ear of corn looks without stripping and wasting it by the barrel as so many do, to my great discomfort. Learn to tell by the feel through the husk, and the appearance of top whether it is filled or not, and take a little risk for the sake of the improved flavor—the grocer has to take too much risk on this today.

And here is a bit of social history about "Aristocrat Sugar Corn." A catalogue tells us this: "The variety was grown for a number of years by a gardener who supplied truck to aristocrats of Newport, R. I., and as it was the finest sweet corn that came to market he found no difficulty in disposing of all he raised."

As loyal Americans we can learn much of historic and social interest by finding out all we can about corn, about what the ears of different colors have meant to the peoples of the southwest, and what the red ear meant in ancient days of corn husking. Of course these things are not in the catalogues, but you learn that you can buy black seed, etc.

Green Peas.

The pods of the sugar peas make a pleasing vegetable, or let the catalogue tell: "We consider this the best of the edible pod sorts, in which the pods are used when half grown and are cooked in the same way as snap beans. The pods of Melting Sugar are very large, four to five inches long, broad, often curved and twisted, and, when young, stringless, very tender, and finely flavored."

There seem to be a number of varieties of these peas, both mammoth and dwarf, and we should undoubtedly be better acquainted with them. To cook them wash the pods, prepare like string beans, complete the cleaning by dropping them into boiling water for a minute or two, give them a cold dip, and then cook most gently in a little water. Remember there is sugar in them and try to keep it in.

Onions.

Have you ever seen onions that would grace a fruit bowl? I have a few times. We vulgarize the onion too universally and completely. The variety called "Ailsa Craig" seems to come in for a great deal of commendation, as a keeper, for eating raw and for "bred-in fine quality." Of another variety an eastern catalogue says: "It is strictly fancy, and is found on fruit stands during the fall, where it is sold as a Spanish onion."

VAN RAALTE Silk Stockings for Springtime

"Because She Loves Nice Things"

The woman who buys Van Raalte Silk Stockings knows they are made of the finest silk, fashioned in the most expert ways, and designed to delight the most critical eye. All these facts she accepts, but the real reason she insists on "Van Raalte quality" is just because she loves nice things.

Van Raalte is pre-eminent in Silk Stockings for General Every-day Wear for Afternoon Wear for Evening Wear for Sports Wear

Say "Van Raalte Silk Stockings" to the saleswoman if you really want the best.

Plain but Smart

The wonderful quality of the silk in Van Raalte Stockings gives to even their plain styles an out-of-the-ordinary distinction. With lisle tops, $2.00 to $3.00; all silk, $2.50 to $3.50; out-sizes $3. to $3.50.

Paris Clocks have Charms

For the woman who likes just a small open insert Van Raalte makes Silk Stockings with Paris Clocks in many designs. $3.00 to $6.50.

Stripes are Smart

Glove Silk in two-toned stripes and a variety of other patterns is used for an interesting group of Van Raalte Silk Stockings priced from $2.50 to $4.00.

The Simple Clock

Van Raalte is a past-master in the addition of that little touch of embroidery that makes a silk stocking smart. Embroidered styles $3.50 to $5.00.

Which To Choose

The lady with many pairs of Van Raalte Silk Stockings enjoys the delicious difficulty of deciding which to wear first.

Of course, if she's going to the Country Club that simplifies matters a bit—she will choose a pair with embroidered clocks to match the plaid in her new Rodier skirt or, perhaps, a pair of those two-toned stripes that seem inspired with slenderness.

Should tea or bridge allure her, there are Paris clocks galore, or the daintiest of hand-embroidered motifs.

Possibly she plans a walk in tweeds and oxfords, in which case she may well choose a plain dark shade, leaving for the evening the sheerness of chiffon and the delicate lace designs which lend such old-time grace to ultra-modern ankles.

A Most Important Accessory

Stockings are a veritable index to tastes—an index that all may read. They may be as simple in design as one's purse or the occasion dictates, but they must be faultless in fit and even in weave.

If elaborate, their patterns must show the restraint of good taste, they must suit the costume and the hour to perfection.

Van Raalte Silk Stockings are designed for women who know and love nice things—ask for them wherever you shop.

N.B.—Look for the colored MATESTRIPE on all Van Raalte Thread Silk Stockings. Helps you mate pairs and identify qualities.

How Stuart's Calcium Wafers Work Out to the Skin and Clear It of Facial Blemishes

The manner in which Stuart's Calcium Wafers influence a beautiful complexion is one of nature's marvels. Their first action is to remove the sour fermentations that are apt to poison the blood and thus disfigure the skin. Then the calcium itself is a natural agency to skin health, and is appropriated by the tissues for its own particular use in repair work. These effects are visibly noticeable to those troubled with a pimply skin, or one that is muddy or red or blotchy, scaly and rough and coarse. The Calcium Wafers induce a reaction to healthier tendencies and soon the pinkish complexion begins to assert itself, the blemishes fade away, the dimples seem animated and the entire appearance is one of vivacious beauty instead of unsightliness.

Get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at the nearest drug store and note the wonderful results. You will surely be delighted.

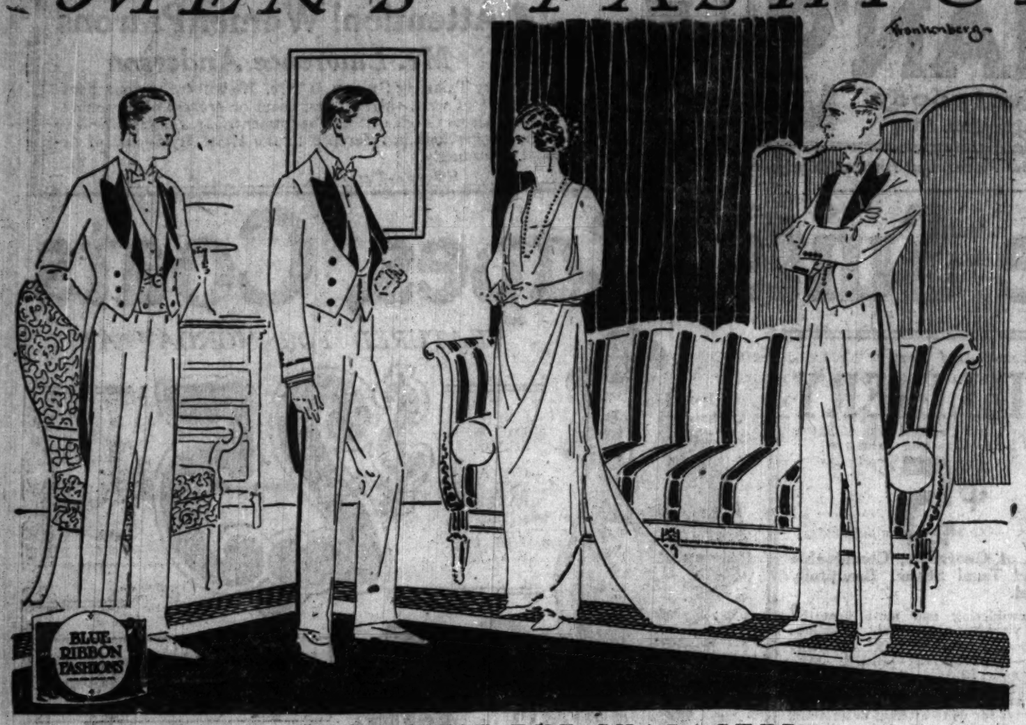
MEN'S FASHIONS



DRESSING TO FIT THE CHARACTER.

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico The Tribune, Chicago. inclose stamped, addressed envelops for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK. — (Special) Correspondence.)—One of the things an actor does when he has been given a part in a play, after he has settled the important matter of salary and glanced over his lines is to study the character from the point of view of the clothes he shall wear. Naturally it is just as necessary that one dress to type as that one read the lines and carry out the action to suit the part one is playing. This, of course, is most clearly brought out in the case of costume drama. McKay Morris leading man in Miss Barrymore's new play, "The Laughing Lady," when he played Romeo to her Juliet, dressed in a slightly different style from that which he assumes in the present play in which he is supporting her.

On the other hand, Kenneth Hunter also of "The Laughing Lady," dresses in a decidedly different manner from Mr. Morris although they both play the parts of English gentlemen. Possibly off the stage Mr. Hunter and Mr. Morris are sartorially twins. Possibly they are not. But the whole point is that clothes are an index to character, off stage and on, and must therefore be taken decidedly into consideration.

To treat Ethel Barrymore's play from the point of view of the men in it may seem like reading Shakespeare for the story, but, after all, the greatest stars need an accompaniment for their playing, and "The Laughing Lady" is a play which contains three or four well dressed men, so let us look into it and see just what way they have dressed to fit the characters they are portraying.

Although, as I have mentioned, Mr. Morris as Sir Hector Colladine, D. S. O., is the leading man, he does not make an appearance until the second act, and so we shall not take him up first, but will rather turn to Mr. Plimmer as Hamilton Playgate. Mr. Hunter as Sir Garrison Peters, K. C. B. and Mr. Keightly, playing Daniel Farr, K. C., all three of whom are shown in evening dress in the illustration.

The fact that they are all in full dress, and not dinner jackets, although the occasion is nothing more ceremonial than a quiet dinner party followed by a still more quiet bridge game, is the first sign that the actors took the parts into consideration. The play is English, and the Englishman still wears his full dress clothes to any evening affair more formal than a quiet evening at a man's club. If he takes a woman to a hotel for dinner, and desires to wear a dinner coat instead of full dress, he generally asks her permission. Were this play set in New York City, the chances are that all the men would have worn dinner coats.

There is probably less to be learned about a man when he is in evening clothes than in his business clothes. There is not much latitude for variety. But there are certain little points which will give a man away. One knows that Mr. Playgate, the host of the evening, a middle aged man who has been a gentleman all his life, is not interested in the latest vagaries of fashion. He dresses properly and neatly, but does not seek to achieve the smart. His full dress outfit does not cause one to look twice. The same is true of Mr. Farr, a middle aged barrister. His costume differs from that of his host only in that his waistcoat is double breasted and straight across at the bottom. Like Mr. Playgate, he wears patent leather button dress shoes.

The smart dresser of the party is Sir Harrison Peters, a man who has according to the story of Cynthia Dell the charming cat of the play, made his millions over night practically during the war. He does not dress in bad taste, but it is obvious that clothes are not the last thing in the world he thinks about. This may be illustrated by the black silk socks with quite a wide self-stripe which are shown to advantage worn with low patent leather dress oxfords. In the second act he carries on his smart dressing by means of a braided cutaway and checked trousers, gray spats, and a gray bow tie.

Sir Hector, a young man, interested more in exploring and wars than clothes, is also well dressed, but in a more inconspicuous manner. He wears a double breasted dark blue suit, a white shirt, and a striped tie of purple lighter purple, and gray. Mr. Farr when he appears in the second act carries out his quiet middle aged character by means of a quiet outfit consisting of a dark brown single breasted sack suit, tan spats, white shirt, and a navy blue cravat with small white polka dots. Mr. Farr is a good example of careful choosing of clothes to suit figure and coloring. The brown suit is in excellent harmony with his hair and complexion, and both his wing collar with evening dress, and his turnover in the daytime, are high and with small opening, the best type for his rather thin neck.

The last act gives us Mr. Playgate again, in a black suit, patent leather button top shoes, a bow tie, and a modestly striped shirt. Mr. Farr has changed his brown suit for a double breasted dark blue. Sir Hector doesn't appear at all, nor does Sir Harrison.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on the most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscript returned.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

To the Contrary.

One evening, while waiting for my fiancé to take me out to dinner, some friends called. We began to discuss critics of clothes, and I said I never would marry anyone who was inclined that way; that my fiancé never criticised my clothes.

I always made my own hats, so had several to choose from. I was adorned in one of my own creations when the bell rang. I rushed to the door, all smiles. Romeo stepped in, took one look at me and, not seeing my guests, exclaimed: "I'll certainly be glad when I can buy your hats. That is the third one I have seen you wear in the last few weeks and each one homelier than the other, if such a thing is possible."

That certainly was my most embarrassing moment. M. H.

Pride Takes a Fall.

One warm summer day I dressed in my best and went to the public library. It was crowded, and I felt proud in my new garments.

Finding an interesting book, I sat in front of a bookcase to read, then left for a few moments and returned and sat down where I thought the chair was.

Hurriedly I clutched the bookcase to save myself from sitting on the floor. The titters of a group of young sters reached my ears. I rose and left the building. It was some time before I returned. J. T.

That Was Different.

I was calling on a friend one afternoon when our conversation drifted to an election. It was shortly after the time women were given the vote.

I remarked that if some of the women would stay at home instead of trying to help so much, the election might have been different. My friend informed me then she had been out all day and thought she had done her duty. I made some excuse to go as soon as possible. A. M.

The Hit That Failed.

I sing in a vested choir in a church in my home town where we end each hymn by singing, "A-men."

Not long ago I visited a girl friend of mine and on Sunday went to church with her. I sat next to a gentleman she had been anxious to have me meet. I sang lustily on the first hymn, thinking all the time how much of an impression I must be making. At the close of the hymn I ended with "a-men," discovering too late that I was the only one singing it. P. T.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

VARIATIONS OF THE APRON.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Perhaps you will remark when you read my opening statement that it would be a good idea if I would get my illustrations and my remarks on what they illustrate into the same letter. At any rate, here is what I had in mind to say when I became apologetic. Treat it roughly if you will. You may perhaps do me the honor to remember a point I mentioned two or three weeks ago. In a general way it might be summarized under the observation that aprons are popular as trimmings. What I was really saying sounded more like this: that while silhouettes remained straight and narrow as the path of righteousness, they were trimmed in godets, and one of these was set across the front of a certain model like an apron. I submit herewith the model.

As I look at it I find myself reflecting that it really constitutes a new silhouette. That is the way with Paris fashions. They steal upon one so stealthily! One finds one has been guilty of giving out the information that "there is nothing new this season," and then one finds that the whole idea has been gently changed from the year before. There is seldom anything shocking or violent in the onward march of French fashions—indeed, they do not so much march as flow.

But whatever the history and character of styles, the present model looks lovely as the wearer walks and it is floating. The costume is of tete de negre cashmere, and the silhouette is so plain that it calls attention to itself. The full gathered apron going across the front is almost dramatic in its contrast to the severely ungathered, plain back. I am always wary of generalizations, but I think it is not too extravagant to say that this is a feature which characterizes the spring styles.

Note the sleeves and make your own deductions. You will find many like these, that are long, are also tight and plain. The hat is made entirely of ribbon flowers in all shades of nasturtium coloring. The shadings go so prettily with the tete de negre of the dress, and when the two are worn with a black fox fur they make a costume that is striking. Ribbon, by the way, is the one material from which to make your hat.

Tete de negre cashmere with apron effect across front. Marine blue serge with gathered apron front. Cape tailleur in brown serge with straps for trimming. Jacket of braided chenille worn with a crepe dress.

As for variations on the apron front, here is one fancier, by Jean Patou. It would be for when you were opening the door for company, I take it. And let me pause to mention that if we are going to settle on the apron for inspiration there are realms of fantasie yet untouched to draw on. Never had I dreamed of the heights of artistic achievement to which one of these articles could rise until I visited Paris. Starting in blue checked gingham and reaching its culmination as an article of garnishment in lace and chiffon, I think the history of the apron would not be uninteresting in itself.

The one shown herewith is in the material of the suit—all of these used as dress trimming are—and in this case it happens to be marine blue. It is what is technically known as a gathered apron front, but you can see that the gathers are not as simple as they sound, but take on the semblance of box plaitings.

Of course you might think from observing the front view of the offering that this fancy plaiting ran all the way round the skirt—but the point to the whole thesis is that it does not, and an important item in spring styles is that fronts are trimmed and backs are smooth, to say nothing of plain. It's an awfully becoming style to many of us, I think, for draperies to pull forward. The back of this skirt is much in the manner of the one preceding, and the jacket is bloused, as in the front view. It is lined with brilliantly printed crepe which extends out over the reveres. The back of the collar as well as the cuffs is edged with monkey fur.

The hat is of dull red and silver ribbons, "catch-stitched" together. You remember the stitch from your fancy work, no doubt, which looks like rick-rack before it is made into a pattern, except that the catch stitch has a straight, horizontal thread running across the middle of it. A black ribbon runs round the crown, and so does a narrower one in silver. The latter ties in a bow on the side.

Cape tailleurs are good, and here, I think, is one of the best of them. It is in tobacco brown serge, with a picot edge and a roll back collar that looks as if it were a piece with the body of the cape, and it isn't, but is sewed on extra. The dress worn under it has tailored bands that button, giving a touch of extra neatness to this simple but chic costume.

The hat is of straw and of the same color with the suit. It is by Georgette and shows a brand new way she has for using quills—as if they were sprouting out of the top of the side of the crown at an angle. They do think up queer conceits in Paris, don't they? If anybody else launched them, I have an idea we should deem the person out of his mind.

Here is something which is ever now flourishing round Monte Carlo—by which token it ought to be good in Paris and points west for a couple of years. The jacket was made by Martial and Armand, and it consists of chenille braided (or would the proper word be "plaited"?) and in bottle green. With it goes a bottle green crepe dress done in thousands of little tucks, running crosswise on the blouse and on the bias in the skirt. It is simple and consequently smart. Premet is responsible for the dress. The hat is rough green straw with green clematis circling it, and now and then an orange colored blossom is showing its head.

IF FATHER Got the Meals

Would Father wear himself out taking four times as many steps as are necessary, to get every meal—for the sake of saving less than a cent a day?

Would he be content to stay cooped up in a kitchen, just because it takes so much time to trudge back and forth for things when they aren't compactly assembled in front of a person? He would not!

Accustomed as Father is to using all sorts of time-, step- and work-savers on his regular job, he'd soon be surrounded with kitchen labor-savers—if he got the meals.

The minute he learned that a Napanee Dutch Kitchenet would save him around 1,592 steps a day, at a cost—spread over the years of daily help it renders—of less than a cent a day, he'd be ordering one.

Especially when he could get a Napanee Dutch Kitchenet at such attractive prices, and on such amazingly easy terms, as are being offered during this Great Co-operative Sale.

Harrington Emerson, the great efficiency expert who scientifically studied the matter, has discovered by repeated tests that without a modern kitchen cabinet a person takes about 2,113 steps a day to get three meals.

Imagine Father tramping a mile every day across the kitchen floor—in the face of Mr. Emerson's proof that by using a Napanee Dutch Kitchenet, it would take only 521 steps to get the same three meals!—a saving of 1,592 steps a day!

Then why should Father expect Mother to do anything that he would not do?

As a matter of fact, he doesn't. He simply hasn't realized, before now, that Mother really needs a Napanee Dutch Kitchenet more than anything else—and that she needs it three times a day, twenty-one times a week, and over 1,000 times a year!

He will probably tell Mother, today, to look into this sale and to pick out a bargain for herself. And when Mother comes in, we will show her the handsomest, most conveniently arranged and best-built kitchen cabinets ever offered—all latest 1923 model Napanees, priced astonishingly low and ready to be placed in her kitchen on ridiculously easy terms!—terms that amount to less than what the average man spends for a couple of cigars each day.

Building a Home?

Ask your architect to leave a space for a Napanee, in your new kitchen. Much superior to built-in cupboards and costs no more, if as much. You can also reserve a Napanee, during this sale, for delivery when your home is completed.

$49.75 now buys a white or gray enameled Napanee

Terms too easy to think about

No premiums can be given at this low price.

Think of it! This week you can buy a genuine latest Model D Napanee Dutch Kitchenet, as featured to the right, handsomely finished in snow white or French gray enamel, and equipped with white porcelain table top (latest non-buckling type), eight-piece set crystal glassware, patented "Easy Fill" flour bin, dustproof curtain, etc., at the amazing price of only $49.75. Come in and see it—and the other sized models, in white, gray or oak—which are also priced most attractively for this Great Sale.

We dealers secured direct from the factory—at most advantageous concessions—a tremendous quantity of these famous Napanee Dutch Kitchenets, considered the finest on the market. Accordingly we are able to offer them at amazing prices. The terms are equally astounding—just arrange to pay a little every so often, as convenient. Could anything be easier? These cabinets will go fast, however, on such prices and terms; so we recommend immediate action.

This is the famous new Model D Napanee Dutch Kitchenet, 40 inches wide. To be had in white or gray enamel at the amazing pric of only $49.75, or—in golden oak—at $39.75. One of our startling values.

Special Exhibits This Week

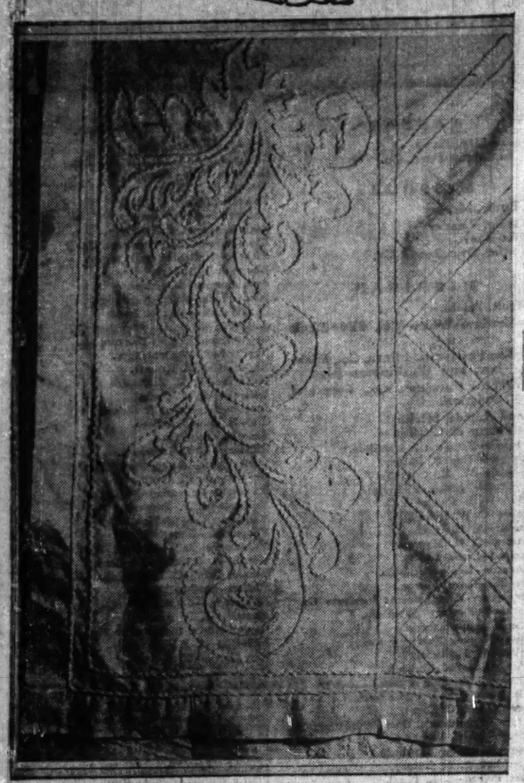
Come in at once. This Great Co-operative Sale offer is for a very limited time—and subject to stocks available. Don't put off your visit—it may cause disappointment. This is the opportunity of the year. Seize it!

NAPANEE DUTCH KITCHENET

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



DESIGN ON BEDSPREAD.

SEVERAL letters have been received asking if there were not some other attractive way of making bedspreads besides applique designs on muslin in different colors, and in response to these a copy of a beautiful old spread is shown. It is not difficult to make, the only suggestion being that one does not work too long on it at a time so the work will become tedious.

A heavy linen sheeting will be the best material to use, and the work is done with mercerized embroidery floss using the floss without splitting the strands. The spread is made to hang down over each side and is cut up at the lower corners to allow of its hanging down across the foot.

A two inch hem finishes the spread all around, and this is sewed by hand. Just above this hem are two parallel rows of chain stitching, one coming just above the hemming and the other one inch beyond.

The border is rather an elaborate leaf design, done in the chain stitch, and it should be an easy matter to find some stunning transfer design for the border that can be done in the chain stitching.

Two parallel rows of the chain stitching are worked all around the spread above the border, matching those at the lower edge.

The pattern over the main part of the spread, covering it from border to border, is made of diamond shaped squares. In order to mark these lines as they should be, find the exact middle of the spread, folding it down the center on this line, and let the centers of the diamonds come on this line. The squares measure eight inches each way, and a second square is done one inch inside. Then the marking of the squares is done each side from the center.

If you wish to be very accurate in your marking, you will mark the first square not only on a line with the center fold, but you will mark it so it will come in the center both as regards the length and width of the spread. This should make the markings come out just alike at the ends and sides. Mark outside lines first, then the matching lines one inch inside.

A spread of this kind would make a beautiful article for a "hope chest," and the work will be fascinating if too much is not attempted at one time. The hemming, and double lines of stitching that come each side of the border could be laid out on a dining room table, for instance, and the marking done more easily. A sharp pointed pencil having a soft lead would be good to use.

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

THE QUEEREST BOSS I EVER HAD

There are good bosses and bad bosses, and then again there are bosses who are just queer. Will you ever be able to forget the queerest boss you ever had? The peculiarities, and the frowns, and the laughs he caused you? Was it his attire that yielded the comedy? Some odd personal habit? Some eccentricity that reduced you to despair? Write out your story, using one side of the paper only and telling it as briefly as possible, and send it to the Queerest Boss Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

Acquiring Punch.

The queerest boss I ever had was a fussy, pompous, bald headed little man with a squeaky voice. He never wore an overcoat, even in the coldest weather. In the office he always put on an old office coat which was coming out at the elbows, although he was quite well to do. The queerest thing he did was to exercise with punching bags every morning after he got to the office or during the day, if he felt he needed waking up. Needless to say, it waked up the entire office force. I have often wondered why the other tenants in the building did not object to the noise.

E. U.

Fly Swatter.

This man was an enemy of the fly. He always kept a swatter on his desk and several others in different places around the office. Whenever he saw a fly he would follow it around until he got it. If it happened to light on some one in the office he would tell them quietly not to move and would then swat the fly, or, if he was afraid the fly would get away, he would swat him and give the person an awful scare.

M. I.

Rough and Ready.

My queerest boss was a man who employed about 100, and sometimes more, men and women. Most of the men were young, most of them smoked, and some of them chewed—all of which was O. K. with the boss; the fellows were allowed to smoke anything, as often as they wished, lots of time was lost going around burning smokes, and "rolling their own," some of them used a pipe and chewed tobacco all day—but there were notices posted all over the office to the effect that the girls were not to chew gum, and woe to the girl that the boss caught chewing gum.

R. F. W.

She Missed the Joke.

My queerest boss was inclined to become playful at intervals and business would be suspended while he romped with some of the younger girls in the office, sometimes for fifteen or twenty minutes.

One day he drew a little girl down on his knee, saying he would keep her there until she "took back" something she had said to him. She was struggling madly to free herself from his grasp, and the rest of the office force were laughing loudly when who should step in the door but his very jealous wife. She took in the picture at a glance, and walked into the boss' private office.

How to Win a Man

by Doris Blake

Miss Jetta Goudal, French Woman, Talks to Doris Blake on Vamps and Winning Men.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Miss Jetta Goudal, Parisian born actress and screen personage, is a vamp with a soul.

What is a vamp? And what a vamp with a soul?

Miss Jetta, a young woman of striking beauty and most compelling personality, knows how to define a vamp. But she remains the vamp with a soul conundrum.

Miss Goudal was not ushered into this country with loud trumpets, like Sorel, for instance. She slipped in quietly a while ago and made a distinct hit as a piquant French adventuress in a Broadway play which, unfortunately and for reasons unknown, went the way of the storage wagon. Then she was chosen for the vamp rôle in "The Bright Shawl," her first screen appearance in this country.

Miss Jetta Goudal.

Always Simply Dressed.

Some few months ago I was seated in the lobby of a hotel awaiting the arrival of a woman friend. The lobby was that of the Martha Washington hotel, a setting undoubtedly responsible for my quandary.

Later I saw her at various places, and noticed the attention she provoked. She was always simply dressed and quiet of maner, but somehow drawing all eyes in her direction.

Then I was told about Miss Jetta Goudal, a French girl, who was driving men to distraction with her rare beauty and brains. I set upon her trail for information on how to win them, and to my complete surprise I discovered her to be the fascinating one of the Martha Washington hotel incident. I found also she had taken up permanent abode in that Adamless Eden, and there I should have to go to interview her. For the uninitiated, let it be understood, that no male guest may venture therein above the ground floor.

Hair Is Blueblack.

I found her in a ravishing tea gown of heavenly pink crêpe de chine and mink collars and cuffs, gold slippers and stockings. The costume was immensely becoming to her blueblack hair, dead white skin, and green-brown eyes. She wears her hair brushed back directly off the forehead into a low knot at the nape of her neck, her ears showing and carrying the burden of fascinating antique amethyst earrings. Her lips are brilliantly scarleted, and she has an adorable retrousse nose. She is petite of form—exquisite. Her background, a hotel room, she assured it has given a soul—the soul of an artist with an eye for color and form—just such a boudoir as only a chic French girl might execute with nimble hands and wit.

"Are you a vamp?" I asked Miss Goudal.

"I am not. A vamp is the superlative of a flirt. A flirt is a person who behaves as though her intentions were to aim at the highest ideal, for love may so be called, when in reality her intentions are mean, small, and selfish. I think a girl who uses a man to take her to dinner, to take her in taxis, to theaters, a girl who accepts jewels or furs or gifts from a man—playing up to him as though she loved him when she does not—who uses a man as a paying teller, is a vamp.

Weary of Questions.

"O, yes, I have experience. Why do you suppose I live at this hotel where men cannot come to visit me? To protect myself, that's why. I do not know what it is about me, but I am conscious that I am stared at wherever I go, and that is why I must dress very, very quietly. I am not pretty. I must have personality. I must have something—excuse me, but I do not mean to be conceited—because I do have unusual experiences. It is so strange. People to whom I have never been introduced will come up to me and ask what my nationality is. I get so tried of it that yesterday when a woman stopped me and asked that question, I said: 'Chinese, but don't you tell anybody, will you?' I am just a novelty, that is all.

"I like men with brains. I do not care anything about a man's looks, but he must have brains. Why? Because a man with brains will say to himself: 'Here is a girl who is trying to get on and is doing it all by her own effort.' He gives you the benefit of his own experience that you may accomplish things yourself. He appreciates everything that is fine and decent about you and respects you."

Scent Is Secret.

"What is that heavenly perfume you are wearing?" I asked her.

"Aw, that is a secret. Perfume is my passion—not men. I adore it. I would keep myself what you Americans call 'broke' buying it. Perfume is to me what women are to some men. I am always hunting the ideal in it. I buy many, many bottles and throw it away for a lovelier one. This one is a mixture of the two loviest I have yet found.

"Well, that is 'vampish,'" I insisted.

"O, I do not want you to think I am an angel. I am not. I do vamp deliberately sometimes when I want something. I always vamp hotel clerks, so I can get a good room. I go up to them and smile friendly and say: 'I am just a poor little girl all alone with no one to look after me, so you will have to take good care of me. (This with the most bewitching accent.)

"And always I get a good one. Sometimes I get a whole suite for the price of just a single room. And I vamp the cleaner when I want him to bring my clothes back in a hurry.

Wants Success in Work.

"But business is one thing. Love is another. And I don't want to win any one. I only want to be a great success in my work. I was engaged for five years to the most wonderful man in the world, but he was killed in the war. And I have ideals about myself and about my work.

"The French woman is trained to be more reserved about herself," she continued. "I have traveled in many parts of Europe and I think the French women more formal and reserved toward men than any other, with the possible exception of the Spanish. And if I may speak impersonally for the moment, the French woman has the most charm. And that is the thing which attracts men. A well bred French girl would never dream of accepting gifts from a man to whom she is not engaged. He comes to her home invited by the parents. She goes to the opera or theater with him in the company of some member of her family. There is always the 'not too attainable' lure about her. And that is a secret with men, isn't it" concluded Miss Goudal.

I guess it is. With you, living at the Martha Washington, it seems to work out pretty consistently, eh?

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh.

HOW DID HE PROPOSE?

Do you remember—of course you do—how your husband proposed to you? Where and how did it happen? Was he scared to death and weren't you on the verge of nervous prostration too? For. Of course, you knew he was going to do it—or didn't you? Perhaps he isn't your husband, but one of the fellows you had to "turn down." How about that? Tell us about it? This goes double, for we want to hear from the men, too. A dollar for every letter printed. Address Proposal Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Via the Typewriter.

I had for a long time been accepting the attentions of an old high school friend who was endeavoring to make a living by fiction and song writing. Since he was rather inclined to be silent when in company and since he had not succeeded in selling any of his work, my family looked with disfavor upon him.

One day while I was returning from work and passing his home his sister called me in, saying her brother had two stories and one song purchased that day. I found him at his typewriter, wild with joy.

"Two in one day, and they told me to come back with more at the song publisher's, so I'm turning out another now," and he looked at the typewriter.

Confusion came over his face. I leaned toward the typewriter to read the manuscript. Then I blushed. He had just finished the title in copying from another sheet. "Marie" was the title. His hands went to the typewriter. He added a comma after the title and then the words "will you marry me."

Haltingly I typed "Yes." M. M.

Taking No Chances.

My husband is of real dark type and very cave man like and that is what I like.

It was in June and the weather was wonderful and the car was in good running order, so we went for a ride.

I told him I was going to my aunt's next day to spend the week end and he said, "I'm not going to take any chances losing you, and I'm going to be a cave man."

We were married that same afternoon and have lived happily ever since. L. A.

Passing the Time.

My proposal was quite unusual. It was always understood between Harold and me that some time we would be married, or at least we thought it was understood.

One afternoon he telephoned to ask me if I cared to go to a movie.

"Why, certainly," was my answer.

When we arrived in the city we had some time to pass away, so we went window shopping.

After that I said: "What shall we do now"

He said: "Let's get married."

It was a shock to have him ask it so suddenly, as I had always wanted a formal proposal. But I said: "All right."

I really didn't think he was serious, nevertheless we started for the justice of the peace, and as we were going up the stairs, I began to feel faint and was thinking that my nerve was almost to fail me; then he took my arm and led to a room. To my surprise he brought forth a marriage license and a ring, and there before four witnesses we were united in matrimony. We have lived five happy years of it so far, and are not dreading the remaining ones in the least. E. M. C.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each child-saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address Bright Sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Elinor's family have just moved into a new bungalow with a carefully seeded lawn, which has not yet started to grow.

The other day Elinor told her playmates, "We can't go on our yard at all until it gets through grassing."

E. J. R.

Bill had been accustomed to borrowing so frequently for his mother that when she sent him to the next door neighbor's to ask the time of day he said, "I'd like to borrow what time it is." M. G. G.

Peggy was trying to tell me of some incident that happened yesterday and I could not quite get it and told her to talk plainly and she answered, "Why, mamma, I cannot splain it nicer." B. M. B.

Tessie climbed into her mother's lap and snuggled closely in her arms. Her mother told her she must go and get dinner, and was about to put her down when the little one exclaimed: "Dear me, you never have time to hold me any more, and I like the feel of your arms so well I just have to be held once in a w[illegible]." E. M.

Donald visited his aunt, who lives in a building. He lives in a house. Looking up at the tall structure, he asked, "Aunt Mae, what layer do you live in?" D. P.

My Nicest Compliment

What was the nicest compliment you ever received? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

A Compliment Worth While.

My employer, for whom I had worked ten years, died suddenly. As he had no family and few close friends, he left me practically all his estate. The will read, "To my most valued and trustworthy secretary, Miss ——, I hereby," etc. I am thoroughly enjoying "my nicest compliment."

MRS. R. D.

Making Her Feel at Home.

My boy friend and I were invited to a dinner dance. I had never met any of the other guests, and I felt rather out of place. But as we entered my friend sang out: "Friends, I have the pleasure of presenting the most beautiful girl in town." N. E. B.

Lady Sunshine.

I called on a little boy when he was confined to the house by illness. He admitted he was pretty lonesome and

I said, "Well, it's a cloudy, gloomy day, Joe, but you will feel better when the sun shines again."

"I forgot the sun isn't shining when you are here," he replied. MRS. G. R.

What I Have Learned in 47 Years Practice

I HAVE been watching the results of constipation for 47 years, since I began the practice of medicine back in 1875. I am now 83 years old, and though from time to time the medical profession makes some wonderfully interesting experiments and tests, the fundamentals of causes and relief in this particular ailment are unchanged.

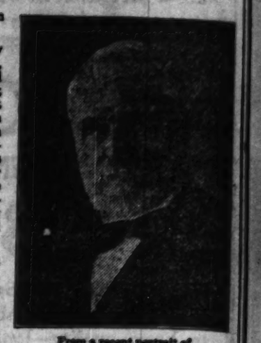
But the people take greater interest today in their health, in diet, exercise and the drinking of water. Constipation, however, will occur from time to time no matter how one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. I believe in getting as close to nature as possible, hence my remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It is made of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. Children will not willingly take bitter things. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written me to that effect.

Over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are now sold every year, and it is the most widely bought family laxative in the world. I say family laxative because all in the family can use it with safety. It is mild enough for the infant in arms, effective in the most chronic constipation of an adult. The formula is on every package.

Recently there has been a new wave of drastic physics. Calomel, a mercurial that salivates and loosens teeth, has been revived; salt waters and powders that draw needed constituents from the blood; coal tar disguised in candy form that causes skin eruptions. In a practice of 47 years I have never seen any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping, and without shock to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It lowers your strength 25 per cent, hardens the arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope but go to a druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a generous-size bottle. Take a teaspoonful that night and by morning you will be well. The cost is only about a cent a dose. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, piles, indigestion, loss of appetite or sleep, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

W. B. Caldwell M.D.



From a recent portrait of DR. W. B. CALDWELL, Born Shelbyville, Mo., 1839

I REPEAT MY FREE OFFER
$10,000 worth of trial bottles of Syrup Pepsin free

Last year I agreed to spend $10,000 cash for free samples of my Syrup Pepsin, and send them free and postage paid to all who sent. A tremendous mail was the result. But there must be many who did not write. I would like to get their address this time. So I now renew my offer, to remove distress of my approaching 84th birthday, and will again donate $10,000 to free samples. I am anxious to say one to every American home. Write for yours today. Simply give me your address. Say: Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Mine is truly a free gift; it costs the public nothing.

GOOD MORNING!

Somebody's ALWAYS fooling us! We go to see a picture we're sure we're going to like, and—BAM!—down to earth with us. We slide in hesitatingly to witness a film we have an awful feeling is going to give us a nice sensation at the pit of our tummies, and, la, la! what HAVE we? A little corner of heaven! An inspiring screen epic! A story so deftly told—so brilliantly executed that we draw a long, quivering sigh as it nears its end, and wonder how we managed to let it escape us so long.

GLADYS HULETTE.

"Secrets of Paris" belongs to the pleasant surprises of the silver sheet. The film is an adaptation of "The Mysteries of Paris" by Eugene Sue, and, as presented by the picked cast of players, listed above, is horrible and beautiful, and romantic and picturesque—a golden bauble picked from the gutter mire by a lovely ragged child.

In the story a king goes incognito among the Apaches of Paris in quest of a lost love. Years before, when the king was a prince, he had given his heart to one of the humblest of his followers. It would never do, though, it seemed—or at least so he was told by his counselors—for him to take as his wife a child of the people.

Being young and greatly impressed by the importance of his position, he had hung a jeweled locket containing his picture about the neck of his beloved, and sadly left her.

The trees were blossom laden at their parting. No doubt the air was heavy with scent and drunk with the hum of honey laden bees. Doubtless the prince, being young, realized all this vaguely, and, dramatizing his own emotions, didn't have such a bad time saying good-by—for the lady he left was lovely—and he was to wear a crown, and her tears were like pearls and his heart was heavy and his uniform fit him like the paper on the wall.

You know——!

But as the years wore on the crown grew heavy and so did his memories. Too, he had learned that, after all, counselors are only counselors, but a man's heart is his own, and, after all, the woman a man, even though he be king, loves should be his own, too. So, King Rudolph starts in quest of that love of his princely days.

The most amazing adventures beset his pathway, and while he does not find the girl who had said good-by under flower laden trees, he DOES find somebody else in whom you will be greatly interested. DON'T ask me to tell you any more of the story.

Will you look at that cast? Lew Cody as the king does the best work he has ever accomplished in his life. His King Rudolph completely erases memory of the he-vamp days one thought could never be forgotten or forgiven by the picture going world. Then, there's Rose Coghlan, as a fang-toothed ribald old hag, part owner of an Apache resort, where gather unsavory characters, variously represented by Montague Love, Walter James, and William Collier Jr. (Lend it to that boy! His François is a character you will not soon forget), Dolores Cassinelli, and others. Effie Shannon is there in a "mother" rôle. O, everybody in the piece is awfully good. Gladys Hulette is exquisite as Mayflower—a frail lily of the slums.

Sets, scenery, and photography are unusual. I grant you that the picture gets a bit ultra-melodramatic at times, but those presenting it to you make you like it.

"Secrets of Paris" is nothing to take the children to see, but on their night out—or in—make a trip to your neighborhood theater. I wager you'll find it worth your while.

CLOSEUPS

While gossip regarding the Valentinos is flying around you may like to hear the following little story:

While Rodolf was in Detroit an old Italian laundress called him up at his hotel.

"I was a friend of your mother over in Italy," she told him. "Perhaps you don't remember me—but I have never forgotten you! I wanted to call you up and speak of your mother and tell you I am happy over your success and sorry for your trouble."

Mr. Valentino burst into a volley of eager questions. The result was that he called for a cab, personally conducted the old woman to his hotel, and there gave a party for her and her whole family.

AND there was no publicity about the thing.

Now I think that's a nice story—and one which SHOULD give some of us a little more faith in human nature. Essentially, ALL of us have a decent streak, I do believe!

It is said Lew Cody was given a rôle in "Within the Law" provided he would shave off his mustache. In the interest of art, they say, he sacrificed what was to him most dear.

Everybody knows Marjorie Daw is a pretty child and knows how to act. It seems she can dance as well. At a recent party held in Los Angeles she and her partner, Dana Todd, were awarded first prize in a dancing contest.

"I was never more excited over anything in my life," says little Miss Daw. "Just think! Ruth Roland, Charlie Chaplin, and Mr. Lasky were judges, and I got away with the goods!"

"You should have seen how she did it, too," says Mr. Chaplin.

Interviewers have a lot to say about the movie stars. Mae Busch has a lot to say about the interviewers—and, betwixt you and me, I suspect her of not being especially keen about 'em—excepting that "they're such darn good publicity," she is quoted as remarking. In her opinion there are three kinds. Again we quote from a little article supposedly written by herself in a current magazine:

"The first kind sits down in front of you, fixes you with a chilling eye, and says in effect, 'Now talk, darn you, talk!' Result, naturally, is mental paralysis on the part of the star. You rack your brain frantically and can't think of a single thing to talk about except the weather.

"The second brand of interviewer comes to you with her story already prepared, and proceeds to insert the desired words into your mouth. If you happen to hold just the opposite views, and state said views freely and definitely, why, she simply writes the story as she had it laid out in the first place, anyway.

"The third kind of interviewer is the nicest kind, in my opinion. She (or he) just comes calling and talks about things of real and vital import, such as who was that tall, handsome chap you were dancing with at the Plantation last night, and is Charlie Chaplin really going to marry Pola, and that's a dream of a hat, my dear, where did you get it, and wasn't So-an-So a fright in that jade tulle, the woman certainly gets away with murder."

If you witnessed the work of Miss Busch in "Foolish Wives" and "The Christian" there can be no doubt in your mind but that here is one fair daughter of the cinema who has brains.

It will be good news to the fans to know that Mr. Griffith has persuaded Mae Marsh to go back to him for his next production. After that she will go back to England, where she made one picture, to film a couple more. Then—well, she says she's undecided—that she'd a heap rather play about with her small daughter than do anything else she knows.

ASK ME! ASK ME! ASK ME!

MARY: I suppose a scenario in a box marked "Glass—Handle with Care," would see the light of day. But practical jokes don't go 'urr' well, especially with editors—so—if I were you—I'd bide my time, send in my ideas after the with editors—so—if I were you—I'd bide my time, send in my ideas after the usual fashion, and try to win out because they're good—NOT because somebody suspects them of being half a dozen goblets.

INQUIRING FAN: You were nice to write. Yes, Monte Blue appeared in support of Douglas Fairbanks in "Wild and Wooly." "M'liss" is the picture in which he supported Mary Pickford. Vurr' welcome.

Music Contests, the Judges, the Judged, and Problems of Each

By Edward Moore.

THREE musicians of judicial mien sat in Orchestra hall last Monday night wrestling with the problem of picking the best performer in three classes of young pianistic, violinistic, and lyric art. It is undoubted that Eric De Lamarter, Arthur Shattuck, and Frank H. Shaw reached their decisions as the result of sympathetic knowledge, ripe experience, and earnest soul search for the truth. It is equally probable that their decisions satisfied the adherents of only one participant in each class.

MARIA JERITZA
in song recital today at the Auditorium.

If in that hour my own sympathies went out to the judges, rather than the judged, it was because I, too, had been a Daniel come to judgment only a few days before, and I knew something of their problems. These three were settling the contest offered by the Society of American Musicians. I had journeyed down to the University of Illinois at Urbana the week before in the interests of a similar contest of the State Federation of Music Clubs to help pick the best young performers in a state-wide competition.

I admit it is no happy lot for a young musician to face a committee of judges picked with the idea that they are impersonal and cold-blooded. You have only to shake the moist, cold, and still trembling hand of a contestant after the contest to know that the nerves of such a one have been drawn tense. But the judges have their problems, too.

In the first place, all contestants of the same class are obliged to interpret the same program. This creates trouble at the start. Even professionals find they perform certain works better than others, and the wise professional seeking prosperity is likely to concentrate on his own specialty. It is asking a good deal for students to have a breadth of vision and ability greater than their elders. Then there are nerves, upsetting in the extreme, with no chance for the services of a stabilizing Coué.

Also, there are the preferences of the judges, not for persons in the contest but for elements in the performance. Some admire one things, others another; a smoothly flowing technique in one case, studious observance of the composer's directions in another. I myself admit a liking for personality in the performer, not to the extent of taking obviously undue familiarites with a composition, but of making it seem alive. When I find such a performer, I am likely to think well of his future and to condone a not too serious technical slip.

Where Environment Counts.

Most of all, there is the question of the contestant's preparation, which usually means his teacher and his musical environment. In the Urbana contests my fellow judges and I heard many things impossible to approve, which, I am reasonably certain, were the contributions of teachers and not the endowment of cupils. The contest was, as I have said, state-wide. As it happened, the winners were all Chicagoans, though we did not know this until after the positions had been awarded. There is only one way to account for this. In Chicago, teachers and pupils hear more music, and consequently are in an environment more suited to musical growth than in the smaller communities. The musical soil of the large city is richer.

Arthur Bissell and Herbert Gould were my companions in judging the singers; Henry Purmort Eames and Director Frederic Stiven of the university musical school were co-judges for the pianists. There was no violin contest. We were informed that the Society of American Musicians contest became too strong a competitor in this class, and that the young violinists found it impossible to learn the Bruch G minor concerto for Monday's contest and the

Henry Miller, Disguised by Beard, Gives Forceful Recital of Pasteur

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the new play, "Pasteur," Henry Miller appears completely disguised for the first time in years. As the great little French scientist he is bearded until he looks a little like Gen. Grant at Antietam, a little more like Emile Coué at Town hall, and quite a bit like such prints of Pasteur as we have seen.

We mention the whiskers first because they are likely to prove the play's most startling contribution to the entertainment of its American audiences. Not because it is uninteresting, but because (1) it is concerned with the biographical history of a national hero of another country; (2) because it has an all-male cast and no so-called heart interest, and (3) because there is little that is more than passively stirring in its recital.

Otherwise it is a good entertainment, and we are willing to assert that it is the best performance Mr. Miller has given in some years. Perhaps the suggested protection of the brush gives him a certain freedom he has lacked while conscious of his advancing years and heavier jowls. Perhaps the story of "Pasteur," written by Sacha Guitry for his father, Lucien, incidentally, makes strong appeal to his sympathies.

Whatever the reason, he presents a forceful picture of the scientist in the early years of his struggles with his germ theories, when he was forced to fight the jealous little fellows and the conservative big fellows in his own profession.

HENRY MILLER.

The play, in five episodes, advances Pasteur to his success with the early vaccines and thence to his first trial of the rabies serum. Herein is the most dramatic and the most appealing scene of the play. Young Joseph Meister is brought all the way from Alsace, after the local doctors have given him up, following the attack of a vicious dog, and into his tender veins the first serum is injected.

The conflict which Pasteur faces here is his fear for the boy despite his faith in himself is good drama, and the overlay of sympathy, of course, is strong. The later episodes carry the gentle, earnest old man to the years of his decline in the south of France (where his favorite little joke is that he practiced medicine without a license, going so far on one occasion as to give a man bicarbonate of soda for a stomach ache) to his last appearance in public, when all the world of science met in the Sorbonne and the president of France led him in to receive its acclaim.

The Miller performance is splendidly simple and yet as carefully detailed in the matter of the vigorous defiance of the young man, in contrast with the shuffling walk, the heavy heart, and tired eyes of the old man, as that of any foreign star. And he rightly is being generously praised for it.

Most Popular Naughty Man of the Stage.

Lowell Sherman is now the chief of our genteel débauchés. His record of seductions and minor domestic misdemeanors on the stage is probably equaled only by his list of high crimes as a home wrecker. He is—and has been for a season or two back—the most popular naughty man of the stage since—well, since William Faversham was playing the politer villains of his day to the soulful heroes of Henry Miller at the Empire.

The tendency now is to overpraise Sherman. Recently, in "The Masked Woman," he put on a goatee and acquired premature senility. Immediately he

Chicago Yields to a Moscow Ultimatum

By Sheppard Butler.

IT was eminently characteristic of the Moscow Art theater that the members of its organization came very near abandoning their trip to Chicago. Every arrangement had been made for what promised to be a distinguished and prosperous engagement—every arrangement, that is, except the little matter of sealing the plans with the approval of the players themselves. Theirs is a communistic organization; what they do, they do by vote, and the will of the majority prevails.

When they were notified that the Auditorium had been taken for their appearances here, and that interest in their coming was keen and all the omens favorable, they sent a brief and pointed reply. Interest, they implied, was pleasant, and omens well enough, but what they wanted to know was, what sort of a place is this Auditorium?

CONSTANTIN STANISLAVSKY.
Director and co-founder of the Moscow Art theater. From the portrait by Syeruff.

A description of the stately playhouse was wired forthwith. The results were dismaying. Back promptly came this brief but insistent ultimatum:

"The company of the Moscow Art theater cannot maintain the artistic standard of its performances in any house containing more than 1,800 seats. As the company cannot give performances identical in quality with those given in Moscow unless the above mentioned condition is observed, the direction decidedly refuses to jeopardize the world-wide reputation of the Moscow Art theater by taking chances."

Well, there it was. The Auditorium had been leased and the contract signed. Frantic inquiries here and in New York elicited the information that no other Chicago theater was available for the time specified. Morris Gest, the players' impressario in America, was in despair. What to do?

It was found that the Great Northern theater, vacated by the departing "Zeno," could be had if it were taken at the beginning of April. But the first half of the month had been set aside for visits of the Russians to Boston and Philadelphia. Leases there, also, had been signed. Only one thing was possible, and it was done. The Boston and Philadelphia engagements were postponed, the matter of the Auditorium lease adjusted somehow—I don't know how—the Great Northern taken, and the announcement made that the company would come two weeks sooner than had been planned.

In short, the Russians had their way.

Persistence and "the World's First Theater."

That, to quote one of Mr. Carl Ed's cartoon characters, was the Russians all over. No more illuminating insight into the way they do things is to be had than in this incident of their insisting on diminishing the size of their audiences and the volume of their profits. Hardly more than a third as many people will see them at the Great Northern as might have formed their patronage at the Auditorium. In dollars and cents the difference will be substantial—and the Muscovites only left Russia because they were in dire need of funds. But their artistic standards will be maintained.

What American company, visiting Europe to replenish its coffers, would reject a large playhouse for fear of possible jeopardy to its reputation?

It is this dogged adherence to ideas and ideals that has given the Moscow organization unquestioned supremacy as "the world's first theater." How it won this eminence is not so much a romantic tale as a humdrum recital of unremitting hard work—the manifestations of a genius that has been, as some one has said, "an infinite capacity for taking pains." It's time we knew something about these players.

How much do you know? When the Moscow Art theater reached New York and it was announced that something called "The Three Sisters" would be given a communication was received by the management from a trio of youthful vaudeville performers. They were doing a "sister act," they said. Their accomplishments were such and such. They would like to apply for the title rôles in "The Three Sisters," which they were sure they could fill acceptably, and when should they report for rehearsals?

That, perhaps, is an extreme case, but indubitably the average American citizen is a little vague as to what the Moscow Art theater is and what it means. Indeed, so much has been written about it of late that it is rather difficult to learn the things one wants to know. Eulogy and learned discussion have piled up until, paradoxically enough, the simple facts are all but hidden.

If you really seek knowledge of the matter, go to the west side and inquire in the Ghetto. They are in a furore of expectation over there. To many of those Russians the coming of the Moscow Art theater is the greatest event in their lives. They will tell you the story.

Radicals in 1897; Conservatives in 1923.

The adventure began on a day in January, 1897, when two men met in a Moscow restaurant and talked for eighteen hours. One was Constantin Stanislavsky, an amateur actor with notions of playing and direction which no one had yet accepted. The other, Nemirovitch-Dantchenko, was a critic and dramatist with radical views on realism. They agreed to establish a resident company in Moscow.

Their first performance was given on Oct. 14, 1898. The play was Count Tolstoi's "Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch." After twenty-five years, in Chicago, they are beginning their engagement with the same play. And more than one of the actors we shall see here was in that first performance.

Their fame, in Russia, grew quickly and steadily. I have Mr. Gest's word for it that for twenty-five years there has never been a vacant seat in their theater. The somber building in which they are housed is a shrine.

Jealously they have clung to their fundamental dictum that realism is the all-important thing in the theater—that the actor must live his part. As faithfully as possible they reproduce the actual conditions of human existence. The craft of makeup they have mastered as it has been mastered nowhere else. Iconoclasts at first, they have become conservatives, remaining the same as things about them have changed. Impressionism, expressionism, all the other isms have passed them by.

Mostly, they have done Russian plays, but they have also staged Sophocles, Shakespeare, Byron, Molière, Ibsen, and Maeterlinck. With diverse material, their method has always been the same—the taking of infinite pains. Their scenery is massive, built to stay, extraordinarily difficult to move. They rehearse incessantly, and demand plenty of time for the purpose. When they come to Chicago they will rehearse "Tsar Fyodor" all day and all night, I am told, though they have played it for twenty-five years.

Their organization is the complete antithesis of the "star system" whereby our most notable performances almost invariably center about one or two predominant artists. Stanislavsky is their director, as he has been from the beginning, but no one of sixty-two members of the company assumes an importance above the others. They exchange rôles freely; leading parts are always played by different actors in succession.

Not many of them are young; many are past 60. This is their first journey away from the continent of Europe. Only once before have they left Russia. Through revolutions and the great war, through the fall of the monarchy and of the Kerensky régime, through all the turbulence of soviet rule, they have pursued the even tenor of their ways in Moscow, doing their work and amplifying their renown. Their coming to America was for them a prodigious undertaking, and they were timid and afraid. But, if the accounts of them are to be believed, these gentle folk are bringing us the most important theatrical experience of a lifetime.

Galsworthy Play at Powers'; Theater Notes.

The plan to give "If Winter Comes" its first American staging at Powers' has been abandoned. The dramatization of the Hutchinson novel will be revealed in New York next month and its booking at Powers', beginning two weeks from tomorrow, will be taken by John Galsworthy's thoughtful play, "Loyalties," which has been a fixture on Broadway since last September.

Pre-war theater ticket prices, reëmerging tonight at the Woods and the Playhouse, will be encountered also this week in New York. Mr. Woods announces a "$2 scale" for Miss Pauline Frederick's engagement there in "The Guilty One," and intimates that he will experiment with the same reduction in the case of all his plays.

The Garrick's career as a temple of the varieties will terminate at the end of this week. The theater will then be dark for seven nights, pending the arrival of "Tangerine," which will restore it to its former estate on April 1. "Tangerine," by the way, brings Miss Julia Sanderson back for the first time to the scene of her Chicago debut. This was achieved at the Garrick in "Fantana," wherein Miss Sanderson appeared with Jefferson De Angelis, George Behan, Miss Adele Ritchie and Douglas Fairbanks. Fairbanks sang "You're Just My Style," and, it is said, got $40 a week for it.

The opening of "Light Wines and Beer," which was to have taken place tonight at the Woods, has been postponed for a day or two.

Booth Tarkington's new comedy, "Bristol Glass," will have its premiere at the Blackstone when "The Last Warning" departs—probably three weeks hence. Gregory Kelly and Miss Ruth Gordon are to have the leading rôles.

Raymond Hitchcock and his "Hitchy-Koo," now touring through the middle west, are said to be slated for summer residence in Chicago.

George S. Kaufman and March Connelly, never weary of well doing, have completed the book for their musical play, "Helen of Troy, N. Y." The piece will be seen shortly.

HERE'S WHAT THEY SAID ABOUT GEORGE M. COHAN'S
Newest, Unique, Sparkling Comedy
TWO FELLOWS AND A GIRL
By Vincent Lawrence

Knowing how the critics dislike being misquoted, we will be careful to be exact

First, our old friend Ashton Stevens—who has a way of saying things—tells the readers of the Herald-Examiner: "I nominate for the Pulitzer Prize for the best American play this season, 'Two Fellows and a Girl.'" "Shep" Butler, in The Tribune, liked the cast and remarked: "On this gossamer tale acting of good quality is bestowed." Charles Collins, scholarly critic of the Post, declared that it had all the symptoms of a full-fledged success and

In the Daily News, it took Mollie Morris just five words to express a whole lot when she said: "George M. Cohan is again the magician." She said many more nice things, but that sentence seems to mean so much.

We always thought that this play would please the ladies, but we didn't realize how strongly they would feel on the subject. The Chaperon, in the Evening American, calls it "delightful," and she uses the word "delightful" four times in the first two sentences.

that "we find a new note in comedy." "Doc" Hall—all readers of the Evening Journal swear by "Doc"—said: "There is no other human being who, with every fine consideration for what is clean and right, can hit off a kind of brash Americanism so well as Cohan." Paul Martin of the Journal of Commerce, Chicago's leading financial paper—and this is a financial success as well as an artistic one—insists that "Two Fellows and a Girl" is a play of lines—"clever lines, every one of them," he adds.

An Announcement
I was to have produced at the Woods Theatre this evening a new comedy from the pen of Aaron Hoffman bearing the title of "LIGHT WINES AND BEER." While a simple enough story in the telling of it, there is a mass of complex and tricky scenery which needs some trained handling for perfect effects; in the light of this, I have concluded to delay the premiere a day or two and will name the opening on Monday. I have also concluded to put into force a scale of prices under which no seats will cost more than TWO DOLLARS, and these seats from the orchestra rail back, will go on sale at the box-office, and ONLY THERE. This puts it right up to the public. Joseph Cawthorn, Mathilda Cottrelly, George Bickel, Cecil Yapp and an adequate supporting cast will be employed in the presentation.

KODAK!

Movie Questions and the Answers; Ask Me! Ask Me!

she may be in pictures again, some time, but was a bit vague on the subject.

A. L.: No, Lila Lee is not married (that I know of).

W. R. S.: Terribly sorry—but your letter must have been mislaid. A letter will reach Walter Hiers, care of Paramount, Los Angeles, and the home address of Harold Lloyd is 369 South Hoover street, Los Angeles. Come again some time.

D. S.: No. Wheeler Oakman. Twekkum.

ATTORNEY: Apparently there are stranger things within thy province than this department ever dreamed of. Like him vurr' much. No, sir! All right, we will give Mr. Beery your regards when we write.

MARY L. B.: I reckon there were a lot of sad hearts around about that time. Thank you for your cordial, sincere letter. It's nice to know that you read and enjoy the column.

MRS. A. P. D.: If I hear of anybody who wishes what you offer I will let you know. Thank you.

X. Y. Z.: O, different ones "do" the titles. If you have in mind any special picture I may be able to be more explicit on the subject.

READER: I love you, too!

HEN ESSY: I suppose Daniel Webster died in his own good time, but it DOES seem like we could use him here and there now and then nowadays.

KICK KORNER

Dear Miss Tinée: I took my little niece, aged 8, to see Mary in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." I was thinking: "Mary's face is young and sweet, body small, little straight legs, and short feet—yet she doesn't look like a child."

The 8 year old said: "She would look better with her hair bobbed. Little girls don't wear rope curls a yard long!"

And they don't, of course. Not since the day of Little Eva in Uncle Tom's Cabin. E. E. S.

Editor's note: "From the mouths of babes——," etc.

Dear Miss Tinée: It is time to awaken Chicago movie patrons to the fact that they are being cheated at certain alleged "first class" theaters by the showing of pictures that are old and badly slashed.

One of the largest houses, part of a group of theaters owned by a firm that publishes elaborate advertisements as to the alleged excellence of the performances, has been showing mutilated films.

Unless a Chicago patron sees the same film at some other theater while the film is new he may not know what causes the lapse in the unfolding of the story.

At the theater referred to there was recently shown Buster Keaton in "The Electric House." One of the scenes omitted, but shown in another city, was the housekeeper's hiding in the trunk which was thrown into the swimming pool. This may have been eliminated by the censor. Another funny scene was Buster's attempt to carry the trunk up the moving stairway. This was entirely omitted from the presentation, and as it is something the censor could not possibly have objected to, it can be accounted for only by the fact that the film was not new. As the writer saw this same picture a month before in Youngstown, O., it is evident that an old and much used reel was put on the machine here.

At the same theater there was recently shown Larry Semon in "The Counter Jumper," and as this film was also seen by the writer in another city some time before, he can state positively that a funny series of scenes, showing the villain bursting into the kitchen, rolling down the side of a hill, and being rescued with a rope, was entirely cut out of the showing.

New films or first releases appear to be slow reaching Chicago. "Manslaughter" and "The Old Homestead" were shown in Davenport last October and Harold Lloyd's "Dr. Jack" and Mary Pickford's "Tess" in Milwaukee last fall, some time before they reached Chicago. In continual use the film gets broken, and must be patched up from time to time, with the result that sections are missing when it reaches Chicago and is only a second hand article.

In the theater referred to Richard Barthelmess in "Fury" was recently shown, with the most interesting part of the knife fight omitted. Inasmuch as this scene explained the interruption of the fight by the captain's son, it was quite essential to the sense of the play. This was shown in Ohio, that much censored state, so it could hardly have been eliminated by the Chicago censors.

If Chicago people are satisfied with old films, that is their privilege, but it is an abuse that patrons in the smaller cities do not have to put up with. C. W. S.

[Editor's Note: This is one of a number of like "kicks" that have reached the office.]

FER OR AGIN?

Taken as a whole, do you think the movies aid or retard civilization? Do they make humans more human, or do they make monkeys of us? Answer!

Answer!

Dear Miss Tinée: I believe today Douglas Fairbanks has the best understanding of any one living of the art of the moving picture.

What I have missed in the movies is color. Those great gray faces (usually with shiny black line) against a background of sea or forest or sky—of black and white—are tiresome.

Suppose "Robin Hood" had been in color. Can you imagine anything lovelier? Or "The Three Musketeers" in all the gorgeous color of its setting?

Now we may look forward to Fairbanks' next picture in color. More power to him—compliments and congratulations. He is the wonder of the movie world—so completely in a class by himself that there is no one to compare with him. E. C. S.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Here's a Vote for Mayor Who'd Give Us Smokeless City

By Mme. X.

ON the return of the X. family from California a few days ago Chicago came out to greet us when we were still far off, at least her fumiferous breath reached out and—shall we say kissed us? And long before we touched the outermost confines of the city she cast her veil over us. All this is overamiable language to describe this city's disgustingly filthy atmosphere. It is such poetic license as a misguided Persian songster might use to describe the perfume of his unwashed, unkempt lady love.

Let us pray that Chicago's next mayor will make one of his first hits and permanent achievements the enforcing of the smoke ordinance, to the effect that there shall be clearer skies and purer air for Chicagoites. If our present ordinance is not adequate to accomplish this, then let us pass a better one.

There is one good vote and a promise of hard work from this voter for the candidate who will promise to make the abatement of the smoke nuisance a live issue and a prime object.

That it is not an impossible matter to lighten our present canopy of unconsumed carbon is proved by the tall chimneys of the Commonwealth Edison company's works. As we came in on the Santa Fé road last week and passed the big industrial plants on the western confines of the city a regiment of this company's smokestacks interested us because of the impalpable, feathery plumes that floated forth instead of the oily, thick volumes which rolled heavily out of neighboring smoke vents.

Engage, Don't Elect, Mayor.

The University of Illinois has been experimenting for years on this problem and is fast evolving a practicable system for consuming entirely the coal used in big furnaces and industrial plants, to the advantage of the buyers and burners of the coal as well as to that of the general, helpless, and suffering public.

One of the most powerful of the big chiefs of the G. O. P. said to the writer a few days ago, when the talk fell on the present mayoralty campaign: "It should not make any difference whether a mayor of Chicago is a Republican or Democrat. He should not be elected; he should be engaged."

Such an expression of opinion from this source was especially impressive and gave one the hope that the day was not too far off when such would be the procedure in this part of the world, as it has long been in Germany and Holland. In those countries, if a community cannot furnish a sufficiently efficient manager of a city's business, municipalities go to other places to find and engage a good mayor. A city like Chicago is not, or should not be, a political proposition; it is one of the biggest business enterprises in the world and should have at the head of its affairs a trained manager, not a haphazard selection from political ranks.

Begging Mary Baker's Pardon!

It was with grief and tears that the author of this column noted a typographical error in her last week's lucubrations. Having been impressed by the lovely and glowing bloom on the erstwhile pale and delicate cheeks of Miss Mary Baker when I saw her in a vine draped bungalow by the Pacific ocean in Montecito valley, I described her to THE TRIBUNE'S discerning and eager public as having "an air of health which she did not use to know." When the typesetter wrote it wealth instead of health he gave a jolt which jarred a perfectly good set of firm front teeth. Miss Baker has always had an air of wealth. It is the look of radiant good health which strikes the beholder who used to note her delicate and frail appearance.

No sooner had we landed last week in the dim resonance of the Dearborn street station than we felt as if we were in an Italian atmosphere. We realized the reason for this subtle psychological fact when we reached our majestic flat and found a call to the luncheon that an entirely new society, the Italy-American association, was giving last Sunday at the Fortnightly club in honor of the recently appointed Italian ambassador, Prince Gelasio Caetani.

MISS LOUISE RODGERS.
[Raymor Studio Photo.]

Three new members of the Junior league are Miss Catherine Carroll, Miss Carroll Elting, and Miss Louise Rodgers. Miss Carroll and Miss Rodgers probably will take part in the Junior League Follies to be given on Saturday night, April 14, at the Auditorium theater, but Miss Elting is leaving shortly for South Carolina, so will not be here to rehearse. She expects to return, however, for the entertainment and will sell programs and usher.

Miss Rodgers was introduced formally to society early last fall, at a tea at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Rodgers of 40 Bellevue place.

MISS CARROLL ELTING.
[Raymor Studio Photo.]

Miss Elting, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elting of 48 Bellevue place, made her debut at a dance at the Casino on Dec. 2.

MISS CATHERINE CARROLL.
[Drake Studio Photo.]

Miss Carroll, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Carroll of the Hotel Ambassador, did not make a formal debut, as her family only moved here last fall from Pittsburgh.

Every week some new organization to make us love some foreign nation springs up here. Now we have to love every day and pray every night for France, China, England, Ireland, and Serbia, to which we must henceforth add Italy. It is easier to love and pray for Italy than for some of the others, especially after meeting and listening to that very attractive and intelligent representative of his country, Prince Caetani. He is extra tall, extra good looking, and extra alive and interesting.

That such an ancient country as Italy can produce such an up to date personality as this product of one of the oldest of European families is amazing to the student of past and present civilizations. The Caetani or Gaetani family dates far back in the dark ages.

The ancestral palace in Rome has been occupied by Gaetanis for over 1,300 years. Think of that, O people who move every six months! The stock has provided two popes and many celebrated generals and statesmen.

Name Founded on Tradition.

The name is supposed to come from a tradition that an early ancestor brought back from Jerusalem the chains which bound Christ to the pillar when he was flogged. Catena both in Italian and Latin means chain.

There are a few other Roman families that claim an even greater antiquity. The Massimos believe themselves to be descended from the Maximus family of the time of the Roman republic. But the Caetanis are quite hoary enough to satisfy almost any desire for antiquity. For a descendant of such a long identified line of ancestors, to be, as was Prince Caetani, one of that now famous band of youths who marched into Rome last November, thereby effecting a bloodless revolution, as did the Fascisti, was a proof of a deathless quality of youth in the Italian people.

The prince represents not only Italy as we know it, that lovely repository of legend, history, art, poetry, beauty, but also the new Italy. Fascism is the latest manifestation of the spirit of the Roman lictors and centurions to combat agents considered harmful to the safety of the state. Since reading Robinson's "The Mind in the Making" one hesitates to call such enemies socialists, anarchists, bolsheviks, or I. W. W. But it was those in these ranks that the Fascisti rose up and routed, and among the active supporters of the Fascisti was this likeable prince. He is also Duke of Sermoneta and has various other minor titles.

A Bachelor, and Mining Engineer.

He is tall, fine looking in what we should call an un-Italian way. He is a bachelor, which adds enormously to his popularity socially in Washington, where the hospitable hostesses are continually hunting for attractive and available men for dinner guests to balance the preponderance of lovely women.

He speaks extremely good English, as both his mother and his grandmother were from old and distinguished British families. Besides which he himself took a course in engineering at Columbia university in New York, and afterwards worked in one of the western mines, owned and managed by our well known American citizen, John Hays Hammond. At the mere mention of Mr. Hammond's name the prince's smile brightens and the mentioner becomes an identity apart from the faceless throngs whom he is called upon to greet.

The luncheon given last Sunday for the Italian ambassador was the debut of the latest arrival on the field of our international societies, the Italy-American society. It sprang into being between the time late in February that this column traveled westward in search of adventure and returned to the old town last week. It's first president is Arthur Aldis. Its other officers are: vice president, Mrs. Russell Tyson; treasurer, Mrs. Everts Wrenn; secretary, John M. Handley; with a board of directors that includes Mrs. Tyson, Mrs. Wrenn, Miss Janet Kittredge, John M. Handley, Prof. Ernest Hatch Wilkins of the University of Chicago, and Horace S. Oakley.

The luncheon was the means of bringing many new members into the ranks of the new born association, so that its present size is growing daily and can't be computed at the moment. Besides being supplied with much current literature about Italy and our trade and other relations with it, the members have the privilege of seeing art collections in Italy closed to the general public.

Linked with New York Society.

It is affiliated with the association of the same name in New York, which has been in existence long enough to be established as definite factor in that city. During the war the New York society raised and sent to Italy $47,000 for the Italian Red Cross. It has obtained three scholarships in American universities for Italian medical students, and two scholarships for American students in Italy. Last summer it sent a party of 180 American college students to make a tour of Italy. Its first president was our present secretary of state, and its present one is Paul Cravath of New York.

The Chicago chapter was especially inspired in its inception by Signora Rossetti-Agresti, who was here a month or so ago giving some interesting discourses on such diverse topics as gardening, farming, and the Fascisti. By the way, that last named word is so often mispronounced by Americans that we venture to give here the correct pronunciation: Fashisti. In Italian sc before e or i has always the soft sound of sh. If c alone precedes these letters it has the harder sound we give to ch in chair or choice.

Planning for Ravinia Season.

Coming events cast their shadows before. Undismayed by the wild, weird snows of March, the advocates and supporters of Ravinia's lovely open air opera are starting a campaign to arouse a wider interest in and a sounder support for this, one of the most delightful and valuable manifestations of music in America. Under the leadership of Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, a committee is being formed to go out to the community to secure part of the necessary guarantee fund which opera the world over requires for its support.

Up to now out of the over 3,000,000 people who dwell between the southern and northern suburbs of Chicago, only 220 have contributed to the support of Ravinia. This group has been generous and far sighted, but its members feel that the time has come for a better response from the community which gains prestige and advantage from the presence within its borders of a unique and widely celebrated institution.

Those working for Ravinia are buoyed up by memories of the hard row hoed by the original founders of and mainstays of our Symphony orchestra. In the light of today it seems incredible that it was once necessary to drag people to the concerts, "kicking and screaming," while those who believed in Theodore Thomas and his musicians had to put pistols to the heads of their nearest and dearest to secure adequate financial support to make a permanent institution of the orchestra association. Yet today those who were most indifferent would be the first to rush to the defense of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

The human race is being continually dragged out of its naturally slothful and inert condition and pulled along the path to culture by a few valiant souls who believe that a life spent only "in getting, begetting and forgetting" is a wasted adventure; that its fabric must be embroidered by music, poetry, art, or it will perish miserably from mildew and moth. Therefore, when these devoted believers in the divine mission of these three—music, poetry and art, come knocking at your doors do not cast them out, but listen to what they have to say. They have undertaken an unlovely task out of love for the first fruits of prosperity and culture.

On Mrs. Carpenter's executive committee are the Mmes. Ralph Poole, Leeds Mitchell, Rockefeller McCormick, E. I. Cudahy, and Paul Welling, and the Messrs. Alfred Granger, George Porter, J. O. Hinkley, Kent Clow, Ralph Poole, Arthur Aldis, Russell Tyson, Charles Atkinson, and Henry Rumsey. Besides this there is a general committee of fifty men and women.

A Pioneer Passes Out.

The death last week of Mrs. William Blair took from Chicago not only a lovely and unusual personality, but almost the last representative of that remarkable generation that flourished here before the fire of 1871. Chicago was then known as "the garden city" because of its roomy houses, set in blossoming grounds, and its tree shaded streets. The people who lived here at that time worked hard and had high ideals and few luxuries. There was no foretaste of the material prosperity which now promises or threatens our culture and spirituality.

Mrs. Blair came here a bride in 1853. At that time Lake street was the only paved street in the "loop," and that only with planks. The Blairs' first home was in Wabash avenue, where Stevens' department shop now is. Their neighbors were the Rutters, the Stephen Gales, Judge and Mrs. Mark Skinner, and J. H. Dunham. Mr. and Mrs. Blair felt that they were moving to the country when after a few years they made a new home on the site now occupied by the Congress hotel.

Mrs. Blair was a link with a still remoter era, because in her youth she knew and talked with a sailor who had served on the ship which carried Napoleon Bonaparte to St. Helena, and he described to her the "great emperor sitting immovable on the deck for hours every day, with his elbows on his knees and head resting on his hands," to quote from an account written by Mrs. Blair herself.

It is with regret that we record the inevitable passing of those who have so long been a part of Chicago and its life.

Amateur Theatricals.

An interesting amateur theatrical performance looms up on the social horizon, brightening the present Lenten twilight. This is the double bill performance being organized for Friday evening, April 6, at the Shubert Central theater, where a play by Arthur Meeker Jr., "Evie's Husbands," will be presented by an amateur troupe headed by that extremely clever young actress, Mrs. John W. Root. Young Arthur Meeker has much talent for writing, especially plays. A year ago a play of his, "Hardy Perennials," was produced both at the Arts club and the Friday club.

Besides Mrs. Root, others taking part

Play to Feature Spring Social of Woman's Aid

A PLAY written and presented by members of the Chicago Woman's Aid will feature the annual spring social of that organization, to be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Studebaker. This affair will be one of the last of the present season.

Organized in 1882 as the Young Ladies' Aid society, with but a handful of members, the Aid ranks today, with a membership of 1,200, among the leading civic clubs of the city. Through its three departments—education, art and literature, and civics and philanthropy—it has forged ahead in constructive work.

An interesting activity is the Playhouse, founded last year, which provides organized recreation for girls in the Lawndale district. It is located at the Temple Judea community center, and is open on the first four school afternoons of the week from 2:30 until 5 o'clock. Girls of school age take part in the many classes, which cover all subjects most appealing to them. For girls past 16 the club has formed a gymnasium class, which meets on Thursday evenings at the Lawson school.

The better films committee has continued its splendid work of reviewing films suitable for the child and adolescent. Lists of approved films are sent weekly to all parts of the United States, thus providing help for schools, settlements, churches, and clubs interested in showing young people clean and wholesome pictures.

The education department has established mothers' clubs in several schools of the city, in order to assist foreign born parents to adjust themselves more readily to American standards and language. Nutrition classes also have proved most successful, since they have established in young minds the value of proper health habits. In one school breakfast is served the children daily.

Twenty agencies not receiving public library service have been provided with 3,000 books through the library extension group of the civics and philanthropy department. Members of the recreation division have distributed tickets to the children's concerts each month, and its members also have given volunteer assistance weekly.

The committee for assisting the blind gives monthly programs at the Industrial Home for the Blind. The various civic committees have followed closely the work of city, county, and state, and keep in touch with problems which arise constantly.

Through its monthly bulletin the club keeps its members in touch with topics of educational and civic importance. Delegates are sent to twenty-five Chicago associations. Three scholarships were given this year—one to the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern university, one to the graduate school of social service administration at the University of Chicago, and one to the Jewish Scholarship association. The club is also a guarantor of the Chicago Civic Opera association.

Three study classes, the civics department round table, the current topics class, and the symphony orchestra study class have been offered to members during the season, with additional programs at the bi-monthly meetings and tours to the Field Museum and the Art institute.

Mrs. Edward Gudeman, who has been president for four years, will retire at the end of the season. The other officers are Mrs. Sylvan Hirschberg and Mrs. Max Loeb, vice presidents; Mrs. M. Jacob Daube, recording secretary; Mrs. Robert T. Mack, corresponding secretary; Miss Sara Feder, civic secretary; Miss Rose Greensfelder, treasurer.

MRS. EDWARD GUDEMAN.
[Varney Photo.]

The Chicago Woman's Aid will hold its annual spring social on Tuesday at 2 o'clock at the Studebaker theater. Mrs. Edward Gudeman is the retiring president of the organization, which is nearing the close of one of the most successful seasons in its career. A résumé of its activities is given in an adjacent column.

MRS. HOWARD AMES.
Boehlk Photo.]

Mrs. Howard Ames is one of the patronesses for a card party to be be given on Thursday afternoon in Recital hall, Fine Arts building, for the benefit of the woman's committee workroom in the Venetian building. This workroom, which is conducted under the auspices of the Chicago Woman's club, provides occupation for women who for various reasons are prevented from going out into the world of business. More than $4,000 was paid to these women last year for their needlework.

MRS. GILMAN W. PETIT.
[Waters Photo.]

In today's club news will be found an account of the work of one of the most interesting of the larger south side clubs—the Woodlawn Woman's club—which is in its twenty-seventh year. Among the interests of the clubs, of which Mrs. Gilman C. Petit is president, are included the restoration of the Columbian Fine Arts building, friendly co-operation with ex-service men, as well as affiliation with twenty-six charitable organizations.

Season Adds 100 to Woodlawn Club

Another of the larger of the south side clubs which has had a year of splendid program is the Woodlawn Woman's club, which had its beginning twenty-seven years ago.

Five working departments, including art and literature, civics, home and education, history and travel, and music, present programs alternately, always aiming at the newest treatment of their special subjects and engaging speakers of renown. In addition to the regular meetings, when luncheon is served between morning and afternoon sessions, there have been two evening meetings for men of the members' families.

Outside of the regular department work there is the opera study class, conducted by a member, Mrs. H. B. Maryott. The Oakhaven auxiliary committee also is an active part of the club, and this season has made several thousand dollars for the building fund of the home. The scholarship committee supports a fund for the Vocational Supervision league, which is used for the aid of children who otherwise could not complete their schooling. The friendly coöperation committee, working for ex-service men, gives programs each Wednesday evening at the Jackson Park hospital, and also has given a motion picture machine for their use. "The Mendicants," a group which was organized during the world war, makes over old garments into new clothing for children and distributes them through charitable agencies.

In addition to the above mentioned philanthropies the club is affiliated with twenty-six accredited organizations, among them the League of Cook County Clubs, the Drama league, the Municipal Art league, the Parent-Teacher associations, the South Chicago Day nursery, the Illinois League of Women Voters, the Chicago Housewives' league, the Infant Welfare society, the Juvenile Protective association, the Civic Music association, and the Travelers' Aid.

The bureau of volunteer social service gives assistance to the girls of the Juvenile court and the Mary A and Mary B clubs for girls.

One hundred new members have been added to the club's roster during the present season. As part of their work these members are required to present an afternoon program once during the year. The offering this winter was "An Emigrant Ship," a play whose moral was for better American speech.

Bedell
STATE STREET CORNER MONROE
Presents the World-Famous Parisian Style Exponent
Mlle. Marceline d'Alroy

Mlle. Marceline d'Alroy has been engaged exclusively by Bedell to present her own original Dress Dramas, which have met with unusual ovations throughout Europe and the Continent.

The entire Second Floor has virtually been converted into a small theatre. Here Mlle. Marceline d'Alroy, supported by a bevy of beautiful models, will present her unique playlet, "The Lady in the Boudoir."

Mlle. Marceline d'Alroy, the recognized Style Authority, Lecturer and International Writer, has this to say—

"It is no longer sufficient to be merely in vogue, to wear a costume that simply avers the season. Today is the moment of the individual, the time when every discerning woman recognizes the poignant truth that she is the possessor of an individual, alluring beauty which but needs the proper medium of dress to give it expression. And so milady of Fashion must demand of her apparel one supreme requisite—that it bear that personal touch in line, in tinting, in delicate adornment that will reveal the changing light in her eyes, the delicate contour of her face, and the peculiarly individual curves of her form."

Beard Disguises Henry Miller in New Play, 'Pasteur'

was compared with the late Richard Mansfield, particularly by those whose memory of Mansfield was vague.

This praise was again noticeable last week in the reviews of a German drama, called "Morphia," which Sherman is giving at the Eltinge theater in a series of special matinées. And yet there is again little suggestion of Mansfield in the characterization.

What Sherman has done that is much to his credit, however, is to make the sinners of his stage acquaintance plausible humans. Even his roué in "The Masked Woman" has his moments of sanity in which the fascination of his method and the charm of his technique almost convince you that the heroine who visits his apartments is not an utter fool with a buried sex complex.

In "Morphia" (which, incidentally, is the first of six or eight drug addict plays headed this way as a result of the Hollywood exposures) Sherman is able to carry considerable sympathy. He is an upstanding and clear reasoning victim.

He had, as a young man, accidentally shot the 12 year old daughter of his dearest friend. To escape the haunting memory of that tragedy, he had taken to drugs and novel-writing, and, we may add, was extremely successful in both lines.

That he is, when we meet him, ruining his constitution, even if he is not completely "wasting" his life, he admits. He has been taking morphine for seven or eight years. He lives alone, mostly in a darkened study, and neither urges himself upon society, nor flaunts his vice in the face of the world.

His old nurse, however, and his doctor conspire to cure him. There is but one other influence as strong as that of drugs, they say. That is love. If they can introduce into his house, disguised as a nurse, a certain beautiful young woman, whom the drugged author had previously known, loved, and lost, she might be able to reform him.

This they do. Nurse comes, is accepted, and begins her reformation by getting his hypodermic away from her patient on the promise that if the time ever comes when he simply cannot get along without it she will bring it to him—but he must first put every bit of his strength into the fight not to want it.

Note Too Convincing.

Comes the supreme test, the hour of midnight and failure. The tortured man must have relief. He sends for nurse. And she, thoughtless child, answers in clinging negligee and ravishing disarray. Or was she thoughtless? Anyway, seeing her, the drug addict is of amind to bargain. Will she give herself for his word of honor never to touch the stuff again?

The discretionary drop curtain has proved so frequently its absolute dependency in such situations that the experienced playgoers of Broadway do not get the thrill from them they did in the doubtful days, but, with Olive Tell playing nurse to Mr. Sherman's addict, this one goes quite well.

Next morning the unhappy man is still in the throes of craving the drug and finally gets hold of both hypo and morphine. But now the girl takes another tack. Very well, since they are married, as the saying is, in the sight of God, whither he goes she will go. If he cannot live without morphine, neither can she—and they will go down to hell together. "Shot for shot" she will take the drug whenever he says the word. At which, with one mighty final struggle, he hurls drug and hypodermic through the window and is—for the moment, at least—saved.

A quick cure, and none too convincing, but it serves. The whole drama, as a matter of fact, is rudely carpentered with all the foundation stringers baldly exposed. But the Sherman friends and admirers, feminine largely, are filling up the matinées, and that, as the showmen say, is the answer.

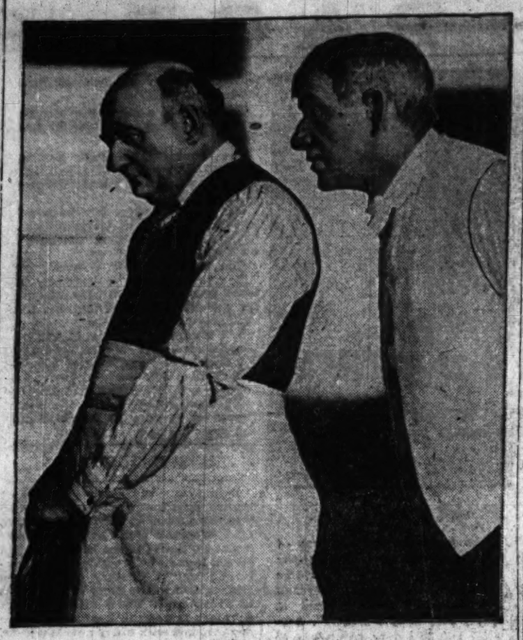
Jolt for Morals.

Our community morals were also slightly jolted last week when the Green Room club announced a performance of Schnitzler's "Reigen," with which to honor Otto Kahn, banker and art patron.

Being one of those "stag" affairs to which the guests are all invited, no one paid much attention to the announcement. The Green Roomers give parties annually, like the Lambs and the Friars, but being a smaller club and made up largely of theater executives, they do not attract the same attention.

But it happens that some one spread the rumor that "Reigen" is the play that recently caused riots in Berlin and was finally closed by the police because of its flagrant immoralities. This set the Society for the Prevention of Vice on the trail, and later other of the forces that make for censorship. A police order of suppression was obtained. Then an injunction vacating the order.

REMEMBER 'WAY BACK WHEN—



You didn't have to go to a theater to meet up with gentlemen thus chastely garbed? These two, reading from left to right, are George Bickel and Joseph Cawthorn; the habiliments go with the parts they play in Aaron Hoffman's comedy, "Light Wines and Beer," coming this week to the Woods.

Mr. Kahn wrote a letter saying he would be glad to eat the dinner, but he could not stay for the play. Not because he feared for his morals, but he did not like that kind of publicity. Several of the boys (and girls) went in search of printed copies of the play to see for themselves just what was what and why Mr. Schnitzler thought so. They found a series of intimate—heavily intimate—scenes, in each of which a man and a woman figure, one of each duo carrying on into the succeeding scene and there meeting a new admirer and completing, finally, a cycle of adventures. Not particularly good stuff, even for a "stag," but of course not nearly so bad as the vice hounds like to imagine.

THE NEW PLAYS

First Aid for First Nighters on Attractions Scheduled for the Coming Weeks in the Theaters.

OPENING TONIGHT.

"Up the Ladder" (Playhouse)—A play by Owen Davis, dealing with the progress of a young American couple in business and social achievement. It was produced in New York a year ago and laid aside. For its present revival several of the original players have returned to their former rôles and some newcomers have been introduced into the cast. The list includes Miss Leona Hogarth (in the leading part, first acted by Miss Doris Kenyon), Paul Kelly, Percy Helton, Frank Hatch, Miss Ruth Hammond, and Miss Anna Mareton.

OPENING LATER THIS WEEK.

"Light Wines and Beer" (Woods)—A comedy by Aaron Hoffman, new in these parts, though known on the Pacific coast, where Messrs. Keib and Dill have acted it under the title "Now and Then." Its literary precursor identifies it as "at once a joyous history of the time that was, before Volstead; a vivid picture of the present arid period, and a hopeful and practical suggestion for the future." The company is headed by Joseph Cawthorn, a comedian of parts, and includes George Bickel, Mme. Mathilde Cottrelly, Stewart Wilson, Miss Marcia Byron, and Cecil Yapp.

IMPENDING JOYS.

Thurston, the Magician (Olympic, March 25)—Mysteries and prestidigitation by the best of the surviving practitioners of the black arts.

"Tangerine" (Garrick, April 1)—A musical comedy of good repute in the east, where they have known it for two seasons or so. Miss Julia Sanderson heads a cast which includes Frank Crumit, Frank Lalor, and many others.

"Loyalties" (Powers', April 2)—John Galsworthy's fine play, acted in New York by an excellent company and presumably (though one never can tell) to be seen here under the same auspices.

"Hurricane" (Selwyn, April 2)—Mme. Olga Petrova in something about sin by Mme. Olga Petrova.

The Moscow Art Theater (Great Northern, April 2)—The greatest acting organization in the world, here for three weeks only to present, in Russian, a répertoire comprising Tolstoy's "Tsar Fyodar Ivanovitch," Gorky's "The Lower Depths," and Tchekhoff's "The Cherry Orchard" and "The Three Sisters."

"Bristol Glass" (Blackstone, probably April 9)—First important showing of a new comedy by Booth Tarkington, with Gregory Kelly and Miss Ruth Gordon in the leading rôles.

Where the Money Goes

When You Pay Your Check at the Ontra

MISS DUTTON does many things in ways different from those of other restaurant or cafeteria operators. That, no doubt, is why her three Ontras have attained such notable favor.

For instance, last year she published a chart showing the complete daily financial history of the Ontras, in percentages, for the year 1921. Today, on this page, she publishes a similar chart for 1922. Read it carefully. Have you ever seen figures of this nature for any other restaurant or cafeteria?

You may hear comparisons of Ontra prices with prices elsewhere. The above chart proves that even if Miss Dutton gave up all profit and ran the Ontras as a charity, the saving to each patron per meal would be negligible.

You may purchase food at less than Ontra prices. But any restaurant or cafeteria that provided food equal to the Ontra's, in quality and quantity, at even one and one-half cents less per meal would go into bankruptcy just as certainly as the sun will rise tomorrow, for Miss Dutton's net profit per check is exactly one and four-tenths cents.

This chart shows fully why the Ontras never need offer special inducements to patronage, such as prices cut below the price level of quality food, musical entertainments, trading stamps, etc.

There are in Chicago great numbers of people of high intelligence—for them the Ontras are operated. They know this and have been generous in patronage beyond Miss Dutton's fondest expectations and she thanks them most sincerely.

Miss Mary L. Dutton,

Dear Madam:

We certify that the percentages shown in the accompanying chart are true and correct as evidenced by our audit of your books for the year 1922.

Your net profit on the average meal was exactly one and four tenths cents.

Very truly yours,

in it will be Miss Helen Gilbert, Mrs. Cecil Barnes, Miss Mary Meeker, Stuart Bailey, Loring Coleman, and J. Williams Macey. Stuart Bailey is producing the piece—that is, he is training the actors and arranging all the properties for the performance.

It will be preceded by a clever little French curtain-raiser which Mrs. Alexander F. Stevenson has translated from the French and in which she will take the principal part. Mrs. Morris Johnston is directing the production of this piece, which found great favor when it was given last summer in the drawing room of the late Mrs. Hughes-Hallett, one of the striking personalities of the gay Pinard colony until her death this winter.

It is hoped by its promoters that this entertainment will bring a goodly sum for the Princeton infirmary, which is in need of funds with which to enlarge its present accommodations, inadequate for the needs of the college. They are a husky lot, those Princetonians, but sometimes they get ill and require hospita lcare. Tickets may be had from Mrs. Arthur Meeker, 3030Lake Shore drive.

Sale for French War Widows.

On Wednesday and Thursday of this week there will be a sale of the handiwork of French war widows at the residence of Mrs. Potter Palmer, 1350 Lake Shore drive, the hours being from 10:30 to 4 o'clock. The collection is brought here by a French grande dame, the Countess François de Bremond D'Ars. Mme. Jusserand, the wife of the French ambassador, wrote Cyrus H. McCormick asking his aid in arranging this sale of lingerie, bead bags, and other dainty luxuries, and he in turn wrote Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Russell Tyson, and other women who have long worked for French charities, and secured their coöperation. Entrance is by invitation only.

Swedish notabilities are gathering here this week. Today Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick is giving a luncheon for that well known writer and famous wanderer in remote lands, Sven Hedin. As an explorer he penetrated to Mongolia and Tibet before any other Caucasian had dared the perils of these wild lands. His books about his experiences there were popular in the '80s and '90s and are still considered standard works.

The other well known Scandinavian is Osvald Sirén, who is considered one of the three foremost art critics of the day. He is to speak at the Arts club at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning under the auspices of the Arts club and the American Friends of China. His subject will be "The Artistic Remains of the Ancient Capital of China." He has just come back from spending a year exploring the ruins and tombs of this forgotton city. He is a celebrity in his line and well worth hearing. He speaks English proficiently.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Lansing of 4454 Malden street announce the engagement of their daughter, Myrtle Marie, to Frank C. Morris of Kansas City, Mo.

On Thursday afternoon at the Fortnightly rooms on Bellevue place, Adolph Bolm, head of the ballet of our Civic opera, will give a talk to the members on "The Art of the Dance," with illustrations given by members of his corps de ballet. This is an entertainment to take the place of a play promised by Mrs. Howard Linn, but which her serious illness in a Boston hospital made impossible. The Russians have taught the world much about the possibilities of the ballet. In fact, they have taught us much about art in many manifestations.

Emerson console phonograph sale tomorrow enters its final week

A week has elapsed since we made the startling announcement of an Italian Renaissance Console phonograph at the extremely low price of 99.75—and a wonderful week it has been!

Corner of the Music Room in a modern home.

Buyers in throngs came from North, South, and West—not in the least deterred by the inclement weather that prevailed all week. But, of course, it is the music lovers of Chicago who have been the most eager to avail themselves of this unusual opportunity to install a splendid Console instrument in their homes.

Two carloads sold in less than two days!

The extent to which our expectations were realized, can be gauged from the fact that two carloads of these superb instruments were sold before the end of the second day of this sale. We are now well into our third carload, so if you want to be one of the lucky ones, you will have to hurry!

The period Console Phonograph is a very apt companion-piece for the Grand Piano which is such a decided vogue today. Similarly, the tone quality of the Console Type possesses far greater richness and beauty than that of the "upright." In point of appearance it is needless to compare the perfect artistry of an authentic "period" designed Console to so many of the once popular upright talking machines whose "bulge" effect resembles nothing quite so much as an inverted sarcophagus.

This Emerson Italian Renaissance Console, at

—less than half the price of a year ago

An initial payment as low as $5 Will send this instrument to your home

Balance on Easy Terms

This sumptuous instrument is made in one of the best equipped factories in America—founded by Victor H. Emerson, a pioneer in the phonograph and record industry, whose genius has gained respect of the music world.

This Emerson Console Phonograph is equipped with the spruce "Music Master" round horn. The resonant tone of this horn is universally recognized and its reproduction of the human voice and the tones of all musical instruments is perfect. Every disc record made can be played on this instrument.

The equipment includes a tone modifier to control the volume of sound. The motor is of powerful, non-vibrating type, with a noiseless worm gear and can be wound while playing. The dimensions of the phonograph: 36 inches wide, 36 inches high, 21½ inches deep. Built of Adam brown mahogany or beautifully matched walnut. Vocalion salon, ninth floor.

WANTED—A Slogan

to express the stability and desirability of public utility investments

$250 Cash Prizes for Winners

WE WANT a new slogan or phrase—not to exceed ten words, [the fewer the better] which will summarize briefly and strongly the advantages of investing in public utility securities.

We want something easily understandable — an idea or thought of outstanding merit that will apply specifically to our business — the sale of sound stocks of electric light, power and gas companies.

1st Prize $100
2nd Prize 50
3rd Prize 25
4th Prize 15
5th Prize 10

—and $5 each for the 10 slogans adjudged next best!

In event of a tie duplicate prizes will be awarded.

Consider These Facts

In writing your slogan keep in mind the following advantages of public utility investments: SAFETY OF PRINCIPAL, DEPENDABLE DIVIDENDS, LIBERAL RETURN. These points are strong features of this type of investment. They apply with unusual force to the public utility business because:

1 The demand for the service is constantly increasing both from old and new customers. New uses for the service are being discovered daily.
2 The business is a basic necessity indispensable to all of us.
3 Without public utility service there could be no modern cities.
4 Electricity and Gas Service are one of the marvels of the age.

Send Your Slogan in Today!

You can win one of these worth-while prizes. We are using the phrase "Investments That Endure" at the present time, but we believe there is a better one to be had to apply to utility securities. Can you devise it?

All slogans must be submitted by April 20.

The judges will be: Fred H. Scheel, Vice-President Utility Securities Company; B. J. Mullaney, director Illinois Committee on Public Utility Information; Irving M. Tuteur, Vice-President McJunkin Advertising Company

The Spring Renting Season in Hotel Somerset

OPENS TODAY

Kitchenette Apartments and Rooms Without Kitchenette
Values Unequaled Elsewhere in All Chicago

An Announcement of Great Interest to All Who Have Unsuccessfully Sought Accommodations Here

¶ Nowhere in Uptown Chicago—the city's preferred residential district—was there another apartment hotel so signally favored by patronage, winter and summer, during the past two years, as was Hotel Somerset.

¶ Incident to very extensive alterations and redecoration, a number of apartments and rooms, upon which leases expired simultaneously, were withheld from leasing. All improvements have now been completed. These rooms and apartments, immaculate as when new, three years ago, but without the disadvantage of untrained service that handicaps a new hotel, we open to inspection today. In all that contributes to convenience they are unequaled in America.

¶ And yet the prices are less than those commanded in hotels of inferior equipment. Rooms without kitchenette, monthly, $100 and up. Kitchenette apartments of 2, 3 and 4 rooms at prices ranging from $140 to $325 a month. There are also 5 and 6 room suites at prices corresponding. All rates include that full hotel service for which the Somerset is known and respected throughout the entire country.

¶ There is an excellent bathing beach only a half block distant, which together with the solarium and roof garden makes summer at this hotel very delightful.

Those Who Have Never Lived in a Kitchenette Apartment

¶ If you have never lived in a well equipped kitchenette apartment you cannot know the convenience, comfort and great economy of life in the Somerset. Practically all necessary expenses, except food and clothing and a few small incidentals, are included in the rent. You are also saved the annoyance of the thousand and one details that come up in ordinary housekeeping.

Some Things Included in the Service at Hotel Somerset

¶ All table silver, dishes and linen; complete kitchen equipment; beautiful furnishings; competent maid service every day; delivery of supplies direct to apartment through service closet without intrusion; all apartments include tub and shower bath; ventilation shafts carry off cooking odors from kitchenette by forced draft; an abundance of closets and drawer space that delights every woman; an unusual number of large windows. You need bring with you no household equipment whatever.

¶ Come today and let us compare with you the cost of living here with the cost of even a small house or flat. Even if you are not considering an immediate change we shall consider it a privilege to show you through the hotel at any time—day or evening.

IT PAYS TO INVESTIGATE

Why is it that women insist on wearing Nemo Corsets after they once have tried them?

It is because they do something for health, comfort and good looks that no other corset has ever done for them before.

Millions have worn them during the last quarter of a century. Have you? If not, investigate.

Keeps the Straightest, Unraliest Hair in Curl

You've never seen anything work such wonders for straight, lank, unruly hair (long or bobbed) as plain liquid Silmerine. Nothing else will keep the hair in curl for so long a time—or produce such beautifully lustrous, natural-looking curls and waves. Damp or windy weather has no terrors for the woman who uses it. It is easily applied and is perfectly harmless. It leaves no greasy, sticky or streaky trace. The curliness can be acquired in three hours, though many prefer to apply the liquid at bedtime. Get a bottle of liquid Silmerine from the druggist, follow the accompanying directions, and have a most agreeable surprise.

Teeth Polished This Way Are White and Beautiful

There is something about polished teeth that make a man or woman "stand out" from the crowd. It is a startling fact that very few people have really clean teeth. If you will examine your teeth closely on your next trip you will see the enamel is discolored and streaked. The usual powders, pastes and creams do not remove plains, tartar and plaques. Polish your teeth with One-a-Week Tooth Paste and they will be sparkling white and beautiful. Get it from your druggist today.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

Literal Little Willie.

Willie—Mother, my Sunday school teacher never takes a bath.

Mother—Why, Willie, who told you?

Willie—She did. She said she never did anything in private that she wouldn't do in public. E. L.

Too Bad.

The young couple traveled to Florida for their honeymoon. As soon as they arrived they went out for a swim.

The following morning the bridegroom got a post card, which had also arrived safely. Grand row between them.

"My!" she muttered. "I didn't think they'd begin to quarrel so soon."

A. E.

Shrouded in Language.

The motorist was a stranger in the city's streets. It was evening. A policeman approached.

"Sir," said he, "your beacon light doesn't seem to be functioning."

"What?" gasped the astonished driver.

"Your illuminator, I say, is shrouded in unmitigated oblivion."

"I don't quite——"

"The effulgence of your irradiator has evanesced."

"My dear fellow——"

"The transversal ether oscillations from your incandenser have been discontinued."

Just then a little newsboy came along and said, "Say, mister, yer lights is out."

A young couple traveled to the east for their honeymoon. As soon as they arrived they went out in a motor.

The following morning the bride's mother got a post card, which read: "Arrived safely. Grand row before me."

CHEMISTRY

Burning iron in oxygen.

THE FIRE BURNER.

OXYGEN is the principal supporter of fire. This substance is a gas. Chemists say that when it is condensed, at the temperature of liquid air, it is an indigo blue, somewhat magnetic fluid. You can isolate oxygen easily and see for yourself how it burns things.

Tie a thimble on the end of a wire. Mix some clean white sand with potassium chlorate. This latter salt is our present source of oxygen. Its formula is KClO-3. K stands for potasdum or kalium, as it is termed in Latin. Cl means chlorine and O represents oxygen. As you see, potassium chlorate is rich in oxygen.

When bubbles begin coming off hold a glowing splinter of wood above the thimble. The spark at once ignites into a fierce blaze.

Tie a bit of yarn on the end of a fine iron wire. Dip it in sulphur, light it and hold it in the oxygen. The iron ignites and burns with a blazing shower of sparks.

Iron probably has a compound molecule. When it burns there is something of the nature of an explosion within it that blows the molecule to pieces. In many alloys of iron and steel the process is repeated several times, producing patterns of strange and intricate beauty.

PRACTICAL DISHES YOU CAN COOK AT THE TABLE

Savory, home-cooked food without a gas stove! Tempting dishes that make your mouth water, without even a kitchen! Doesn't that sound like a Utopian dream? But right at your table, wherever it is, you can easily cook an unlimited variety of delicious recipes.

An extraordinary new toaster and grill has come on the market that answers every need of the modern woman. It is so simple that anyone can use it, and yet it is so complete that there are few things you cannot cook on it.

I offer you the following delightful recipes that I have personally tested upon this new Sunbeam Toaster and Grill.

Corn Oysters

Mix one-fourth of a cup of cracker crumbs, two-thirds of a cup of canned corn, a teaspoon of melted butter, one beaten egg and seasoning of salt and black pepper. With reflector directly under the coils, heat two teaspoons of butter in the pan over the coils, drop corn mixture by spoonful and turn carefully when lightly browned on the bottom. Remove to hot serving plate when done. Cook bacon below in the same pan, after rubbing with soft paper and make toast above. A hearty breakfast for a snappy morning.

Beef Balls

To half a pound of beef round (put twice through the food chopper) add two or three tablespoons of cream (either sweet or sour), a little salt, and onion flavor if liked. Shape lightly into flat, uniform cakes, or one large piece if preferred, and place in heated and well buttered pan over the coils with reflector directly below the coils. Turn after a few minutes and when each side is lightly browned set pan in slide below while making toast in the rack above. Serve promptly either on toast with creole sauce around. Over-cooking or delay in serving ruins this simple, but satisfying combination.

Creole Sauce

Heat a tablespoon of butter in the pan over the coils with reflector directly below the coils. Add a tablespoon of minced onion and a small green pepper cut fine. Then place reflector over the pan and cook five minutes. Uncover and add a cup of chopped tomato, or a scant measure of canned tomato well drained. Cook uncovered, over or below coils as most convenient, seasoning with salt and paprika. When thick, serve around meat balls, or an omelet.

Ham and Egg Scallop

Add three-fourths of a cup of boiled ham and a hard boiled egg (each cut small or chopped) to a scant cup of white sauce, made as for creamed toast in the pan over the coils with reflector directly beneath the coils. Season with plenty of onion salt and paprika and a little salt. Place in lowest slide beneath reflector to keep hot while toasting some split rolls or steamed brown bread to serve with it.

There are so many things that you can cook, broil, fry, or boil on the Sunbeam and so many at the same time, that it is indeed a simple matter now to get your whole breakfast or luncheon without once leaving the table. I cannot think of anything more pleasing for the bachelor girl, the professional man, or the couple that boards.

There are so many times when a quick little snack is wanted, and when one's clothes make it inconvenient to putter around a gas stove. So this Sunbeam comes in handy for after theater tid-bits, afternoon teas, and the like.

The reversible feature of the Sunbeam particularly appeals to me. It really is a unique feature. The toaster rack holds slices of any thickness, and with the cool ebony handles one may flip the toast over without touching the toast at all.

TO MAKE PERFECT TOAST

To make perfect toast, fresh bread is best. It must be toasted quickly over intense heat so that the outside will sear before the inside becomes recooked.

This can be done only on a flat surface. Toasters that hold the bread in an upright position, lose so much of their heat that it takes longer to toast the bread and the slow process does recook the inner portion of the slice making it less digestible.

I find that the Sunbeam Electric Toaster and Grill makes the most delicious toast imaginable, because it does toast quickly and evenly and on a flat surface. Cheese crackers, cinnamon toast and fancy cut sandwiches are made quickly and perfectly. You can even make four slices of toast at one time on this new Sunbeam, by making use of the grill pan below.

By a new use of a simple but scientific principle, a low, medium or high heat is always at your command. It is as automatic as turning the flame up or down on a range.

Just to look at the sunbeam is a pleasure. It is so well put together, with such splendid lines, and lovely finish that it graces any table. Perhaps the most surprising fact is that you can buy this wonderful new electric appliance for very little more than a mere toaster alone.

The makers of Sunbeam have just printed an attractive and helpful little book of recipes, "49 DISHES COOKED AT THE TABLE" that they are sending free to anyone who writes for it. It is so nicely illustrated and practical that I suggest you drop a line or a post card to the Chicago Flexible Shaft Company, 5600 Roosevelt Road, Chicago. I know that they will be glad to mail you a copy.

now! all combined in one perfect iron seven long needed improvements!

For the price you pay for a good electric iron you deserve every possible improvement that will make your ironing smoother, snowier and easier.

You can now buy just such an iron! The one perfect iron that has every feature you have always wanted.

Even if Sunbeam didn't have these marvelous improvements it would still be the world's greatest iron. How many other irons, do you suppose have the vital connections silver brazed? Or are given such heavy nickle plate? Do you know of a single other iron that is so wonderfully built that it is never found in a repair shop?

These are only a few of the things your money should give you in any good iron. But you get them all in Sunbeam—the Aristocrat of Irons, plus the seven famous improvements described on the right. Read them. You will then see why Sunbeam costs more to make and why it is such wonderful value at $7.50.

Your Sunbeam Iron, de luxe double deck stand, and durable attractive cord are wrapped separately in dainty tissue like plate silver and are all packed together in a distinctive blue carton.

$7.50

Go to any dealer who sells electrical appliances. He will be glad to demonstrate the Sunbeam.

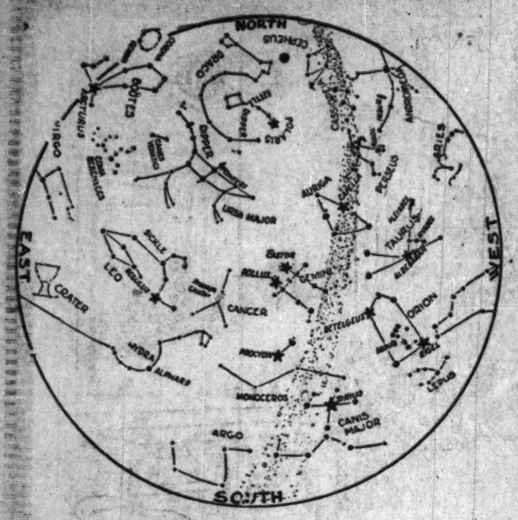
ASTRONOMY



The sky tonight.

NOVA AND METEORS.

SEE, a star is falling. In the black sky there suddenly comes a flash, a streaking blaze, a glowing fireball rushes among the stars, then burns out, and vanishes, save perhaps for a writhing trail of phosphorescent smoke. A tiny tragedy has been enacted. A world no larger than a football has gone to its destruction.

The streaking light across the heavens was no star. It was a meteor, or little planet circling the sun. The space about the earth is not empty. It teems with little bodies, ranging in size from motes to fragments of a few tons' weight. These are the debris of worlds. Each of them, large and small, pays absolute obedience to the sun. They all run in orbits, but unlike the earth, their paths are strongly elliptical instead of being almost circular. They criss-cross each other in wild confusion, and are so tangled with the earth's orbit that collisions are inevitable.

The earth strikes many millions of meteors a day. Most of these burn high in the air, and perhaps not one out of the day's quota ever reaches the ground in solid form.

The mechanics whereby meteors burn is full of interest, because it furnishes us with a clew as to what takes place when a dark star crashes into a black field of nebula, and the resulting conflagration makes a "new" star, or nova.

Meteors burn from 50 to 100 miles above the ground. At this distance the air is hardly denser than the vacuum inside an electric light globe. We might say that this is almost a negligible quantity. Yet the meteor finds it an insuperable obstacle, whose friction is great enough to melt a flying mass to vapor. The question does not involve density of air so much as speed of impact.

A meteor is seldom going slower than twenty miles per second when it meets our air, and its velocity may be as much as forty-four miles per second. When an object moving with this terrific velocity hits a molecule there is a little flash of fire. If the meteor were running at speeds we know on the ground, the heat from the impact of one molecule would have ample time to be radiated before the next one came. But at celestial speeds, the meteor traverses the foot or so of distance between molecules so rapidly that one flash succeeds another, and there is no time for much radiation. The temperature of the meteor's face rises, therefore, until it is hot enough to set the flying stone on fire.

Dark stars also travel with great speeds. A sun moves faster as it grows older, until when it is cold and dead it rushes through space a huge, grim, somber specter, blacker than the inky sky all around.

The swarms of particles in a dark nebula are not necessarily near together. They may be miles apart. The internal gravity of such a cloud appears to be inadequate to bring such a mass into condensation. When the dark star strikes it behaves exactly like a meteor in the earth's air, except that it does not appear to trail out so far, but fairly explodes all at once.

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?

Cyressilla.

By Selby Maxwell.

IS SHE A VAMP?

WHICH is the better type of woman, the strong minded woman or the baby doll? Which one will make a man the happiest? This is a question which is repeatedly asked. This man answers you one way, and then another. But from all their answers certain facts are gleaned. Some say that it is better to be an old man's darling than a young man's slave. Some young women deny that they are slaves. It appears that every woman must inevitably taste of these two lots, the slave and the darling.

The young woman who is strong minded, and who starts life with a struggle, usually ends by being a darling. The baby doll who becomes a darling at one leap, more than often ends life as a slave. Of this there are innumerable examples.

Strong minded women and baby dolls are for the most part born, not made. But where a woman who is strong minded successfully camouflages herself as a baby doll, look out. She is deadly. She starts life as a slave and darling, in equal proportions, and ends the same way. She gets what she wants, because she knows when to be hard as steel and when to be soft as thistledown.

Have we any mark more or less reliable whereby we can tell which woman will be a slave first, which last, and which will be a darling all the time? Fortunately, we have.

Look at her upper lip. A short, beautifully curling upper lip denotes the woman who will begin life as a darling. A long tight lip shows she who has courage to dare to be a slave at first in order to be a darling later on. The lip that turns down at the corners and rises to two peaks in the center, at the cornus, shows a woman who can have both natures at once. Do you recognize the type? It is none other than our beautiful copper haired, square jawed Cromagnons.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published $1 will be paid. Address Best Joke Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Daddy's Dome.

A man sat in a fashionable hairdresser's shop with his little daughter while his wife was having a marcel wave. Stroking her father's gleaming bald head the child cooed: "No waves for you, daddy. You're all beach."

F. S.

The Donkey and the Zebra.

When the donkey saw the zebra
He began to switch his tail;
"Well, I never!" was his comment,
"There's a mule that's been in jail."
E. K.

Correct.

Teacher, after lesson on snow—As we walk out on a cold winter day and look around, what do we see on every hand?
Pupil—Gloves.

A Valuable Curio.

An old lady in a dim brac-a-brac shop noticed the head and shoulders of a quaint figure above the counter at the end of the room. "What's that queer old Jap idol down there worth?" she asked. The clerk answered in a subdued tone, "About $50,000, ma'am. That's the proprietor."
X. Y. Z.

Some Blame It on Bacon.

"Who wrote 'Hamlet'?" asked the teacher of little Bobby.
"I didn't do it—I didn't do it," Bobby protested.
That afternoon the teacher met Bobby's father and told him the joke.
"The little imp," mumbled the father. "I'll bet he did it."

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

HIGHER CRITICISM.

Whenas in gaiety I go
To revel in a vodeville show—
(I might say "revel" is, I fear,
A bit of kind distortion here),
A trooper with misguided zeal
Will twist an acrobatic keel
With skill no one can understand
Till one brave hero starts the hand.

Or else it is a dancing fay—
One wonders how they get that way—
Who has a supple double joint
At ev'ry cute strategic point,

And yet her tricks are all in vain
Till one lone critic can't refrain
From cheering with a mad hurrah
What all now see because he saw.

In letters and in life the same;
The cheerers play a waiting game
Till one more subtle than the rest
(Or keener for his private jest)
Greets book or picture, song or play
With one faint solitary bay,
And then the gang cries: "Zowie...WHEE!
I see it, too...hurray for me."

Tide Leaves Mix Yachting Party Dry on the Dock

By Mildred Spain.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Tom Mix, cowboy star, did a King Canute last Sunday, but failed to get the tides to respond to "camera," thus spoiling what would have been a perfectly good launching of his yacht, the Miss Mixit. And you never saw such splendor, sartorial and seagoing!

The $40,000 ocean swimming craft was to be christened with a bottle of water by Miss Thomasina Mix, 7 year old daughter of the star. Champagne was considered passé, and only water from the star's own ranch was to be used.

Early in the day Mr. Mix, resplendent in his cowboy regalia, brought his wife, formerly Eugenie Forde, his daughter, and the famous horse, Tony, to view the christening. A barbecue served from the chuck wagon of the star by his cook, who "knew him when" he was a cowboy in Arizona, was the initial feature. A three piece string orchestra from the Fox company played those tunes by which the western hero emotes.

Mr. Kid McCoy was there with none of his eight wives present. Dustin Farnum was there, too, in dark blue goggles, knickers, and woolen sports sox.

One of the lifeboats is named after Tony, the other after Mrs. Mix, "Vickie."

Mr. Mix was all ready to throw a lariat over the ship, and, seated on his horse, jerk the launch into the water. But as the water wasn't deep enough he sorrowfully put the lariat aside. "Time and tide are nix for Mix," he said.

It would have been a beautiful christening if only the tides had acted right. But the tides are as temperamental as stars, and the craft really nosed into the sea Monday morning.

Tapestry of Stars.

The social high light of the week was the Tuesday night dance at the Cocoanut Grove—and will continue to be as long as there are such lovely sights as Mabel Normand in iridescent white with a wide band of white fox fur, and the orchidaceous Gloria Swanson dancing with Count Charles De Roche. Picture a tapestry woven of beautifully gowned stars, an industrious jazz orchestra, a thousand toy balloons bobbing over the dance, dolls dressed in green presiding over each table, and you will understand the popularity of movie night.

GLORIA SWANSON.

An especial party was planned by Milton Cohen for Gouverneur Morris of Monterey. Pola Negri, and Charles Chaplin, Miss Negri was forced to send regrets due to sudden illness. And on the night the premiere of her picture, "Bella Donna," was shown at the Rialto theater. Miss Ruth Wightman of Monterey was charming in green georgette trimmed with gold lace. Mrs. Maude Hammond wore white Spanish lace and pearls.

Virginia Brown Faire, Colleen Moore and Carmel Myers were the judges of the dancing contest, a weekly feature

Others present were Blanche Sweet, in white crêpe with a bandeau of silver leaves; May McAvoy, in mountain haze crepe trimmed with valances of lace and French flowers, and Lois Wilson, in orange brocade with a huge Spanish comb in her severely coifed hair.

Gloria Swanson was exotic in black lace over green georgette. A wide band of black taffeta ribbon was wound around her hair. Mrs. Tom Mix wore a gown of orchid, with a silver bird perched saucily on her shoulder. Miriam Cooper was dressed in a white rhinestone trimmed dinner gown. Elaine Hammerstein was attired in a clever combination of black and white. Billie Dove's gown was of white beaded in rhinestones. The sensation of the evening proved to be the opera wrap of Gloria Swanson that was fashioned of Javanese batik.

Ah! A Tooth.

The auspicious appearance of a pearly bone in the tiny jaw of one Joseph Talmadge Keaton, 9 months old son of Buster and Natalie Talmadge Keaton, was the occasion for an afternoon tea given by the justly proud mama. Mrs. Margaret Talmadge was there, who answers to "Peggy;" Constance Talmadge, and Norma, Eileen Percy, Mrs. Earl Williams, and Ethel Grey Terry. Joseph Talmadge Keaton—call him "Buster Jr."—has chosen the easiest way. That is, he is following in the footsteps of papa, aunties, etc., and will soon be seen in a picture starring Auntie Constance.

BUSTER JR.

Bert Lytell's appearance on the Orpheum stage here created such enthusiasm among fans and friends that every evening performance looked like a page from the movie blue book. On Thursday night Jack Pickford, Claire Windsor, Betty Compson, Walter Morosco, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Nagel, Alice Calhoun, Richard Dix, Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa, and Lionel Belmore were there forming theater parties.

Mickey McBan, 4 year old actor, entertained 400 children at the Maryland hotel in Pasadena recently. These, said Mickey with a swagger, were the real four hundred. Bring on your Mary Pickfords and Norma Talmadges. They couldn't eat half as much ice cream.

AT THE CORT.

MISS MILDRED BOOTH.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

She has succeeded Miss Edna Hibbard in the cast of "The Rear Car," the odd melodrama which engages the talents of Taylor Holmes and his energetic company of assistants. We saw Miss Booth last in "Why, Certainly!" the little comedy which Alan Pollock staged at the Central not long ago. Before that, she was for many months among those present in "Lightnin'," at the Blackstone.

Father Says She Forgot Him After She Rose to Fame

By Monroe Lathrop.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—The domestic disasters that led to the separation of Bill Hart and his young wife, just before the birth of their baby, have been brought to fresh attention by a sensational attack upon Winifred Westover by her father, Thomas C. Heide of San Francisco.

"I can understand Bill Hart's position," says the parent, in revealing letters accusing his daughter of renouncing him after she had come to opulence and fame, although he says he sent her as much as $400 out of scanty means when she was struggling upward.

Heide is a reining engineer and a graduate of the Denmark Military academy in Copenhagen.

"He deserted mother and me when I was 5 years old," says Winifred in a hot retort. "Mother got a divorce for that reason. He never paid her the alimony allowed her by the court. He's a quitter, like Bill Hart, and still he whines that I never hunted him up in San Francisco."

Bill Hart Jr. sat on the young mother's knee as she poured out her indignation.

Neither Will Talk.

Malicious gossip by enemies is credited with another marital bust-up in the motion picture community. Both George Melford, Paramount producer, and his wife, companions of nineteen years, are silent as to the cause of their separation. Mrs. Melford, who has been made ill by the affair, is still at the director's handsome home in Hollywood. But he has refused to enter it since his return from New York and is living with his mother and sisters.

Friends of the wife say his mind was poisoned during his absence by distorted reports of her social minglings. The reticence of the couple and the attorneys they have employed holds a veil of secrecy over the cause of the trouble. Melford is one of the most prominent figures in the film industry. He entered it twenty years ago, and has made many of the most successful features of recent times.

Puzzled About Toy.

"Now that I've got it, what'll I do with it?" was Tom Mix's contentious comment as he gazed upon his new $40,000 ocean going yacht, ninety-six feet long. It is the newest toy of the star who came from the cow ranches of Texas to Hollywood.

Everything about the launching in Los Angeles harbor was as un-nautical as it could be. Before 400 friends, with Tom's studio cronies in sombreros and chaparrals, saw Tom, mounted on his picture horse, Tony, rope the prow of the ship and help start it down the ways. A ranch barbecue, prepared by the star's old cook from the Texas range, regaled the assembly. A few real sailors about hitched up their pants with a jerk to emphasize their disgust.

Only a Day Dream.

Virginia Brown Faire is recovering nicely from a beautiful day dream. The actress was an heiress for a day and it was delightful while it lasted. It was a surprise, but not incredible, when she received a wire from an attorney in Brooklyn with news of a $25,000 legacy.

Some years ago in Central Park, New York, she helped to care for a rich clothing manufacturer in Brooklyn while the ambulance was coming after an automobile accident. So what was more likely than that he had made provision in his will for a testimonial of his gratitude. A reply was wired to the Brooklyn attorney.

After a day's wait back came the response: "Unable to deliver; cannot locate party." Virginia is still wondering which of her friends who sent the first wire has such a keen sense of humor.

On to the Footlights.

Reported plans of Lillian Gish have interested the film world. The fair Griffith star will, it is said, be the next protégé to be developed by David Belasco. Friends of Lillian say she has been laying by her income in pictures preparatory to taking advantage of an offer of the stage wizard to give her all the advantages of training and exploitation several other girls have received from him.

Preceding her to the footlights, however, will be Mary Miles Minter, who is reported to have her pen poised before a stage contract. Katherine MacDonald is another whose beauty may become an asset of the theater. She has had attractive offers.

Holding Its Own.

The shoemaker does not always stick to his last. An elaborate theater to be built in Hollywood at a cost of approximately a million dollars is to be erected by a company composed almost exclusively of motion picture people. Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Joseph M. Schenck, the producer of the Talmadge pictures; Sol Lesser, former producer of the Jackie Coogan films, and Adolph Ramish and A. L. Gore, owners of a string of Pacific coast movie theaters, are the leaders in the enterprise.

Mr. Fairbanks and Miss Pickford are giving their utmost coöperation in the preparatory plans, as well as investing liberally in the scheme. The only inference from it is that the movie folks, however big they may expect the future in the pictures to be, are sure the stage is also going to hold its own with the amusement going public. Hollywood is nearing 100,000 people. The promoters plan to present plays with many film celebrities who came from the footlights in important rôles.

HAMLET.

MISS JULIA ARTHUR.
[White Photo.]

This distinguished trapedienne brings to the Palace Music hall today her impersonation of the Prince of Denmark in what is known as the queen's closet scene from "Hamlet." Three other players will appear with her, in the rôles of the Queen, Polonius, and the ghost of Hamlet's father.

"Eccentric" Best Describes Modern Russian Paintings

By Eleanor Jewett.

WHY is it that the word "modern" always suggests something extreme as well as unusual? Why is it that that designation is invariably attached to an exhibition of paintings or sculpture which, the exhibitors may feel, stands in need of some sort of explanation before the eyes of the presumably untutored public?

Whatever the answer, the adjective has become so stereotyped that it is taken for granted that, when an exhibition is odd, its creators are members of the modern school. Though—and this, too, is peculiar and invariable—the painters who paint intelligible, straightforward pictures, living in the present day as vitally as the "modernists" themselves, are never suspected of being present in a "modern" show and are rarely thought racy enough to be announced specifically in the interests of the layman who is to pass upon their work.

However, there is no doubt but what the word "modern" lends a flip to the imagination, to the anticipation with which one awaits a new opening. On Monday last, at the Arts club, there opened an exhibition of modern Russian paintings. It is just as well to know that the paintings are modern; it saves the dignity of the older artists and alleviates the eccentricities of the younger. A modern artist, as a modern author, is expected to ride a hobby and be goose feathered with foibles; these modern paintings bear witness to the complete equipment in those respects of their painters. They are not mad; they are fatally sane.

This decorative group by Leon Bakst is but one of a number of beautiful and richly colored paintings by him to be seen now at the Arts club. The exhibit of his work will remain until April 5.

Among the painters are the lover of the blocky, wooden type; the annotator of the thin, fleshless, bloodless, colorless type; the creator of the burlesque, grotesque type; the historian of the chaotic motif; the delineator of the angle curve, and false perspective theory. Modernism that yet does not appeal as being modern, but as being a striving for the outré, a throwback to the "isms" of ten and twelve years ago, that is what this collection of eccentric canvases sums itself up as in the mind of the unprejudiced observer.

It may be said in favor of certain of the paintings, as the "Mi-Carême Russe" by Sergei Sudeykin, the dealer in quaint conceits, that the work is amusing, colorful, spirited, and intimately Russian. In favor of "The Prophet" by Boris Gregoriev, that the painter has secured a remarkable effect about the eyes. They glow red, like a coal in the dark. They seem to pulsate; they fairly burn with light. But his "Parisian Types" are certainly not French. If that couple was born anywhere but within the confines of a Slavic country, then does each broad, blunt feature of those peasant faces tell a distinct and separate lie.

And again, look at the ghastly canvases by Di Lado Goudiachvili, possibly the most displeasing painter represented. What is there even modern about them? He seems to have tripped on some of the oddities of a decade ago and not to have recovered his balance. Yet there is hope for him in his drawings. They are greatly to be preferred to his paintings.

Leaving the rooms where the flaunted "moderns" revel, one goes with relief and a rising spirit to the farther gallery where there opened, also on Monday last, an exhibition of paintings by Leon Bakst. This gallery is a joy to the eye and a feast. There is excellent drawing in the figures; there is marvelous color in the costumes; there is a sweet and generous fancy in the few stage settings—for example, the lovely "Le Château où dort 100 ans, la belle au bois dormant" (the château where slept for a hundred years the sleeping beauty in the wood); there is character and beauty and likeness in the several portraits; and over everything is the rich realization that here is art that is real and sincere and for all time. The question of modern is entirely beside the mark. There is no more need to set Leon Bakst in a school of painters than there is to set Shakespeare in a school of writers. It is enough that the one paints and the other writes; whether today or yesterday, is trivial beside the fact of their accomplished work.

The Bakst exhibition should be seen by every one. It will remain on view at the Arts club until April 5.

An exhibition of original drawings by Pablo Picasso will open in the Arts club room at the Art institute on Tuesday afternoon of this week.

An exhibit of paintings by Hans Larwin, some of which were enjoyed last fall when they were shown at the Art institute, is to be seen at the Palette and Chisel club. This exhibit will be followed at the end of the month by an exhibition of paintings by members of the club.

Tuesday afternoon the third international water color exhibition will open in the east galleries of the Art institute. Nearly 400 paintings will be shown.

Oswald Siren will lecture tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, under the auspices of the Art club and the American Friends of China, at the Art club. His subject is "Artistic Remains of the Ancient Capital of China." The lecture will be illustrated with colored slides.

The Association of Arts and Industries announces the following lectures to be given during the next few weeks on Sunday afternoons at 5:30 o'clock in Fullerton hall of the Art institute: This afternoon Herman Rosse will speak on "Stage Settings"; on next Sunday afternoon Sterling B. McDonald will speak on "Furniture"; on April 1 N. A. Altman will tell of "The Romance of Paper"; and on April 8 Walter S. Ashby will lecture on "Where Art Touches Alarm Clocks."

The Connecticut Academy of Fine Arts announces its thirteenth annual exhibition of oil paintings and sculpture, to take place at Hartford from April 16 to April 30. The exhibits eligible are works in oil and sculpture by living artists which have not before been publicly exhibited in the city of Hartford.

The two great prizes of the year offered in the annual exhibition of the Salmagundi club of New York City were awarded to "The Wanderer," by Frank Tenney Johnson, and to "The Song," by Gerald Leake. Mr. Johnson won the Samuel T. Shaw purchase prize of $1,000, and Mr. Leake won the members' purchase prize of the same amount.

Henry S. Eddy, a young American artist, is having a successful exhibit of recently painted pictures in New York.

William H. Crossman is exhibiting a number of canvases in New York.

On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Fullerton hall, Hermann Rosse will lecture on "Holland Interiors."

Charles Bittinger will lecture in Fullerton hall on March 27 at 4 o'clock. His subject will be "Color."

The Detroit Institute of Arts has purchased for its permanent collection Nicholas Roerich's painting, "Polovetsky's Camp." This was designed for the setting of "Prince Igor." The Roerich pictures have been touring the United States for the last two years. They have been shown in twenty-eight cities. One of the first cities which enjoyed them was Chicago, where they were exhibited two years ago at the Art institute.

"The Lady with the Shawl," by Howard Crosby Renwick of New York, is now on view at the Cordon club. The painter has recently finished a striking portrait of Michael Strange, the writer, and wife of John Barrymore.

The newest art museum to be established is that which has just been opened in Baltimore. It is to be called the Baltimore Museum of Art, and is quartered in the old Garrett mansion on Mount Vernon place in the heart of the city.

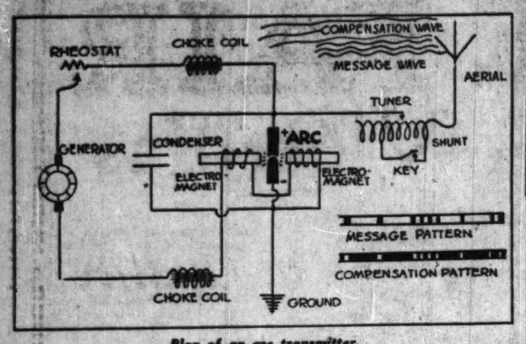
RADIO



Plan of an arc transmitter.

THE RINGING ARC.

THERE comes a clear, ringing, pulsing sound in the receivers. It resounds in the loud speaker.

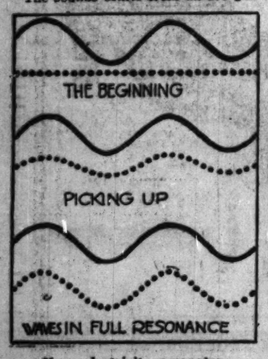
Every corner of the room is filled with the shrill, musical notes. No doubt you have often wondered, as you listened in on the ether, the origin of those cello-like tones which carry such penetrating dit-daa-daa's.

The sounds comes from an arc generator. A singing arc sets up waves that carry farther and harder than any other sort of radio transmitter, the vibrating vacuum tube alone excepted.

A glance at an arc transmitter circuit reveals a closed circuit about the poles of a direct current dynamo, or other source of a direct flow of electricity through an arc and shunted across by a condenser circuit.

In addition to this simple circuit, there are chokes, a rheostat and two heavy electro-magnets facing the arc, to make it burn steadier. The operation of a singing arc is something like this:

When the arcs are set burning there is always more of a potential on one side than the other. Accordingly, the current dams back and enters the condenser, charging one side of it. This goes on until the condenser plates reach their electrical capacity. Then they begin discharging. The current flows in the opposite direction. It thus happens that half the time the arc is burning with the generator current plus the flow from the condenser, and half the time against the flow of the condenser. This sets up a train of pure electrical waves in the condenser circuit.



How electricity resonates.

An aerial and ground are naturally the two sides of a huge condenser. They have a natural frequency of vibration, or wave length. Now, it is a fact that when any matter, including electricity, has a vibratory rate and any other matter in contact with it has the same rate, the two will oscillate together.

The aerial-ground circuit is connected through the arc-condenser circuit. By suitably changing the electrical magnitude of the aerial with the ordinary tuning devices, the operator can set this aerial vibrating to the exact rate and amplitude of the arc. When he does this a clear, musical note sounds in the ether.

It now only remains to put a key in the aerial circuit. The train of radiated waves is not broken, as it has been found that they posses some inertia, and do not pick up instantly when the gap is closed. Instead, the key shunts a few turns out of the tuner, and sets up two trains of waves, one of which will be in tune with the receivers, and will be heard as intervals of tone and silence, while the other, on some widely different wave lengths, will be heard as intervals of silence, corresponding to dots and dashes, and tone, corresponding to the spaces between them.

Vaudeville Wit

RIALTO.

Adler and Dunbar:

"Do you trust your wife?"

"Why, man, I would trust her with my life."

"I know, but would you trust her with anything valuable?"

"When I am away from home she writes to me every day."

"Well, it's your own fault. Why don't you leave her enough money to last a few days?"

"My married sister moves in the best society."

"I guess she finds it cheaper to move than to pay rent."

"That's a fine race horse I own. He only lost one race last season."

"How often did he run?"

"Once."

"I lost a piece of paper yesterday that was worth twenty dollars to me."

"Is that so? What was it?"

"A twenty dollar bill."

"Do you have any trouble meeting expenses now?"

"No, indeed. I meet them every time I turn."

"Some thieves held me up last night and robbed me of my last cent."

"That so? How much did they get?"

"My last cent."

"I am a woman of few words."

"But you make the few words work overtime."

"When will we ever have an old fashioned winter again?"

"Well, we will never have an old fashioned winter while prices remain where they are."

Why Wear Arch Supports?

Unless you have a serious case of fallen arches, you can get all the arch support you need in the Cantilever Shoe.

The corseting effect provided by the flexible arch and snug lacing over a padded tongue, will be more comfortable, pleasanter, and more curative than metal supports.

Fallen arches are the result of failure of the muscles to hold the bones in place. These muscles must be encouraged to exercise and strengthen.

The flexible arch Cantilever Shoe gives free play to the foot muscles. Blood circulation is stimulated. The abused foot is made comfortable while exercise restores the arch to normal.

A severe case of flat-foot should be attended by your physician or by a foot doctor. The Cantilever Shoe will assist him in curing you.

The Origin of Letters

GREEK U or Y upsilon =

Y and I and also Ü, J and Z

TEUTONIC CELTIC

THE USE OF Y.

The letter Y is not native in western European script. It is a borrowed form. Its name is French and Spanish in "Greek 'I,'" which quite explains its origin.

As is usual with new letters whose status is not definitely fixed, Y is often used interchangeably with I, or sometimes to denote slight shades of meaning.

Mutated u, or ü, as in Teutonic languages, as in our words "mouse" and "mice," have a Y character. The original word for the rodent was mus, and to be truly correct its plural should be spelled myce and pronounced "meese."

I Owe My Beauty

Largely to this white super-clay

By Edna Wallace Hopper

My youthful beauty is the marvel of millions. My complexion is as soft and rosy as 40 years ago. Not a line or wrinkle mars it. I could easily pass for 19. On the stage I still play young girls' parts.

Scores of my friends have secured like results by the methods I employ. They have multiplied their beauty and kept their youthful bloom. So I am convinced that women in general can do what I have done. And I am going to help them if they wish.

I have arranged to supply to dealers everywhere the very helps I use. They have proved themselves the best helps in existence. Now I want them to bring to millions what they brought to me.

My 20-year clay

The chief reason for my youthful beauty is the use of facial clay. Not the crude and muddy clays so many use today, but a white, refined clay, wondrously perfected. It is the final result of 20 years of scientific study.

Famous beauties have used clays for ages. That's what made them famous. But only in late years has clay been really studied. Countless tests and analyses have proved what clay is best—a certain rare clay, mineral-laden.

Ways have been found to refine it, to remove the useless mud. The clay I use is white and clean and dainty. And science has found some added factors which bring multiplied results.

Any clay user will be amazed at the difference when she compares my Youth Clay with the old kinds.

You must use clay

Clay is essential to beauty at its best. Also to continued youth. No woman who omits it can hope to compare with women who employ it. Every woman must use clay in justice to herself.

Clay purges the skin of all that clogs the pores—the causes of sallow skin, blackheads and blemishes. It reduces enlarged pores, firms the skin, combats lines and wrinkles. It brings beauty of texture and contour.

It draws the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is that rosy afterglow which every user knows.

The results are almost unbelievable at first. In a few minutes one seems to drop ten years. New bloom and beauty come. And continued use brings what it brought me—decades of added youth.

Don't neglect your clay. A glance will tell in any crowd the users and non-users. But ordinary clays will never show you what a clay can do. To every woman my White Youth Clay will be a revelation.

Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay is now supplied by all druggists and toilet goods dealers. Price, 50c and $1 per tube. Also my Youth Cream, based on lemon and strawberry. This should follow the clay. Also my Facial Youth—my famous liquid cleanser. Also my Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. My Beauty Book comes with each.

Go try my Youth Clay in fairness to yourself. If the first tube fails to amaze and delight you, your dealer will return the price.

Why he wanted to know her

THERE was no special reason for his coming to this dance, and then, in the brightly gleaming lights he saw her. Slender, dainty, radiant, she stood out from among all others like a softly flushing rose.

She was turned slightly from him when his eyes first found her, and he watched eagerly for a chance to see more clearly

Suddenly, as if his gaze had drawn her, she raised her graceful head and looked at him. Was it possible that anything could be so sweet?

The faintly glowing color of her round cheek, melting into the cream of throat and shoulder. The pure whiteness of the low, broad brow, the coral of curving lips—she was like a delicate miniature on ivory.

For a breathless second he watched her, then hastened to his hostess. "Who is she?" he whispered, drawing his friend quickly toward her.

She was like a delicate miniature on ivory

The delight of a lovely skin

However attractive you may be, it is possible to make yourself lovelier if you use the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette."

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian Day Cream. This is a vanishing cream that, when worked well in, is a protection for the skin and a delicate foundation to which powder adheres evenly, and from which it will not easily rub off.

Then, apply Pompeian Beauty Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of a delightful perfume.

Now a bit of Pompeian Bloom for a softly glowing color and added sparkle in the eyes.

Lastly, dust over again with the powder in order to subdue the Bloom. And instantly the face is radiant with added youth and beauty.

If you use these Pompeian preparations together for Instant Beauty, you will obtain the most natural effect. For great care has been taken that the colors blend naturally.

Pompeian Lip Stick is of a rose petal shade and adds yet another touch that will set off your beauty.

How Youth Can Spoil Youth

By Mme. Jeannette

Today I sat opposite a young girl in the street car. She had charming, piquant features and a wealth of dark brown hair—but, oh, her complexion!

The skin about her neck and her temples was sallow and dark, while on her face she had powder and rouge of the shades that should be used only by the fairest blonde.

How I did long to sit beside her and say, "My dear, did you look in the mirror before you came out? Don't you know that it is really tragic to spoil your pretty face as you have done today?"

For that is just the point. The proper, the correct way to use rouge and powder is the studying of your own particular type, and the deft accentuating of the color nature gave you.

Just take this girl, for example. Her complexion, from what I could see, where she had neglected to powder, must have been naturally dark.

But a good vanishing cream, such as Pompeian Day Cream, carefully used over face and neck would have softened and prepared the skin for the powder and rouge to blend naturally. They would not have stopped abruptly in the regular lines shown on this girl's face.

Then the powder. She should have had the rich, creamy Rachel Beauty Powder that Pompeian has prepared for this dark type. And for rouge, Pompeian Bloom, the dark shade made especially for brunettes.

Here was a girl whose features were really lovely and who could very easily have been called a beauty—if she had used a little thought. There is no great knowledge or skill needed to make the best of oneself. Practical common sense in choosing good, pure creams and powders that are the correct shades, and a little care in the way they are used is all that is required.

Pompeian Orange-Tinted Rouge is charming at all times, and you will find it particularly good for daylight use.

—;—

Lip stick, too, plays an important part in improving the appearance. If the shape of your mouth is good, follow its curves with the lip stick. If the lines are not good, draw the lip stick from the inner side of the lips to the outer edge, and blend with the finger tips. Pompeian Lip Stick is absolutely pure, prevents chapping, and its shade is delightfully natural.

Music Contests: Problems of the Judges, Judged

first movements of Vieuxtemps' Second Concerto and John Alden Carpenter's Sonata for violin and piano for the Federation of Music Clubs.

With the judicial problems there also were compensations, one of the most pleasant being the realization of an understatement by Mrs. A. J. Ochsner, president of the federation. With much earnestness she warned all and sundry of the judges that we might expect a considerable proportion of half baked performances. The pleasure came in realizing that the half baked proportion was not considerable at all, but limited to a few.

In most cases there was talent plainly perceptible, of a kind that could be conscientiously encouraged and arousing hope for the future. Even the case of the young man who admitted after the contest that he had commenced studying the required Beethoven Sonata and MacDowell Concert Etude only two weeks before had its interest. He did not take a first place, but, considering everything, he had accomplished a lot.

One thing is certain. Whatever may come to pass in the careers of Helen Hedges, Cooper Lawley, and Marion Roberts, who won in Urbana, and Nesta Smith, George G. Smith, and Margaret Farr, who took first places at Orchestra hall, they never will have so difficult an ordeal again. The most trying experience of their artistic lives is now a thing of the past.

More About Opera in English.

A correspondent who prefers to have his name kept secret takes me to task for some remarks of mine two weeks ago regarding opera in English. He gently intimates that I have been indulging in the favorite indoor sport of making the public the goat, desires to know why I am so sure that the great body of opera goers does not care about the English language, inquires whether good translations are so easy to get, puts himself on record as in favor of the native tongue, but insists that the singers and conductors are not, and that if the management decreed a few performances in the present clubfoot English of the libretos, the result of such sabotaging on the job would be to disgust the patrons and turn them back to Italian. He also holds that opera production in Chicago has been a rich man's whim and that democracy been allowed no share in expressing its collective desire.

It was, of course, the last thing in my mind to make the public or any one else the goat for present conditions. But Patrick Henry once coined an immortal phrase to the effect that we can judge the future only by the past. In the past English performances at the Auditorium have generally been celebrated by the public's staying away in large numbers. This is not my opinion, but the recorded fact. Whether it was native works or translations of foreign pieces, the results were the same, not invariably, but too often for comfort in regarding the box office statements. That is the case in a few words.

Moreover, I did not say that good translations are easy to get. I said that if there were a public demand they would be as easy to get as good scenery. They would be obtained in the same way as good scenery, by intelligent spending of money in the right place. My correspondent's point that foreign singers and conductors are opposed to learning English is correct; it was also my point. I suggested public demand as a corrective, believing that the chance of earning a salary stands high in the impulses of those who would make music in public. I still believe it.

Definite in Suggestion.

Just as these words were being written, the music department of this paper received a call from Miss Esther Goetz of the Lindblom High school. Miss Goetz presented a rather fully elaborated plan for a petition to go later to the Chicago Civic Opera company to give some matinée performances in English next season for the benefit of the high school students of Chicago, with a preference for such operas as "Hansel and Gretel," "The King's Children," "Lohengrin," and others of the kind wherein the music is good and the libretto not too hectic.

Here, it would seem, is a fair case of organized democracy. The plan already has the indorsement of Supt. Mortenson, the teachers' association, the Society of American Musicians, and at least 75 per cent of the students whose opinion has been asked. Incidentally, there are 53,000 high school students in Chicago.

It would also seem that this is a chance of a lifetime for the Chicago opera to prove the civic value that it advertises in its title and the educational value by virtue of which its amusement tax was remitted. Likewise there is the chance to develop a solid asset for the company, future, but definite. Mr. Stock and the symphony orchestra are making a great point of the children's concerts, which are of enormous value now and with absolute certainty are developing a generation of future concert goers. At popular prices the opera company cannot fail to do the same for its own attractions.

Future developments of the plan will be watched with much interest.

Shadows of Coming Events.

Alfredo Casella, about the first of the modern Italian composers to become known through his music hereabouts, is to be the leading figure with the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week. He will be present in person in several capacities, as conductor of his own "Pupazetti," [five pieces for marionettes], which are new here, and his "Italia," which has become a fairly standard item in the orchestra's repertoire. He will also be piano soloist in an arrangement he has made of Isaac Albeniz' "Rhapsodie Espagnole," another novelty. For Mr. Stock's section of the entertainment, works by the two Schumanns, Georg and Robert, are promised, the "Liebesfrühling" overture and the B Flat Symphony, also still another new piece. It is the suite arranged from Manuel Di Falla's ballet, "The Three Cornered Hat."

Maria Jeritza, who has been helping to make operatic history in New York for two seasons, will make her first Chicago appearance at the Auditorium this afternoon. Continuous comment from that center of art indicates that she rates among the physical and vocal splendors of the time. She will be heard in arias by Gluck and Ponchielli, also in songs of Germany, France, and the United States.

Other Items of the Week.

Other news of the week's music deals with the appearance of the London String quartet at the Blackstone theater this afternoon and of the famous Paderewski at the Auditorium next Saturday afternoon. The London quartet, a leader in a lovely if none too popular branch of music, will play from the classics of Mozart and Beethoven, and a new work called "Biscay," which is composed by J. B. McEwen and dedicated to the organization.

Paderewski schedules a weighty program, one that includes Bach's Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue, two sonatas, Bethoven's Opus 111 and Schumann's Opus 11, a sizable group of Chopin, his own Nocturne, and one of the Liszt Hungarian Rhapsodies.

If your tastes turn you toward organ music, you can do no better than to go to Kimball hall on Tuesday night. Eric DeLamarter will play a program there of ancient and modern music. Or if you are at the same hall on Thursday night you will hear the Chicago Madrigal club sing Samuel Richard Gaines' setting of "Robin Goodfellow," the club's prize winning madrigal of the year, and plenty more good music.

Or, again, if you desire to hear Smetana's fine opera, "The Bartered Bride," the Bedrich Smetana Singing society will present it at the Studebaker this afternoon with Maranka Havelkova and Czerny-Schwartz in the leading parts, and Adolph Erst conducting.

* *

Margaret Farr, winner in the piano class of the Society of American Musicians' contest, will be the soloist at the Chicago Symphony orchestra "pop" on Thursday night. She will play the Saint-Saëns G minor concerto.

Beautifully Dressed as Paris Herself, Chicago Will Welcome Easter

The gowns—the frocks—the coats and capes and wraps and suits—all so perfectly entrancing that one can hardly say which holds the greatest charm. We know this is true of the Fashions you will see here, for they have been so carefully selected from those Parisian modes which have found highest favor in every women's style center. Let this Great Store be your personal style center—as well as your guide to practical economy. For Monday we direct especial attention to our showing of Coats and Suits.

Fifth Floor—Dearborn Street

Coats—Wraps—Perfection in Mode

We want women of especially critical taste to inspect this showing of coats and wraps and see for themselves what very smart garments a moderate sum will purchase. Armalaines, Veldynes, Arabellas, Brytonia, Luxone and Twilled Cords fashioned into the most attractive of spring styles. Belts appear on some coats, others are without. Roll and throw collars, Crepe and Peau de Cygne lined Circular capes with graceful, sweeping lines are embroidered and stitched in self colors. Black, navy, deer, tan, kit fox. Sizes for women and misses. Perfect tailoring and numerous points of finish that will suggest to you a price of at least $50. But this is a special pre-Easter showing of Coats, Capes and Wraps and so we feature them at.. $35

Suits of Undisputed Eminence in Style

Start where you will—with the Tricotines, or the fine Poiret Twills—with the box or blouse styles or the graceful silhouettes—every suit that meets your eye will hold your interest more than suits have ever done; for this year suits break far across the barrier of conservatism. Canton Crepe and Peau de Cygne linings are of splendid quality. Pin tucks vie with arrowhead embroidery and side-tie fastenings for precedence in trimmings. Such a marvelous collection to select from that it fairly bewilders. Black, navy and tan predominate. Sizes for women and misses. Values range to $55.00, but one price prevails on all for Monday. MAN

A Celt.

WHAT "BLACK CELTS" ARE. THE Alpines of France and Germany are sometimes called "Black Celts." In reality there is nothing Celtic about them; in fact, it would be difficult for men to be more different from true Celts and still be Caucasian. The reason why they are called "Black Celts" is one of racial history and race shame. But let us resolve definitely in our minds just what the names Celt and Alpine denote.

The Caucasian race is dived into three great divisions—Aryan, Alpine, and Semite. The first are mostly blonds, or at least fair skinned, while the second are dull brunettes, and the last deeply pigmented. There are many other differences equally well marked. Aryans have high vaulted skulls without exception, and are men from medium to tall stature. Alpines without exception have broad skulls, frequently flattened in the crown. Semites have long heads, and are invariably men of slight to stocky build.

The Aryan race is again divided into three parts—the Nordics, the Celts, and the Cromagnons. The first have the highest, narrowest skulls, the second have round craniums, while the third are disharmonic, and have long heads but broad faces.

A Celt has certain marks which brand him. Most pronounced of all is his diminutive nose, usually bulbous and often retrousse. His front upper incisor teeth are long crowned, while his eye teeth are short. His face is plane to concave, and he has a large, full occiput, or back to his head.

There are no "Black Celts" in history. The name has been coined within the last century. Celts invariably describe themselves as fair. In fact, the very name "Celt" is believed to imply the meaning "blue eyed." Historians describe this race in Roman times as being men of huge stature, with tawny red hair. Where pure blooded, they were a match for the Nordic Germans, Caesar says.

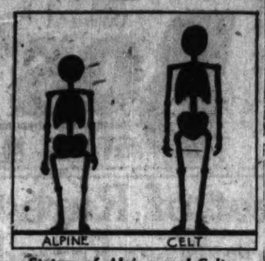
The Celtic race was once dominant over all of central Europe from the Black sea to Ireland. The Romans were Celts. So were most of the Greeks. Another tribe lived in Bohemia. Some of them called Gauls, invaded what is now France, and founded the Gallic confederacy that Caesar destroyed at Alesia.

Now France was not an uninhabited waste when the Gauls came in, about 3,000 years ago. The whole population then was largely what the peasantry is today, Alpine in the north and Mediterranean Semitic in the south. The Gallic conquerors probably never were numerous. The custom in those days was for a small, compact tribe to conquer a state for itself, and live in it like a semi-republic exercising the rule of an absolute monarchy. The bulk of the population had no vote and no voice. It was Alpine, and as such was thoroughly despised by the Celts.

Alpines fare poorly in war with Aryans. They are men of slow minds, phlegmatic in temperament, and peaceful in disposition. Such traits could only produce a disastrous political end in a society ruled by force. The Alpines were totally submerged in France until the French revolution.

In the last century French anthropologists have pointed out to their people the diverse races in that country. But the French do not like to call themselves Alpines. The name grates on their ears and rings too true of the round skulled Germans, Swiss, Austrians, and Italians, who are of exactly the same race. Alpine usually means a submerged race. A more polite term must be coined.

Celts and Alpines have certain surface resemblances. Both have rounded skulls, and both are of a stout build. Besides, there were no more race conscious Gauls in France who might protest. The Nordic Franks, Burgundians, and Normans had long since broken their power. Therefore the name "Black Celt" was created.



Stature of Alpines and Celts.

VAUDEVILLE WIT

Wheeler and Potter:

"I read the other day that the mayor of a town in Arizona had been misappropriating public money."

"Did they suspend him from office?"

"No, from a tree."

"I'll bet your wife doesn't believe more than half you tell her."

"I know it. That's why I tell her twice as much as I should."

"I've got to go out and look for an apartment."

"I congratulate you, old fellow. You're going to have a chance to learn something about the geography of our fair city."

"Jones is known as the glass blower."

"Why?"

"Always boasting of his wife's diamonds."

Ward and King:

"When one is annoyed by conversation in a theater, it is generally by the rich people in the boxes."

"Another proof that money talks."

"My deaf and dumb brother is up in Alaska."

"Is it cold up there?"

"He wrote me a letter saying it is so cold that when he tries to talk his finger nails chatter."

"Our colored washerwoman had a baby last week."

"I hadn't heard about it."

"She's keeping it dark."

Archer and Bedford:

"I can't make up my mind whether to marry for love or for money."

"Well, love is blind, but money at least talks."

"What book is that you were reading yesterday?"

"'Thirty-six Ways to Hold a Wife's Love.'"

"One way is enough if it works."

"Jones' baby is only 18 months old and can talk."

"Well, that is to be expected. The baby's father is an insurance agent and its mother is a woman."

GEOLOGY

Mountains of the United States.

AGE OF MOUNTAINS.

THE Rocky mountains stand in jagged grandeur. The Sierras are crowned with perpetual snow. Standing in the hot valley of California we see their blue and white peaks rear themselves high on the eastern skyline, beyond the rolling fields of yellow poppies and the gritty dust of the plains.

The Cascades mark a great crack in the earth's crust studded at intervals by huge volcanic cones—Shasta, Hood, Ranier, Crater lake, and many others. But all of these mountains are late comers. Only yesterday, in geology, the land where they stand was at sea level. In the Miocene age the Rockies were rolling hills, like the Urals of today. Perhaps as far in the future the Urals will be a great chain of peaks. Stranger things have happened many a time.

Man did not find his place in history until geology and astronomy came. Time has not much meaning unless we consider it from the viewpoint of the earth, nor has the earth unless we look at it in the light of planetary evolution.

The Appalachian ridges are older than all the western mountains put together, should their ages be added in a sum.

The Alleghenies are not great in appearance, but, as you journey, you notice how the strata all point slantingly upward from the soil. Along the road, by streams, in railroad cuts, these strange slanting ledges are seen. Farther on their slope changes. Thirty or forty miles away you notice that their direction is reversed. What does this mean?

Just one thing. That here are the foundation of mountains that, were they all standing, would be mightier edifices than the Himalayas.

Look at the texture of the rocks. Here are white boulders of conglomerate, once ancient seabeds. The highest peak in West Virginia is capped with great broken masses of conglomerate, as white as snow, made of pebbles as big as pigeons' eggs or larger. Or take the cliffs along the Potomac, fine water worn sandstone, as hard as flint. Near the city of Washington the original crust of the earth is near the surface. It is no unusual thing to pick up pebbles in the sandpits north of the city which are made of pink quartzite —red desert sandstone so heated and melted by volcanic fire that the separate grains are half fused together. Think of this in years, if you can.

Each little brook in the Appalachians is wearing down the rock. They have been doing it for countless ages. With the end of each winter there comes a pattering of fragments, and in the spring the sand is carried downward toward the sea. But each year the mountains rise a little. Twenty or thirty miles of rock have been removed from the summits of those peaks since they have been standing.

Does this seem old? Then remember that the present Appalachians stand on the foundations of a far older range, whose history was much the same, but which rose high enough to turn all our Atlantic coast into a desert.

The former mountains now exist only in Nova Scotia. But is this old? By no means. The Appalachian disturbances happened only a few days ago compared with a great Laurentian range that once ran from Lake Superior to Newfoundland. And what was the earth like then?

We must believe it. The earth in the Huronian age was extensively glaciated. Apparently the temperature of America has not changed markedly since life appeared on the world.

Scientists find it hard to measure such periods in years. The gaps are too vast, and our unit is too tiny. We can only tell of it in terms of life.

From a protozoan to a man is a long step. Yet something between two-third and three-quarters of this step was taken when the Cambrian age opened at least sixty million years ago. The time since the Cambrian age has been more incident in the passage of time since the continents took their present shape.

St. Jacob's Oil stops any pain, so when your back is sore and lame, or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest St. Jacob's Oil at any drug store, pour a little in your hand, and rub it right on your aching back and by the time you count fifty the soreness and lameness are gone.
Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless, and doesn't burn the skin.

It is being on the job all the time that keeps an apartment hotel running smoothly—I live here. And thereby I know that service is maintained at the same high standard that any business man insists on in his own organization.

It is a particular pleasure, therefore, to show business and professional men over the Rogers Park—for they invariably appreciate the many perfections of service found here.

Come to dinner today, or any other day, ask for me, personally—and I will gladly take you over the house.

Typical apartments and rooms in Windermere-East are now being shown by appointment

A Foretaste

for those who appreciate fine living

Windermere-East will be the home for those who appreciate the full possibilities of living. Matching the completeness of Windermere service, will be the sincere hospitality with which it is rendered. Rivaling the charm of interior appointment, will be the natural beauty of the whole environment. Contrasting with the freedom from a city's noise and annoyance, will be the swift ease with which the city may be reached by convenient train transportation.

Many of these advantages you may see today. There are typical apartments, suites and single rooms now ready for inspection, in which prospective guests may see not only the furniture, but also the linens, dishes, silver and glassware which will be used throughout the completed structures. A visit will, of course, show the advantages of the Windermere location, with the 600 acres of Jackson Park stretching south from the very doors of the hotel, and Lake Michigan in full view little more than a block away.

And we can explain in full the many innovations of Windermere service—the opportunities of living, with your own cuisine, as privately as in your own home, or with the full facilities of two hotels at your command—the ease with which a single dish or a dinner may be served in your apartment from the Windermere kitchens, the fine cuisine which will be found in the Windermere dining room and restaurant.

Windermere-East offers ideal accommodations for the guest of a day or a lifetime—two to five room apartments, with or without kitchens or kitchenettes—hotel rooms and suites for your guests or ours—the billiard room—ball room—lounges—and the Windermere Food Shop, comparable to the finest shops of Michigan Avenue.

Appointments Arranged at Windermere-West

Reservations and leases for Windermere-East are being written now, effective May 1st. In order that prospective guests may have the leisure to make a careful inspection with competent guidance, we request that arrangements be made by calling first at the office of the Windermere-West, on 56th Street. You are also invited to investigate accommodations at Windermere-West, on the European or American plan.

SWITZERLAND

The Republic of Play.

Switzerland's love of play and her people's joy in life inspire every visitor.

The peace of the world rests on her snow-capped mountains. Over her colorful valleys and about her jeweled lakes—serene beauty. No other country in the world, so small in area, offers such contrast of awe-inspiring grandeur and appealing loveliness. To these eternal attractions Switzerland adds most modern facilities for travel by rail, steamboat or motor; splendid hotels and pensions, where the comfort and pleasure of guests is a fine art; an endless variety of sports, a picturesque peasantry, cities of intellectual and artistic renown and, above all, the natural hospitality of her people.

GENEVA, with its classical lake, ever attractive and interesting as a resting place, combines beauty, wealth and intellect and is a world-renowned university town. Excursions to Mt. Blanc.

LAUSANNE-OUCHY, chief point on the Simplon line, centrally located on Lake Geneva and facing the Savoy Alps, is the most convenient headquarters for excursions in all directions. All sports in perfection. An educational centre of repute.

CHAMONIX, in the Mont Blanc region, reached from Martigny on the international Simplon line, by one of the boldest and most picturesque mountain railways.

INTERLAKEN, the oldest and most celebrated climatic health resort and garden spot of the BERNESE OBERLAND—the focus point for all excursions in this wonderful region. Here the JUNGFRAU RAILWAY takes you up 13,750 feet to the "Top of The World." Far below and all about spreads a panorama of such inspiring grandeur and beauty that its memory must always remain a most treasured possession.

LUCERNE, the "Mecca" of all tourists—its loveliness proverbial, its variety of sports and amusements most interesting—the starting point for excursions in Central Switzerland.

Conveniently reached from ZURICH, the country's metropolis, are THE GRISONS. Its unique climate with powerful solar radiation, its excellent cures and opportunities for all sports, have made its St. Moritz, Davos, Arosa, Pontresina and Flims appealing as all year round resorts.

TARASP-VULPERA offers a marvellous alpine climate, while the variety and medicinal values of its waters are not approached by any European watering place.

And these are only a few of a hundred places the national beauty and unique charm of which bring Americans back, and back again, to Switzerland.

Plan to go to Switzerland this summer — the only country in Europe unchanged. No taxes. No excessive rates. No profiteering on tourists. The same cordial welcome—greater and better accommodations for all, whatever your purse. Rates $2.00 a day up including meals.

Write for our new portfolio of Switzerland—No. 7-N most attractive booklets descriptive of its wonderful scenery, cities, sports, life, beautifully illustrated. It is free.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A PERSONAL MESSAGE OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO ALL AMBITIOUS SALESMEN NOW EMPLOYED.

Ambitious men—to you I direct this advertisement at. When I say ambitious men I don't mean "hayseed" or "rah rah" real men—men fired with real ambition, who want real success in a big way—men who feel real success does not come like a whirlwind over night, but by steadily going forward is the right direction. The real ambitious man worships the Goddess Success as her he will himself some day. To gain her favor he will work day and night if necessary, suffer privations and offer many sacrifices. To this type of man I say we hope there are many of them as a[illegible] real success is awaiting them.

If you are one of the real ambitious type, you are now employed. Ambitious men are never idle. That your present occupation does not offer the possibilities that your definite aim in life demands is certain or you would not be reading this advertisement. Being an ambitious man is marking time in a position offering scant possibilities for the future. Not possibilities to make a change because of the uncertainty of any new business.

To you I have an unusual proposition to offer.

For 13 years I have watched the material progress of this business and the remarkable advancement made by many men in this business.

I therefore write you from the viewpoint of a man who from intimate contact knows exactly what the conditions are.

I know the business opportunity in this company from three definite angles.

In the first place, I understand it from the company's point of view. I know what the inside picture is and can vouch for the sincerity and fairness of the organization.

In the second place, I know what the men themselves think of it, which to you is more important.

And finally, I know the opportunity from my own personal experience, which is best of all.

Now let me tell you seriously about this proposition. We are constantly adding to our real salesmen's organization. We believe that the best way to break into this business is to devote a few hours a night, two or three nights a week in your spare time until you have convinced yourself that the opportunity would warrant you making a permanent connection. We will give you the same co-operation that is given our permanent salesmen. You will not be required to canvass. You will be required to call upon one or two prospects a night, who have written us in response to our advertisements. If you sell one a week, your earnings for your spare time will be over $25 a week. Several of our part time men are now earning in excess of $50 per week.

In addition to having real ambition, you must have real selling instinct—ability to secure constructive selling points and express them effectively—in the way that is possible only for a man of character and integrity.

You should have vision and believe in the wonderful growth of Chicago.

I have seen many men who possesses these qualifications join this organization in making it possible for the first time of Chicagoans to own their own home, and advance to important and lucrative positions. I have seen this make that progress in short periods of time.

These men are here in this organization now. You can meet them personally. They will tell you themselves what their experience has been, they will tell you of the substantial incomes which their commissions have brought them in their spare time. Their success should challenge your interest.

You are primarily interested, and rightly so, in your own success.

There is no question about the largeness and genuineness of this opportunity. It is open to every person in Chicago, every one must have a home to live in. It is wholly a question of the valuation you place upon yourself. This I want to say very earnestly to you: I feel sure

12 FLAT BARGAIN
FOR SALE BY OWNER,
$71,000
$15,000 Down
Will net purchaser, on all money he puts up,
29.66 PERCENT
EASY TERMS

$15,000 down and $58.57 additional the first year is all the money that need be paid by the purchaser on this property. Outside of that the rents accruing from the property will take care of all payments on notes and interest on same, and after the first year show a substantial net profit in addition thereto.

This 12 flat building is located at the southeast corner of Glenwood and North Shore-ave., in beautiful Rogers Park, near Loyola station of the C. M. St. P. & P. R. R. Clark-st. and Broadway surface lines. It is a modern brick and stone building, on a lot 145 ft. deep and 60 ft. wide, set back 15 ft. on North Shore-av. and 30 ft. on Glenwood, with beautiful shrubbery on same. There is room on the lot to build 12 additional apartments.

There are nine 5 room and three 6 room apartments. All have outside, light rooms; large tile floor bathrooms; outside iceboxes, south; paneled dining rooms, with beaded ceilings; built-in buffets; fine electric light fixtures. Building also has janitor apartment of three rooms, nicely finished, in basement.

Payments are so arranged that $17,140.43 would be paid out of rents received from property over a 5 year period, which in addition to the $58,857.57 to be paid during the first year (this includes the $15,000 paid at time of purchase) equals $32,500. This, when applied on the property during the first four years, leaves $38,500 falling due in 1927. It would be an easy matter to arrange for one $38,500 first mortgage at the end of four years on this property, which is worth considerably more than the $71,000 it is offered at. The rents received after the first four years would soon pay off the $38,500, leaving the property entirely clear.

To sum it all up, all the purchaser is required to pay on this property to secure a permanent investment and a very desirable piece of property is an excellent, well-built neighborhood, where property is enhancing in value, is $15,038.57. The return on the building will take care of everything as shown, leaving the purchaser a substantial profit.

Open for inspection every day and Monday between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m. Call on J. J. McGOVERN & SON, 1511 Sherman-av., at Birchwood-av., Evanston.

KENILWORTH-BY-THE-LAKE.

BUILDING SITES.
Kenilworth Beach, 75x160; another, 70x160, with wonderful trees; triangular lot that dominates Robsart-pl. and could easily be made a landscaped site of unusual charm and distinction. Ground 100x175 ft.; over wide sandy beach and full riparian rights, insuring privacy.
A 60x175 ft. corner, 2 blocks from depot, for only $90 a ft.; undoubtedly the very best buy in Kenilworth today. Towering forest trees; fine environment; convenient to schools, yet convenient to lake.
Home sites in Kenilworth are decidedly the best restricted of all North Shore property and discriminating people find most acceptable social and living conditions. There is no more desirable environment in which to bring up a refined American family.

HOUSES.
Just listed—never before advertised or offered for sale—one of the most attractive new homes in the village; 2½ blocks from lake; modern in every way; brick colonial with garage attached; grounds 100x175 ft.; owner and family are about to travel extensively and will sell furnishings and entire property as is. Well tasteful discrimination was used, no expense was spared to make this home attractive. Large living room and sun parlor, 4 master bedrooms, 2 baths; maid's room and bath; Newport boiler, oil burning; coal, 2 car garage. Will be shown on appointment and is worthy consideration of any one seeking a superior home.
Another rare opportunity; 8 room house in perfect condition, with detached heated garage, private drive and spacious ground so highly developed as to be a show place, widely admired. This property will probably be sold within a next few days, for it is well worth the price asked. Shown on appointment only.
Sheridan-rd. Kenilworth, open Sunday from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. Will meet either trains or electric cars on phone request. Telephone Kenilworth 227.

READ HOW THE NEW COLE SELLING PLAN CREATES BETTER USED CAR VALUES.

Equalizes prices between buyer and seller, giving you the car you want at the price you would like to pay.

Without this plan you are paying the waste in automobile merchandising—a penalty that amounts to from 10 to 25 per cent of the actual value of the car.

How often have you heard some of your friends boasting about the good "trade in" price they received for their old car?

Suppose you were in the market for that particular type of car?

Would you be willing to pay for his "good trade," or would you expect the dealer to lose the difference between the actual value of the car and that which he allowed your friend for it?

You, of course, know that the dealer must make a profit in order to remain in business.

Just what particular guide are you going to use in arriving at what that used car you are going to look at is actually worth?

Wouldn't it be better to buy your car on the new COLE SELLING PLAN?

As you know, we do not accept used cars in trade for our new ones. We do, however, accept used cars on consignment to be sold at their market value, for which the owner agrees to pay us a brokerage of ten per cent.

In other words, we have cars left with us for sale on which the owner has agreed with us that he will accept the market value for same, and you, we believe, are willing to pay the market value. Therefore we serve the best interests of both owner and buyer.

We have in stock at the present time the following cars:

BUICKS, CADILLACS, COLES, JORDANS, CHANDLERS, HUDSONS, NASHES, and many others.

Of course we may not at this time have the particular car in stock that you want, but if you will leave your specifications—phone or write them in—we will be glad to advise you when such a car is available.

Terms can be arranged as usual.

COLE MOTOR COMPANY, 2825 S. Michigan-av.

They do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "fixed up." "REBUILT" in the Bird-Sykes shop means actually dismembering such units as engine, transmission, rear axle, and other vital parts and completely rebuilding the same, using new parts where necessary.

Coach work, which includes removing body and fender dents, re-covering worn tops, repairing and fitting of curtains, also upholstery, etc., is accomplished by experts in our shops.

Every "Bird-Sykes" Rebuilt car is given a high grade paint job. Every "Rebuilt" car is thoroughly tested to meet our rigid standard and is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes. If anything turns up unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes Co. will make good without cost to purchaser.

7 Bargains AT THE Peerless FACTORY BRANCH.

PACKARD TOURING SERIES 3-35. This very late Packard Twin Six Touring Phaeton we do not believe you can distinguish from new. It is a car that cost the original purchaser over $7,000 but a short time ago. It has a custom made body, German silver headlamps, side lamps, radiator shell, etc. It is painted a very special color. The tires, which are all Cords, are practically new. Mechanically it will bear a most rigid examination. Surely do we have an opportunity to offering so fine a car at such a greatly reduced price. This is an exceptional opportunity for some lucky purchaser to get a fast, stylish, high grade motor car at a ridiculously low figure. Specially priced for this sale, $2,250.

CADILLAC 8 TYPE 59 SUBURBAN SEDAN. This is a 1921 Cadillac Suburban that we have just taken in trade on one of our new Peerless inclosed cars. Mechanically it is in better condition than any car of this type that we have ever had. There is much extra equipment, such as seat covers, bumper, excellent set of cord tires, etc. If you are contemplating the purchase of a high grade 7 passenger inclosed car this one, at the price, is truly an exceptional bargain. See it today. Price, $2,375.

MARMON 34 4 PASS. SPORT. We would like the opportunity of showing and demonstrating this car to parties interested in the purchase of a smart looking, high grade 4 passenger Sport Car. A car that has been privately owned and driven and has not seen the average use. Mechanically it is in perfect condition. The paint, which is a special shade of blue, is exceptionally fine. It is equipped with a set of Lovell-Mc Connell 6 cyl. 7 brand new spares, 6 wire wheels, seat covers, and much other extra equipment. With the opening of the touring season cars of this type are in great demand. This is the time to buy if you are going to want a car of this type. An automobile that is almost new at a price that you cannot afford to pass up. Priced for immediate disposal, $1,475.

PEERLESS SEDAN, 1922. This car has actually been run about 4,000 miles. It has been carefully tended in and is simply a new car to be delivered later. The paint, which is standard Peerless Blue, has not a mar or blemish on it. The tires do not look like they have been used. Mechanically it will carry our standard warranty. Cars like this are very scarce and the last one we had only remained in our stock for one day. Here is your opportunity to get a car that is less than a year old at a very substantial saving as compared with the price of a new one today. It will undoubtedly be sold to the first person who looks at it at our price of $2,500.

APPERSON SEDAN, 1922. We have just received this car from our Mechanical and Refinishing Department, and, from appearance and performance, you would think that it had just been taken out of the sales floor. It is refinished a beautiful Gun-Metal Gray. Mechanically it runs smoothly and quietly. Has an excellent set of tires, 5 in extra, and much other extra equipment. To duplicate it today it would cost you considerably over $4,000. Visualize, if you can, a 1922 7 passenger inclosed car that to duplicate you would have to spend almost three times the amount of money. Come in, prepared to act quickly if you would avail yourself of this bargain, because, at our price it will sell very, very quickly. Price, $1,500.

PACKARD TOURING SERIES 2-35. A high grade serviceable 7 passenger touring car that is ready to go out and perform satisfactorily for many thousands of miles. This car will serve you equally well whether it be touring or commercial work. Tires, paint and mechanical condition are way above the average. It has been privately owned and driven and well taken care of. It is being offered for this sale at $625.

PEERLESS TOURING MODEL 56. To the person who has limited himself to spend a small amount of money for a touring car, this car will carry a strong appeal. We have put a price on it that will sell it very quickly. It is very well equipped, looks well and runs good—in fact, we do not believe you can buy a more satisfactory car at anywhere near the price. It is a "buy it now" car that will be a constant drain on your purse for repairs. For today's sale, $300.

Realty Briefs

We've just received from Frederick Doyle, head of the advertising department of H. O. Stone & Co., one of the most elaborate and interesting booklets ever gotten out by a realty firm called "The Story of the House of Stone." Mr. Doyle spent two years gathering material for it from the Historical society, Art institute, libraries, etc. Dozens of photographs were taken, he says, for the guidance of the artists and literally months were spent on the engraving and printing.

That it has more than mere passing interest is evidenced by the fact that already a southside school teacher has asked one of the Stone managers for copies for use in classes. Mr. Doyle has been with H. O. Stone & Co. for the last few years; prior to that he was head of the advertising department of S. W. Straus & Co.

"The Ogden avenue widening has brought dead property in the Clark-Center district to life," comments William C. Heinemann & Co. "Sharp traders and keen investors have been among the recent active buyers in this section. Center street frontage which formerly found no market now sells on the $4 to $6 per square foot basis. Among the most recent sales are 2023-2029 Lane court, four old residences, for Nanny H. Gentry to Carl A. Carlson for $30,000 cash; southeast corner of Clark and Webster, for A. C. Thompson to Frederick Hicks for $125,000." Both sales were made by Heinemann & Co.

Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen will discuss "Health Problems" before the Cook County Real Estate board on Tuesday at 2 p. m. at its real estate market.

What has Spring to do with WANT ADS?

EVEN the oldest and the hardest of us feel our hearts strangely stirred at this season of the rebirth of the green Nature-World.

We have surrounded ourselves with a marvelous growth of towering stone and steel, and with every device to annihilate time and distance. We can foresee economic needs and we marshal forces to meet them. We can calculate, weigh and classify almost everything except this strange Call of Spring.

This Urge of Spring is a primitive thing. It dates back to our ancestors, who always lived close to the soil. This longing to be close to growing things, this land-love was as much the possession of Achilles as he stepped from the shores of Hellas into the Argive fleet as it is the possession of the highly civilized man who, in his comfortable club, can forget, for all practical purposes, that soil, dirt, the earth is necessary to his life. But he cannot forget that strange Spring-urge which he has inherited from the bronze-clad ancestors of his race.

What's the answer? It is this: you city-dwellers have forgotten the country—but it is calling you at this time of year. It is urging you back to its welcoming embrace. It is calling for your week end auto trips along pleasant miles of concrete through fertile farmlands or through the rolling Dune country. Fix up the car and go! If you haven't a car, buy one. A new one if you can afford it—a used one if you can't. A good used car is not beyond the means of any man who really wants a car.

People who want to buy and people who want to sell used cars get in touch with each other through Want Ads in the Automobile Columns of The Tribune, Chicago's greatest clearing house for those who want and those who have.

Turn to The Tribune's Want Ad Section now and start looking for the car you will drive this Spring!

REAL ESTATE NEWS

NEW BUILDING TO ROUND OUT TREE STUDIO GROUP

To Be Built Against Wall of Medinah Temple.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago's first and most attractive artists' colony, the Tree studio building on North State street, between Ohio and Ontario, at last has had the problem solved of what to do about the unsightly common brick wall of the Medinah temple, which frowns down on the charming courtyard. This, by the way, is one of the most flagrant case of "shirt front" architecture in Chicago, for the owners knew the temple's west wall fronted on a unique studio courtyard, and yet they gave scant heed to their neighbors.

ARTHUR WOLTERSDORF. [Gilbert, Sykes & Fowler Photo.]

Woltersdorf & Bernhard, architects, have designed a garden studio apartment building, shown in a nearby column, which partly hides the temple wall, at least to such an extent that it should no longer worry the studio tenants.

Rounds Out Studio Layout.

The new structure will round out the studio layout, now "U" shaped, and make it practically a four sided group of buildings. Work will start May 1, with Oct. 1 set for completion date. There'll be three studios in the new building.

The history of the Tree studios is interesting. Here it is, as told by Mr Woltersdorf:

"It was early in 1894, when on his way to Egypt, Judge Lambert Tree saw on Madison avenue, from 56th to 57th streets, in New York City, a building nearing completion with arcaded shops on the ground floor and artists' studios above. It had a distinctive character. It interested Judge Tree.

Studio Site Then a Lawn.

"In Chicago, the block on the east side of State, from Ohio to Ontario, belonging to Judge Tree, was a lawn. Always interested in the artistic advancement of Chicago, the judge resolved to build for the working artists of this city a home along the lines of the New York building. Accordingly he commissioned Parfitt Brothers to plan a like structure for his State street property—and left for Egypt.

"On his return from the far east he procured the plans and when he arrived in Chicago ordered Hill & Woltersdorf to carry out this work. The building was completed in 1895.

"On the east half of the block stood the Tree homestead, a red sandstone residence, which was razed in 1912, less than a year after the judge's death. It was perhaps the finest example of Romanesque residential architecture in Chicago. It was designed by Peabody & Stearns, Boston architects.

Builds Ohio Street Annex.

"With the disappearance of this landmark came the building of Medinah temple on the site. About the same time, 1912, the Ohio street annex to the Tree studios, planned during the judge's lifetime, was built. [illegible] & Woltersdorf [illegible]

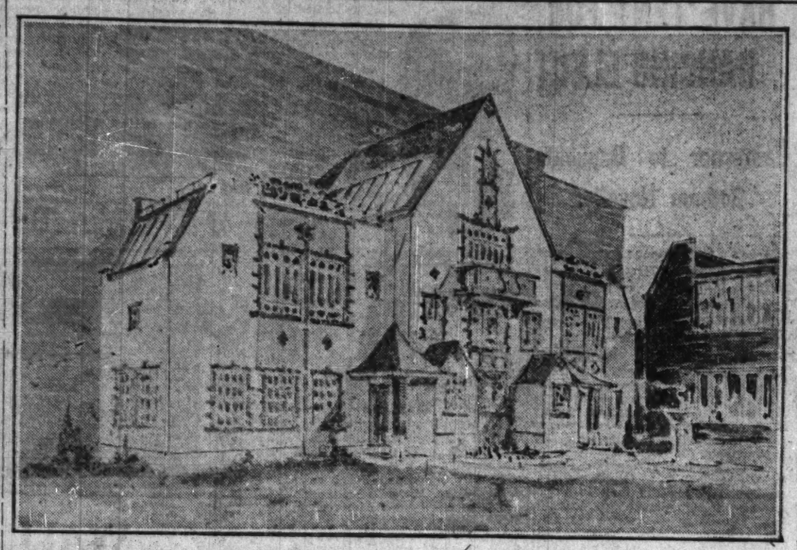
[illegible]13 the Tree estate decided to inclose the court and the Ontario street annex was erected from plans by the same architects. Then with the Medinah wall as a barrier on the east the studio court, with its brick walks, fountain seats, podium, and lawn, was created.

Follows Howard G. Grey's Advice.

"In 1917, on the advice of Howard G. Grey, the shop fronts were brought out to the State street line, the depth of the seven stores reduced by half, and seven garden studios, first of this type, were built fronting on the court and separated from the shops by a corridor."

Mr. Woltersdorf was architect of this last change. Now his firm, Woltersdorf & Bernhard, have designed the new garden studio apartment building. Negotiations were under way about a year ago by the Shriners to acquire the studios as the site for an addition to the temple, but they were abandoned.

Addition to the Tree Studios



Above is the new garden studio apartments to be built up against the bleak common brick wall of Medinah temple by the Lambert Tree estate. They will face the studio garden, with its fountain and grass and brick walks. The building, designed by Woltersdorf & Bernhard, will be of common brick, colored with Virginia white stain with purple brick trim.

In the middle will be the de luxe studio of Chicago. There will be a reception room, dining room, and kitchen on the first floor; two bedrooms on the second, and on the third a huge studio, 30x22½, with a balcony overhanging the west wall. At each end of the building will be a studio, containing a reception hall, dining room and kitchenette, bedroom and bath, with a working studio on the floor above, 15½x33, with north skylight and canvas closet. All three studios are primarily for painters. The building will be fireproof. More is told in another column.

'OWN YOUR HOME' SHOW TO HONOR PAYNE'S MEMORY

The one hundredth anniversary of the writing of "Home, Sweet Home," will be commemorated this spring in London and Chicago. In this city the celebration will center about the "Own Your Home" exposition at the Coliseum for a week, starting next Saturday. There "John Howard Payne Day" will be observed on the opening of the exposition with a special program honoring the author of the immortal song.

The Payne homestead at East Hampton, N. Y., birthplace of the poet, has been adopted as the official emblem of the exposition. An elaborate musical program has been arranged, in which "Home, Sweet Home," played by band and orchestra and sung by a chorus of 200, will be featured. The story of Payne's life and the ideal of home ownership which inspired him to write Home, Sweet Home" will be told in addresses to be delivered at the Coliseum and to be broadcasted via radio.

In London the one hundredth anniversary of the first singing of "Home, Sweet Home" will be celebrated on May 8. The melody was sung in the second act of the opera, "The Maid of Milan." The music was composed by Sir Henry Bishop. The words were written by Payne during the spring of 1823, while he was in Paris.

GOSSARD CO. LEASES BUILDING TO REPLACE PATRIARCH OF FLATS

The H. W. Gossard Corset company is to be the lessee of the $500,000 six story building to replace the famous old Charlevoix-Marquette apartments, which, as announced last Friday, are to be torn down within a few weeks. The Gossard company is one of the largest makers of corsets and allied lines in the world.

It will use three or four floors for offices, designing rooms, salesrooms, and stockrooms. Its factories are located in various cities. The general offices are now located at 1026 South Michigan avenue.

The Gossard company has leased the new building from Joseph H. Defrees for twenty years at a gross rental said to be in excess of $1,500,000. Edwin J. Bowes Jr. & Co. negotiated the transaction. They were the sole brokers in the recent acquirement of the site of the American Furniture Mart.

Greenwood Avenue Flats Change Hands; $220,000

Leander J. Ibold bought from Henry E. Miller and others the twenty-one flats at 4720-26 Greenwood, 100x271, for $220,000. W. F. Hanlon represented the buyer and C. M. Prideaux of Newton B. Lauren & Co. the seller.

PLAN $200,000 BACHELOR HOTEL FOR WINTHROP AV

David H. Jackson, owner of the Clarendon Beach hotel, and William F. Hanlon, real estate operator, are having plans prepared by Architect David Sault Klafter for a $200,000 fireproof three story bachelor hotel, 100x75, to contain 150 rooms, at 4626-32 Winthrop avenue.

Olympia Fields' $1,000,000 Building Program to Move

The $1,000,000 building program of Olympia Fields Country club is going to go ahead unless construction costs make it prohibitive. This was announced last night by Albert Moore Saxe, architect, and chairman of a building committee, officially known as the Olympia construction committee, just appointed by the board of governors. The committee comprises Everett Brown, J. J. Pelley, J. M. Davis, W. E. Taylor, John W. Stevenson, and E. E. MacBride. The building program calls for an outlay of $650,000 for a fireproof group of buildings designed by George C. Nimmons & Co., and the balance of the million to be spent for ground improvements.

BELMONT AVENUE LEASE.

The National Wood Finishing company has leased from Michael Miller the two story building, 50x120, on a 75x125 lot at 2242 Belmont avenue, for seven years at a term rental of $35,050, through E. N. Duerlein & Co.

PETER FOOTE TO SUBDIVIDE MORE CALUMET ACRES

Part to Be Reserved for High Class Homes.

Henry Ford's quiet entry into Chicago's industrial world with a $6,000,000 plant at Hegewisch is still keeping subdividers busy with their flivvers tearing around the far south side looking for available acreage.

Peter Foote announced last night a combination of three big subdivisions, totaling about 130 acres, which he and his associates will put on the market at once.

Most of the recent subdivisions have been for the mechanic. Part of Mr. Foote's largest subdivision, his Forest Preserve addition, bounded by 110th, 112th, Avenue "O," and the state line, is to be for residences of the better sort, for superintendents and officials of the various big industries in the Calumet.

West Section for Flats.

All of the acreage east of Ewing avenue, which bisects the subdivision, which is bounded on the south by the forest preserve, is to be for this type of home. The west section of the 100 acres is for two flat and six flat buildings.

William J. Galligan, John McFarland, Eliza Everett, Fred C. Gurney, George C. McMurray, John E. Mahoney, and T. D. Smitzdorf are associated with Mr. Foote.

Part of this 100 acre tract, approximately thirty acres, between "F" and "O" avenues, fronting north on 110th, is Coroner Oscar Wolff's "East Side Manor."

Zoning Affects Plans.

Another Peter Foote subdivision to be put on the market at once is the thirty acres between 106th and 108th, Indiana state line and the South Chicago and Southern railroad title to which was taken by Charles F. Burke from the T. Francis Murphy company, at $51,000. Mr. Murphy bought it about a year ago for $40,000 and intended using it for a gravel and sand pit. Zoning put in a residential classification, so it was decided to subdivide.

Probably the most far reaching improvement in this district is the $2,000,000 low level intercepting sewer now under construction. Engineers expect to complete that part affecting the new subdivisions of Mr. Foote by July 1, thereby removing the only obstacle in the way of immediate development.

Some of Mr. Foote's associates expect to start work on fifteen two flat buildings at once. Later residences and more flats will be built.

Buys Adelphi Theater at Clark-Estes for $191,000

The Adelphi block at the southwest corner of Clark and Estes, 100x202, was bought by Charles Levy from B. H. Perbohner for $191,000, subject to $122,500. It contains the Adelphi theater, stores and bowling alleys. Moses Levitan was attorney for buyer.

Beg Your Pardon

The name of W. C. Bennett, advisory construction engineer, who did the preliminary engineering studies, project computations and layout analysis on the Burnham building project at the northwest corner of La Salle and Randolph, was unintentionally omitted recently when details of the project were first made public.

George W. Stewart is the owner of the nine story Stewart-Ashby building pictured in this department last Sunday. The architects inform us that W. A. Price, whom they stated was the owner, is Mr. Stewart's representative.

Attorney Frank T. Murray handled the legal details on behalf of Mrs. Josephine B. Gwynne, in the ninety-nine year lease of her property at Broadway and Halsted, reported in this department yesterday. His name, as supplied by Baird & Warner, was unintentionally omitted.

Alex Friend & Co., agents for this property, also announce that they have closed a term lease with the John Baumgarth company, advertising specialists, who were forced from their former location by the Ogden avenue extension, for the two upper floors in the Machinery Exchange building at an annual rental of $15,000.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

FEARS SHORTAGE OF LABOR WILL SLOW UP BOOM

Moore Urges Training of Skilled Builders.

WILLIAM J. MOORE.

Labor shortage in the building trades will materially handicap construction work in many cities this spring, warns William J. Moore, president of the American Bond and Mortgage company, who has completed a study of factors which will affect the building boom this year. While there'll probably be difficulties in connection with deliveries of materials, especially to those who place last minute orders, the most important problem which the construction industry has to face is that of labor, declares Mr. Moore.

"Every present indication points to a demand for skilled labor in the building trades exceeding the available supply very soon after the year's work really gets 'under way,'" says Mr. Moore. "Even now, when a large proportion of workers in the construction field are usually unemployed, a number of cities report a shortage of building labor. This situation must inevitably grow worse as the work gets into full swing.

Record Pace to Continue.

"While this has been an unusually open winter and construction work has been continued in many sections of the country, the large volume of activity now actually in progress is a good indication that the record pace of 1922 will be continued at least well into the current year.

"These conditions, and worse, will exist as long as construction work continues at anywhere near the degree of activity of the last year. Remedies must be planned and carried out now to meet this situation.

"More trained workers in the building trades are needed, and proper provision must be made now for training those who will be needed in the next few years. We must not have an oversupply of labor, but we must have enough. A constructive program along these lines to take the place of the measures in the proposed Lockwood legislation should be offered.

Urges Thorough Study.

"Unreasonable limitation of the number of workers available does more harm to the workers and the unions than to anybody else. A shortage of men in any one trade means unemployment for a large number of men in the other trades because the work is held up. A thorough study should be made of the labor situation from every aspect and a program adopted and union regulations revised to the end of keeping the labor supply properly balanced.

"Training is of first importance. The New York state department of labor reports that employes are leaving the factories and going into the building trades. These new workers must not bring lower standards to the industry. The plan for training apprentices developed by the New York building congress is an important step in the right direction and should receive the active support of all concerned with the construction industry."

South Side Milliners Buy Building on Walton Place

The Bennett company, retail milliners, now at 77 East 7th street, has bought the three apartment building at 108 East Walton place, 30x104, from Rhea Newman for $50,000. The seller, by the way, bought this property in December for $35,000. The Bennett company will remodel and move to the north side on May 1. Neil J. Ruppert of the Ruppert Realty company represented both parties.

LOAN ON K. OF C. BUILDING.

Draper and Kramer have negotiated a $145,000 loan at 6 per cent on the Knights of Columbus building at Cottage Grove and 62d. It is bought by Robert H. Langston, A. Stutz and C. A. Bachman represented the K. of C. in the sale and C. C. Fox the buyer.

Newest Lake Shore Hotel—$6,000,000 Belmont

Here is Chicago's newest hotel, the $6,000,000 Belmont, told about in Thursday's real estate department, to be erected at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Belmont avenue from plans by Fugard & Knapp, acting with Warren & Wetmore of New York City, by the Belmont Hotel company, of which Hugh McLennan is president. S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a $3,750,000 loan. All sides of the hotel will be of the same material, pressed brick with Bedford stone and terra cotta trim. There will be 693 rooms, some of which will be arranged for housekeeping. The hotel will front 245 feet on Sheridan and 175 feet on Belmont.

WORK TO START AT ONCE ON NEW 'L' EXTENSION

Douglas Park Branch to Reach 68th Ave.

Work is to start at once on the surface extension of the Douglas park branch of the Metropolitan elevated from Lombard avenue [62d avenue], three-quarters of a mile westward through Berwyn to Oak Park avenue [68th avenue], according to a statement made last night by B. J. Fallon, general manager of the Metropolitan West Side Elevated Railway company.

Orders already have been placed for the lumber with which to build the stations and there is a strong probability that actual construction will start tomorrow morning.

Last Extension in 1915.

When it is remembered that the last "L" extension was in 1915 when tracks were opened through Cicero, the significance of the announcement that the Berwyn extension is at last to get under way is apparent.

As quite a portion of Berwyn is still in the subdivision stage, the benefit to the big real estate operators along the line can be seen. At present there are four major realty concerns in the district, the largest being Walter G. McIntosh & Co. This firm has subdivisions aggregating 190 acres. The other three, Cermak & Novotny, Millard State bank, and James Ladas & Co., have a total of 163 acres in subdivisions.

Stations are planned for Ridgeland and the terminus, Oak Park avenue, with one at Lombard, the present terminus, of course. Later on it is understood a station will be built at East avenue when passenger traffic warrants it. The right of way is wide enough for four tracks eventually, though at present there'll be only two.

Of course it is generally known that the Douglas park branch will not stop permanently at Oak Park avenue. It is headed for the new Chicago Zoological garden on the other side of the Des Plaines river, which, of course, will be a great attraction for all Chicagoans and the Douglas park branch will be the quickest way of reaching it for the motorless family.

GOLD COAST TO HAVE 'TENT' FOR DANCING ELECT

Easterner to Duplicate Gotham Novelty.

Here's a story which'll vitally interest you only if you [referring in this instance to the male sex] have evening clothes, have a bank roll which will stand for coffee at 50 cents per cup, food at proportionate costs and tips to waiters of $2 and upwards, mostly upwards, and lastly and most important of all, if you're in the social register. Otherwise your interest in this item of news will be that merely of an outsider who might be anxious to get in but who'll be politely but firmly kept outside.

All of the above refers to the quiet entry into Chicago of the tall, suave, immaculately tailored, monocled [he only uses it for reading] Jack F. Lenigan, famous as the owner of New York's famous "Tent" at Broadway and 52d, who intends to give Chicago a duplicate "Tent" on the Gold Coast.

Similar to Gotham "Tent."

Mr. Lenigan has just closed a ten years' lease with Seymour Marks, Max Grossman, and Vincent Marzano, owners of the new State-Oak building, for 7,000 square feet of space on the second floor, at $21,000 a year, Mr. Marks being sole broker.

Here, only a block from the Drake, and practically in the heart of the Gold Coast, Mr. Lenigan will open his "Tent." It'll be sllimar to his Gotham "Tent." The dancing floor will have for a ceiling a brilliant red and orange awning cloth, giving it the effect of a tent. Around the outside will be smaller tents with three rows of tables. There'll be balloons floating about, lanterns, and other novelties to give the place a carnival effect.

Must Wear Evening Clothes.

The capacity, and that means when the place is packed, will be only 300, and every one must be in evening clothes. More than that, there's going to be a doorman who will be as familiar with those who are socially entitled to enter as a society editor. He'll pass on all who seek admission.

Dancing will begin about 10:30 p. m. and last till, well, till the dancers want to go home, according to Mr. Lenigan. "The Tent" will be open only six days a week—no Sunday dancing is planned.

Austin Apartments to Be Sold on Co-operative Plan

The thirty apartments at the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Pine avenue were sold by Oscar F. Johnson and others to the Marquette Apartment Building corporation for a reported $237,000, subject to a bond issue of $165,000, made by Leight, Holzer & Co. A. L. Riemenschneider of the General Realty company negotiated the sale. The buying corporation will sell apartments to individual owners on the cooperative plan.

BLOW FROM DOOR FATAL.

Injuries he received last August when he was struck by a door in a Chicago and Northwestern train proved fatal to Claude Smith, 57 years old, of Maywood, yesterday at St. Luke's hospital.

No matter whether the price of coal goes up or down, here is a principle of house construction that cuts coal bills one-third, year after year. Same saving if you burn oil.

A Sure Way to Cut Coal Bills One-Third Every Year

What Flaxlinum Is

FLAXLINUM is a felted material made of durable, chemically-purified flax fibre. When built into the walls and roof of a house it seals the interior against outside temperature changes.

For walls it is made ½-inch thick with flanged edges to permit it to fit snugly between the studding. For roofs, sheets 1 inch in thickness are recommended. In applying FLAXLINUM no special construction is necessary. It will last as long as any house built. It will not crack, break or "sift down."

One-half inch of FLAXLINUM is equivalent in heat and cold resistance to 2½ inches of wood, eight inches of brick and mortar, or 13 inches of concrete.

THE coal bill is the biggest single item in operating the home. Cutting it one-third is surely worth looking into before you build.

There is nothing mysterious or complicated in the way FLAXLINUM cuts down coal bills. It simply keeps the cold out of the house and holds in the heat. For twelve years FLAXLINUM has been used in the coldest part of the country, and home owners report savings of from 30% to 40% in their coal bills. This saving pays for the FLAXLINUM in a few years.

But that is only half the story. FLAXLINUM insures the utmost of comfort in all seasons of the year. In summer it keeps out the excessive heat, just as in winter it keeps out the cold.

FLAXLINUM, built into the walls and roof of your home, applies the principle on which the best household refrigerators and railroad refrigerator cars are built. It "insulates" the house against outside temperature, thus insuring comfort and fuel economy.

Come in and get all the facts about FLAXLINUM before you build. If it isn't convenient to come, send for booklet, showing sample of FLAXLINUM and giving complete information.

Scientists say the glands explain this strange condition

Only by causing the glands to return to their normal state can tooth decay be checked

How you can test your own glands

A CURIOUS condition exists today. Thousands and thousands of people brush their teeth regularly—keep them white and apparently clean—yet suffer as much as ever from decay.

Now eminent scientists have proved that healthy teeth depend on how well the glands of the mouth are functioning.

The real enemies of the teeth are tasteless, invisible acids formed by food fermenting in the mouth. Even if you brush your teeth several times a day, tiny food particles remain. In the warmth of the mouth these ferment and turn to acids. It is these acids—forming constantly in your mouth—which cause 90% of all tooth decay.

Physicians now use a new instrument—the sialometer—for discovering whether the mouth glands are functioning properly.

Diagram showing location of mouth glands.
1—the parotid,
2—the submaxillary,
3—the sublingual.
Identical glands are located on the right side of the face.

The destructive acids must be washed away as fast as they form

You cannot feel these acids with your tongue. They cannot be kept back by brushing alone.

Like the mist on the windshield the acids on your teeth are constantly forming. Only your glands can keep them washed away.

Nature has provided six tiny glands in the mouth for fighting these acids. When working normally they pour out nearly a half a gallon of fluid every day. They keep the mouth and teeth flushed with an alkaline bath that neutralizes and washes away the acids as fast as they form.

If the glands of the mouth functioned properly there would be no tooth decay. But experiments show that unquestionably the glands of civilized man are not functioning properly. They are slowing down.

Chewing stimulates the glands. The sialometer shown above teaches us that when we chew, the glands are twenty times as active as when the jaws are at rest.

That is why savages who chew rough, raw foods almost never suffer from tooth decay. That is why civilized people who live on soft, cooked foods swallowed with little chewing are in 98 cases out of 100 afflicted with tooth decay.

Today the salivary glands must be encouraged to work naturally

Pebeco Tooth Paste was prepared to meet this very condition. It is a dentifrice which, in addition to cleaning and polishing as other tooth pastes do, actually encourages the glands to flow more freely. It causes the glands to secrete the normal amount of saliva nature intended them to send forth. Thus your teeth are kept free from destructive acids.

Pebeco is neither acid nor alkaline. It is neutral—as a tooth paste should be. It contains no harsh abrasive to injure the enamel or the gums. Take home a tube tonight and notice how thoroughly clean your mouth feels after its use. 50c at all druggists. Manufactured only by Lehn & Fink, Inc.

Pyorrhea Strikes Four—
Misses Only One

When the gums bleed, be on guard

All too few are immune to Pyorrhea.

The odds are overwhelmingly in its favor.

Dental records show that four persons out of every five past forty, and thousands younger, contract it.

Tender, bleeding gums are the danger signal.

When Nature's kindly warning is unheeded, the gums recede, the loosened teeth drop out or must be extracted, pus-pockets form at their roots, and the poison in them floods the system to breed neuritis, rheumatism and other diseases.

After you have gone to your dentist for tooth and mouth inspection, brush your teeth, twice daily at least, with Forhan's For the Gums. It is an efficacious, healing dentifrice, the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S.

Forhan's For the Gums, if used consistently and used in time, will prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress. It will keep your teeth white and clean, your gums firm and healthy.

Buy a tube of Forhan's For the Gums today. Brush your teeth regularly with it. The foremost dentists use and recommend it. It is time-tested, beneficial, and pleasant to the taste. At all druggists, 35c and 60c.

Blue Ribbon Fiction

The Revolver Made the Weasel Emperor of the Castaways for Eleven Weeks; Among His Subjects was the Beautiful Young Senorita He Coveted.

DOWN there in the turquoise and gold of the South seas, a solitary cocoa-palm, the last of an overthrown group, rears its plumed helmet majestically into space. Around its upper stem and directly beneath its fringe of foliage is a stout wooden platform, bronzed by storm and warped by the incessant buffeting of trade winds. It stands there on the lonely coral island of Tapaai, like a sentinel forever watching the weird, uncertain moods of the Pacific.

When ships pass—and there are dozens now to one of former years—this vivid landmark with its uncouth wooden ruff excites keen speculation. The passengers themselves are mostly eager venturers lured from half way round the world by the present vogue of the South sea romance bubble. With the rabid eye of the bubble chaser, therefore, they read only romance in the palm tree's silhouette that reaches upward into the blue enameled dome of sky and downward into the shimmering glaucous mirror of the lagoon. They refer to it glibly as "the Emperor's Tree," "the Tzar's Tower," "the Lookout de Luxe of that king of castaways—Nicholas Vardog."

But aside from this meager data, the Palm remains a mystery. Few know it conceals a secret, deep in the inner ridge of its shackle. A secret stark and grim which has to do with a huddle of bones and an empty revolver red with rust.

Since truth is stranger than fiction, this tale is more than strange. It is unusual. And I, as survivor of the S. S. Valiant—now resting on the globigerina ooze of the sea bottom—and as one time liegeman of the aforesaid emperor of the Palm, claim the privilege of narration—and with it your indulgence.

For it begins with a tropical morning at sea in early April. The trade winds sang in the funnel stays. The sky was blue crystal. The sea a gorgeous sapphire. There was an intermittent pflit-pflitter of flying fish about the bows. Islands green as a tourmaline and edged with pink-white coral sand swam upon our vision through air that flashed the electric blues and greens of whirring dragon flies. And through it all, steadily and ponderously, across the endless plane of the Pacific, the Valiant ploughed her way.

That was at eight bells noon. My fellow passengers, en route to San Francisco, were languidly sprawled on deck chairs, reading, chatting, card playing. Only one was promenading, and that one was Maraquita Farno. But then she was always flitting about, was Maraquita. Extremely young and extremely vivacious, she made me think of twinkling ballets, of fairy music, and of soft moonlit nights, velvet shadowed. Perhaps I was a little mad about her without knowing it. For she had that dark opalescent patrician beauty of old Madrid that makes the dusky Tahitian belle, in spite of passion's song, look like the common woods variety of crow.

UNCONSCIOUSLY my eyes followed her, vaguely wondering at the whereabouts of her chaperon. And then my attention was sidetracked. On the meager afterdeck of the crowded second class—which is really steerage in Pacific liners—I was conscious of another pair of eyes gazing up steadily at Maraquita Farno. Round, greedy eyes with hairless lids that stared from the peaked pock marked face of a small scrubby deck lounger. My gorge rose like backwater in a drain.

"Who is that scum?" I asked my friend, Billie Brangwyn, the chap who shared my stateroom.

"Hanged if I know!" came the blurt of indignation. "But I'll soon find out. What'v the matter with going down and putting a dent in his brass front!"

But there was no need of it. For even as we threw an impulsive leg over the rail his nemesis appeared in a bit of slapstick comedy. A gross, clapper tongued woman with bobbed and hennaed hair and a honey colored sweater burst through the crowd, caught him by the nape, and cuffed him soundly. Not only did the offender whine for mercy but he broke away and shinned up a post to the very rail we rode, where he sat and wiped his tears on his sleeve.

"Aw—I wisht to hell I had a gun!" he whimpered; "I wisht to hell!"

It is quite impossible to analyze the unusual and multiplex phases of this mongrel nature. He was an extremist, that much was apparent. Either gorgon or goop, bully or cur. And all the time, as he bunched his anatomy over the rail and curled his toes round the lower bar to preserve his balance, one could see him revolving in the poor contraption of his mind just what he had better do next. He was between the devil of desire and the deep sea of dread. And what he cried for was a gun.

A paradox, if ever there was one. And well might he thank that henna headed woman for keeping him out of the pen for life. Even with his clean shaven jaw and the decent linen suit he wore among the sweating tweed-clad crowd who cluttered the afterdeck, their mouths wide open, drinking the breeze—even then you could see him in imagination, boldly pilfering somebody's silver drawer or dodging the police or slinking down alleys with furtive, fear haunted eyes. He repulsed me so thoroughly that I became interested.

"Now whadda ye reckon she swatted me for?" he sniveled. "What the devil was I doin' to get her nanny that away! Ain't pretty gels made to look at? Ain't I human? I tell you that she and the rest of the world's dead wrong. They think they got me hitched and blindfold and wearin' a nose ring with a chain on, but they ain't. Dammit, they ain't! Jes' gimme a gun onct and I'll show 'em!"

It was altogether absurd, unbelievable. It made me smile even while I frowned. All around me, to starboard and to port, spread the wide panorama of blue sea, with here and there a jewel-green lagoon and lines of surf creaming over the white coral beaches. The little archipelago of Matalos—two islands boasting a dozen thatched huts on stilts and a common godown heaped with mother of pearl and sacks of vanilla beans, half a dozen reefs and islets, almost awash, and a single atoll, like a wreath of hibiscus flung on the water—lay clear to sight. And the girl, Maraquita Farno, her eyes like fireflies a-twinkle with mischief, stood watching us from the forward deck, in all the charm of elfin youth. Fifty fathoms to port a bamboo raft, with a mat of pandanus leaves for a sail and a silent soot-skinned native for navigator, rode the wake of the steamer fearlessly. The golden hush of the South Pacific was desecrated by nothing save the whine of the white-skin, that member of a superior race, and highly superior at that, according to those philosophers who rate the criminal aberrations as a form of genius.

ONE OUNCE OF LEAD

"Look at me, nice gel; look at me!"

"One li'l ounce of lead—what wouldn't it do?" he whined. "'Twud give ye what ye want and scatter what ye hate. Get me, bo? Wasn't I born an orphant and never had no chance? Thass why I got it in for things. Thass why I say a gun's the best pal ever. It makes ye a man!"

By this time the loungers on the promenade deck were assisting one another from their chairs preparatory to a general descent to the dining saloon. The girl Maraquita had already disappeared. And Billie Brangwyn was on his feet, impatient to be gone.

"Hist, Marko," he breathed down my collar, "clear the rail! Jolt him off into the arena. Here comes Henna-riette down below, and she's looking hungry!"

At the ominous approach of the family dictator, rotund, ruddy, and gliding across the after-deck like a gaily rigged galleon, propelled by a score of avid human sweeps, our new-found acquaintance took himself hastily from the rail. There was no pretense of ignorance regarding her errand, no question of disobedience to her wordless command. Over and down he went, only to be reprimanded for the wrinkled condition of his linens. Raising his puckered countenance to salute us in parting, he noticed telltale signs of amusement among us and suddenly rage overtook him. He began to wave his fists and to shake them at us in a spasm of fury.

"Laugh, damn ye!" he blubbered. "Laugh like the rest o' the worl'! I got it in fer ye! Aha-ha! Aha-ha-ha!"

A big jeweled hand gripped his scrawny shoulder and spun him face about. Meekly he wiped his tears on his sleeve and paddled aft.

AS I think back now on that foolish little episode it seems to me we paid far too dear for our chuckle. Can it be possible in this ultra-civilized first quarter of the twentieth century that a man be not permitted to stretch his risorius muscles and give subdued vent to the tickle in his trachea without falling under the shadow of the Grim Tyrant? Such inhumanity bespeaks the Inquisition, when many a man has died for less. And yet all things are probable on the South Seas—all things from soul salvation to cannibalism.

There was a third member in our group, one Major Frisbet, the moving picture magnate, who laughed more immoderately than the rest of us. He thought he could afford to. "Corking good stuff, I call it!" he guffawed, moving back from the rail to give his big paunch more room to shake in, "If the camera'd been handy we'd had a scream of an act."

"Who is that poor fish?" asked Billie Brangwyn, urging me slyly toward the companionway.

"I believe his leading lady calls him 'Nix'—very apropos, don't you think?" chortled Frisbet. "Much more fitting than 'Old Nick,' surely. His listed name is—let me see!" He plunged a fat hand in an inside pocket and whisked therefrom a tiny notebook which he opened and read. "His name is Vardog—Nicholas Vardog. Some label! Ha-ar, ha-a-ar!"

Later in the saloon below Frisbet told us more about him. We were sitting together at table and sipping mint juleps of our host's invention. He was a bald-browed, frog-bellied man who sported as many jewels as the khedive of Egypt, ate and drank like a Falstaff, and favored the religion of Tom Walker—that is, he regarded the devil as his chief sponsor, but figured on beating even him in the long run.

"You can't call him human, that Vardog. He's just a flea-bite on the face of Dame Nature! Ha-ar! Ha-a-ar!"

"You mean Dame Vardog," suggested Billie. "But how the deuce did you come to know him?"

"Through her, boy, through her! On the screen she's known as Dollie Varden. Can ye beat it, ha-ar, ha-a-ar! She's under contract with me for two years—and he's her valet. And believe me, when once I get 'em in Los Angeles they're goin' to work for their pay!" Frisbet's round fist struck the table with a bang that made the glasses shiver and slop. His bright little eyes blazed through puffs of fat. "That Nix is a ninny you can easy kick around when things go wrong. And by all the gods of war I'm going to do the kicking!"

"We believe you, major."

"Some day I'll back him up against the wall and say, 'I understand you're wanting a gun. 'One little ounce of lead,' I believe was the way you put it. And you cried like a puppy—real, honest to goodness tears—for the little ounce. Very well. I'm a man of generous spirit. Here is the ounce. I will give it to you. Will you have it in the heart or the head—which?'"

"He'll drop dead of fright, major!"

Frisbet rubbed his hands. "Let us hope so. A flea-bite is a superfluity. However, he may survive, and then I'll say, 'Ah, and so you have lost your pet desire? Very well, then. You are ten parts coward to one part crook. Take this gun. Look at me. I am your enemy because I make you work instead of steal. Now kill me, and when you have done that, kill her because she keeps you straight. And then go forth and kill all those who stand in your way. And then you'll be a man!"

"By Jove, that ought to cure him, major!"

"Kill or cure is my motto, gentlemen! Ha-a-ar, ha-a-a-ar!"

THIS was at eight bells noon, as previously mentioned.

At eight bells midnight—an hour which no bell struck—our proud ship, the S. S. Valiant, with nearly every soul aboard her, was humbly sleeping on the sea bottom a thousand fathoms down. Even today our realization of the disaster is dull, indefinite as an evil dream. The Valiant with half her starboard plates gored through by an uncharted reef, lay tilted to one side in a slaty green gloom that would never lift to the gold of the daylight. Four life boats at least, that no one had time to launch, lay crushed beneath her. Four others, dragged down in the suck of the foundering, were somewhere or other—only God and the devil of the deep knew where.

And there was I, by some amazing miracle, lying in the dark of an unknown shore to which I had evidently swum with the aid of scattered bits of drift. And beside me two others, a man and a woman, whose rescue was due to the superhuman strength bestowed upon me in that hour of desperate crisis. The woman was Baroness Dulcie, history unknown, and the man Tucker Dreed, a botanist from Idaho, remarkable only for a wispish whisker and a pair of green goggles, the horn frame of which was so firmly imbedded in the bridge of his nose and the cartilage behind his ears that it appeared a part of his anatomy, as if the Creator had built a scaffold while constructing his dome of thought.

These details I had previously observed on shipboard. But I had never spoken to either the man or the woman aside from a casual salutation. And I give you my word, though it shames me to do so, I could never have brought them in alive had I not believed that the two limp figures in my arms were my two best loved friends—by which I mean it would have been physically impossible for me to have reached and maintained that supreme state of desperate endeavor had I not believed my effort tremendously and selfishly worth while. Curiously enough, however, in spite of the overwhelming shock of my discovery the feeling persisted in me through all the blackness of chaos and night that Billie and Maraquita were alive and somewhere near me, wondering, as I was, where on earth or in the sea they had landed.

RAYMOND

Billie Brangwyn was a swimmer far stronger than I, and my convictions told me he would find the girl and make shore even if all others failed. He was so young, and powerful, so very much alive, and so very much in love. Why, then, shouldn't he win out! I was possessed of a mad desire to explore the beach. Yet was utterly exhausted when I touched ground and pulled my two survivors free of the surf; in fact, could scarcely muster strength to drag myself to a resting place on dry sand.

Where we might be it was impossible to guess. There were no important stations in this section of the South Pacific, only small clusters of reefs and atolls, with here and there an island of a mile or so in extent. According to the captain's chart which I had studied in the early evening, Tapaai was the name of this unimportant little archipelago. So far as I knew it was unknown and uninhabited. Steamers passed but rarely called, which argued the absence of cargo, therefore of white men.

Stretched upon the invisible sand, wet and weary, in the bogie dark of that terrible night, the three of us waited for the moonrise. We spoke not a word, though the woman sobbed occasionally. We were conscious only of the damp, cool scents of some unseen forest breathing on our faces and the frothy tide lapping at our feet. Otherwise we sensed nothing, remembered nothing until——

The pale golden crescent of the waning moon slid out through a rift in the clouds. And a strong, clean wind rushed before it, flapping our wet garments, chilling us to the bone, but infusing the elixir of strength in our veins.

And then it struck me, where are they?

I got up on my elbow and looked around. I saw an interminable stretch of pale, sandy beach, a solitary palm black in silhouette against the moon glow and reflected downward in still waters that sparkled like white wine. And deep in the background I noticed a tangle of brushwood and against it two ghostly figures.

"Bill—O, Bill!" I shrieked through chattering teeth, scrambling to my feet in the sand. "It's Brangwyn and the girl—as I'm alive!" I was actually shiveling with joy. Without a word to my late companions, I raced on shaking limbs down a stretch of damp, yielding sand, where the moonlight, lying first in loose streamers, broadened out into a flood of greenish silver wide and splendid as the sea.

"Alive! Alive! Alive!" we screamed together in chorus, flinging our arms about one another and kissing full upon the lips. My presentiments had been rigidly exact. Never had Billie's magnificent brawn, gleaming here and there through his tattered shirt, aroused such sentiment in my breast. Nor the airy fairy piquancy of Maraquita, clad in palest silk negligee enfolded in a bright, richly embroidered Spanish shawl with deep fringes, reminded me more whimsically of dancing nymphs and silver seafoam flecked with lapis-blue shadow. I was fairly intoxicated with joy.

AND yet, in view of my new-found faith in personal presentiment, I should have been prostrate with woe that these two young refugees, flushed with first love, had escaped real paradise in the spirit-world for the perils and pain of the castaway on Tapaai.

For with the last flare of moonlight that flooded our world with silver-white glory we saw something that roused our first misgivings. Across the swelling waters and headed toward us came speeding one of the lifeboats—only the devil of the deep knew from whence it had come. Seated within it were four men, Major Frisbet and three Kanakas of the liner's crew, all of them rowing for their lives at the point of a revolver.

And the fifth man—the one that held the revolver—was none other than Nicholas Vardog.

Of course the astounding thing was that the fellow had completely hoodwinked us. In the minds of each one of us, I believe, there was nothing at first but resentment toward an inferior who carries a joke too far. Vardog, as we knew him, was the typical blowhard and do-naught; a wastrel and a weakling whom one regards as hopelessly incurable and therefore sets aside as a nonentity. In vain our eyes assured us he carried a gun. Common sense overruled that fact with the argument that it was probably a piece of drift, a hoax, since weapons were scarcely procurable on a sinking ship. What we had failed to reckon on was the sudden bursting of irksome fetters—the heady breath of freedom to a life term prisoner, or to the ravening red, a taste of monarchical power.

The whole situation was ridiculous. I remember as I sat there staring out through the moonlight that I would feel now and again a little stratum of cold air which seemed to me to be the breath of the Grim Tyrant. That night of horror had gotten my nerve. I shivered as though my body were filled with electric wires. The Marquesans claim they can sense death. I sensed it—over and above the shimmering waters. The Black Buccaneers were riding the wave, were peering and leering from every shifty shadow.

"I'll teach the lazy hounds!" Vardog was yelping as the boat grated the shore. And his face under the moon was fighting cruel. "When I say speed 'er up—I mean speed 'er up! Hear that, Nigger?"

A sudden cloud enveloped the moon and out of the darkness spat a tongue of flame, the ear-splitting bark of a revolver, and the Kanaka known as Jodi, chief stoker of the Valiant, fell forward dead upon the sand. Only one hand could have fired the shot and instantly I had an uncanny feeling that we were all close to a peril far keener than shipwreck, a climax that had been slowly approaching us through the years we had lived. The Polynesians say that the first fiber shows the finished mat, and when Jodi dropped on the beach I felt that I had carried since my birth the shadow of the reign of terror just beginning on Tapaai.

Maraquita gave a cry like a wounded bird as Jodi fell, and following her cry a ghastly laugh came out of the darkness behind.

"Quick!" whispered Billie. "Help me to get her away! Help me to hide her! Tell me where to hide her!"

"My God, yes. Back in the brush!" I gasped as I stooped down in an effort to raise the girl to her feet.

The horror which had been creeping upon me since the coming of the boat took full possession of me then. I knew we must spirit away the girl if we would save her, and it meant a race with the moon. Vardog had heard her cry and would probably attempt to seek her out. As I stumbled up the beach, praying for continued darkness and dragging the girl by her trembling white arm, I suddenly stumbled over the body of the Kanaka and was so crazed at the proof of Vardog's deviltry that I scarcely understood the frantic orders that Brangwyn flung at me.

"Here's a break in the brush. Here!" he breathed. "Hurry! Push her in after me!"

Another bullet buzzed over our heads like a big death beetle, and I hardly needed the spur of Billie's frenzy to move me to action. I wanted to hide myself, too, but didn't dare. Never before had I felt the fear and the resultant shame that were on me at that moment. Billie managed to burrow into the thicket and trample out a space to hide her in. God alone knows how he did it—with the poisonous thorns tearing his flesh and the bougainvillæa vines crawling over his face like snakes—but he did. The girl slipped in after him and an instant later he was out again, bending the outer brush back to its natural place. The two of us then went down the beach a short way and flung ourselves flat on the sand. The moon was still submerged and we blessed the darkness as a cloak that hid us from the devil down below.

NOW I cannot tell with any degree of certainty just what happened in those few hours before dawn. I know that I searched out the baroness and brought her over to the spot where Maraquita had been. And I recall that I purposely fell against her so that her startled cry would tell Vardog where we were. It was the brute in me that acted. But I relied on the respect due her gray hairs, her stern and regal deportment.

The wind came up again and the tide that sweep down on Tapaai began pounding and crashing against the outer reef. Somehow they soothed us during those hours of waiting. A little while before the dawn, however, their noises ceased and I heard above the soughing of the wind something that made my spine prickle. I thought that some one was pacing the tinkling coral sand at the line of brushwood in the thick darkness impossible to penetrate, and my crazed brain pictured some one sneaking up and down, quietly listening for a movement in the thicket. That is what I felt, as I waited for those little yellow flakes of the dawn to flutter like butterflies out of the east. I knew that some one was prowling the beach and my imagination painted horrors unspeakable.

At last a thin yellow light came up over the sea rim and then I saw what my mind had sensed a while before—Vardog seemingly on the trail and sniffing out his prey. I saw again the contour of his face, pugnacious, brutal, and the stunted scrawny body which was possessed of a new strength like smoldering steel. Well might he be named Vardog the Terrible. His eyes in that dull yellow light were icicles glinting the venom of hate. His jaw was not the receding one we had seen on the ship. It was undershot now and his nostrils boldly flared to the scents of the forest. I read his thoughts like an open book. He was suspicious; he was crafty. His kingdom lay under his heel by right of the weapon in his belt. Seven living serfs and one dead one were his to command and to punish, to keep or to destroy. He could ill afford to risk mutiny, or to rouse to murderous rebellion six healthy males, the majority of whom were superior both in physical strength and in intelligence—and naturally then in the art of strategy. His primal thoughts therefore were compounded of suspicion and self-preservation.

For many minutes I lay stretched on the strand pretending sleep but watching warily his every move. I saw him pause awhile beneath the solitary coco palm, staring up with a flinty eye into its feathery crest. The new oiled mechanism of his mind was again as legible as a printed page. His first and keenest desire was a refuge, inaccessible to the enemy, whereon he could rest in safety either by day or night, an eyrie from which, like any other predatory creature, he could terrorize his victims into absolute submission. Verily, I thought, Vardog will have his day!

The sun was rising now, bright as a golden eagle. I noticed he turned to study the pieces of timber that had drifted from the wreck into the lagoon, and that he made a careful survey of the lifeboat. Very slowly his plans for the platform, his "lookout de luxe," formulated in his brain. And with a stride half panther, half cock-of-the-walk, he approached the sleeping Kanakas and kicked them awake.

"Go get me somethin' to eat!" he yapped. "And shake yer black stumps! Today yi're goin' to work till ye sweat blood."

A moment afterward he was making a round of the beach, stooping over each one of us as we lay, searching our pockets for whatever valuables they might contain. No one had a gun, but three of us had knives, watches and billfolds, all of which he promptly confiscated. The baroness wore a few fine rings and a pearl necklace. Major Frisbet had studs, scarfpin, rings, and cuff links, representing in all about twenty splendid jewels, and a money belt which swelled his central circumference a good ten inches. All this treasure went to fill the hollow coffers of the emperor of Tapaai. Something else also went into his pocket—a deadly trinket owned by Tucker Dreed, a penknife of prodigious dimensions, concealing a razor-edged blade in one end and a steel marline spike in the other. The thing impressed me strongly.

I "played possum" very poorly. My eyes stuck out like electric bulbs. Half a dozen times I started to speak out in protest. With a gasp or a snort I came near breaking the silence. Strange as it seems, I was consumed with fury, not so much toward Frisbet and the rest as toward myself. That I should calmly lie there and permit that miserable little runt, that blatant self-appointed little sovereign of the island's destinies, to pilfer the pockets of my fellow-sufferers!

And yet life was sweet, and I was young and bound by a dozen iron-girt oaths to keep the peace at any price for the sake of the girl Maraquita. Before the incalculable insolence of this swaggering bully, this highway thug who grinned with malicious enjoyment as he poked his gun in our faces, I dared not so much as exercise the power of a pinky finger. You'll say surely some one of us should have acted, that some two or three of us ought at least to have rushed him from behind and overpowered him for once and for all. That proves beyond question that you have never been a castaway on Tapaai or elsewhere, that you have never experienced the mental and physical slump that follows a battle with death. I felt the heat-waves of fury scorching, shriveling my pride, but I could scarcely stand upright from exhaustion. With Vardog it was different. He had saved himself in a boat propelled by others. He was free, independent, the exultant possessor not only of a gun but of the crowning prestige that he most desired. Who now was the weakling and the fool? Surely not Nicholas Vardog!

HE was tapping my head already with the cold steel muzzle.

"Where is she? Where's the gel?" he demanded hoarsely.

I shook my head, saying no word, but pointing weakly out to sea and covering my face with my hands. I heard him breathe heavily. Later he tramped off down the beach to the spot where Billie lay. After a bit he came back and stood over me.

"I think you're both liars!" he snarled, "and if I find ye are, I'm goin' to pump ye so full o' slugs ye'll slide to hell easy!"

I got up at that and shook myself. The water lapped the strand. The fresh new day was sparkling. But I saw it through red haze. I had no other wish in the world except to kill him. I could have strangled him with bare hands—probably would have attempted it if Billie's voice hadn't penetrated the mist and saved me from a foolhardy finish, a most ignoble end.

Already Vardog was striding up the beach toward the brushwood. Already his eyes were roving in a systematic search of the thicket. Triumphant searching—in the crystal glare of the fresh morning sun. We held our breath then, for once he stopped short so suddenly we thought he had heard that poor little fluttering heart in its cage of thorns. It was a tense and terrible moment. But immediately it passed and the two Kanakas broke through the trail further down, well laden with bananas, cocoanuts, breadfruit, and sweet water—which turned the emperor's trend of thought and our horror to relief.

Back to the lifeboat he went, a squat, grotesque little figure, his pockets bulging with loot like a mountain-mule's saddlebags. In the stern of the boat he seated himself and began to eat and drink. His face flushed in the waxing warmth. His eyes shone with subtle triumph. Cheeks stuffed with fruit, jaws wagging, head thrust out in the act of gulping, one saw him measuring with gluttonous content the sum of his power and wealth. Yesterday a slave; today a monarch. Such was his record. Life is a trickay thing at best. And to illustrate the truth of his utter transformation he barked a few words from his crammed gullet and pointed with dirty forefinger to the lagoon. Instantly the two Kanakas picked up their dead comrade and tossed him far out into the water. Almost instantly the ripples were lashed to a foam as the ominous blue of shark fins cut the surface.

It was midday and the sun was burning when I broke away from the construction gang that were building Vardog's eyrie, and moved down toward the spot where poor old Frisbet lay with his bald head bare to the blazing heat. One look at his face assured me he was harder hit than the rest of us, being racked with fever and unable to move. As I dragged his rotund bulk to the shade of a cottonwood grove I discovered his delirium.

"He's a flea-bite, that Nix!" he was muttering.

His eyes burned through me. I brought him water and he sucked it up in gurgled draughts. I tore a rag from his shirt, moistened it in sea water, and bound his head. He failed completely to realize his situation. His mind, ignoring the present, lived in the day and night preceding. With an eagerness unquenchable from long wondering at that cipher of yesterday and the gun that had made him a king, I listened to the sick man's babbling.

"By Gar, he plugged me one, that Nix! He plugged me——"

"Where?" I coaxed, "show me where!"

He shook his head, "Do' no! And I says, 'Women and children first!' I says, 'Women first!' And I pull my gun. Then he's gone, that Nix. Ten parts nothing he is——"

"Yes, yes. What then?" I urged.

He flung his burning hand upon me and plucked at my sleeve with thumb and forefinger:

"Funny—it's funny! He jumps on me, the pup. He jumps on me from behind. I am a generous man. I say to him—will you have it in the heart or the head? Ha-ar, Ha-a-a-ar! But he has the gun. And I say kill me—I am your enemy—all men are your enemies. I say kill—and then ye'll be a man. And by Gar, he plugged me one.

"And so I'm in the boat and I row—and I row—and I row. The muzzle's pushed in my back—and I row—and—row——" His voice trailed away to a mere wraith of sound.

So that was the secret of Vardog's supremacy. I rolled the major over in the sand and examined his back. By God, it was true! Again the red haze swam before my eyes, so I could scarcely examine the thirty-two calibre hole, glancing downward along the spinal column and into the lower left lung. But I saw enough to convince me that Major Frisbet's end was obviously near. He was breathing now with difficulty. The man was dying. I've said his religion was Tom Walker's—at least, such was his boast of yesterday. And now with broad clear vision I recognized in Nicholas Vardog the spirit of that evil one who had come to collect his claim. The heights to which Vardog had leaped in an hour were correspondingly equal to the depths to which Frisbet had fallen. Life is a whimsical giver, it seems. Prodigal—pinch-penny.

Through that long afternoon I never left him. He was mad with delirium, but the quality of his madness was gentle rather than vindictive. He wasted no strength in damning his slayer or cursing his fate. His voice to the last, echoing back from the vale of shadows, held in it a note of surprise, actually of wonder.

"He plugged me, that Nix!" was the burden of his swan-song.

And as I sat there under the cottonwoods in that furnace of tropical sand, as I watched the sick man, slipping breath by breath into eternity, the whole situation seemed to swell in my mind to gigantic proportions. That one pernicious bit of steel could make a hell on earth! It was wholly preposterous.

IN the name of creation, I meditated, what was the use of sapphire seas and coral sands, islands green as a tourmaline, moons of fairy light, and sweet-scented winds from some tropical Eden, while tragedy lurked in the air we breathed like poison that kills?

That scepter of Vardog's, that deadly six-shooter, was the flaming sword of our paradise. Only its effect was even worse since we could not escape it. Taking for granted its barrel had been filled in the beginning, I reckoned that half its chambers were now empty. The dying man, the dead man, and the wild shot in the thicket would account for three spent bullets. There might have been a grain of satisfaction in the thought that Vardog possessed only three others, that inasmuch as he was an inept marksman, dispatching his victims at very close range, those three remaining shots might not take effect. There might, I say, have been hope in this thought, if I hadn't made an important discovery. While ministering to Frisbet, in turning his body from time to time, two cartridge boxes labeled thirty-twos slipped from his pocket to the ground—and both had been emptied!

So you see the hopelessness of it all. Three months at least would pass before the little copra schooner Wind o' Heaven would poke her nose along that coast. Three months of hell! I laughed mockingly. It was a foretaste of the Inferno. If Frisbet and Jodi were murdered and gone; if that steerage overlord lay on his lookout high in the palm and picked off his victims according to his whim; if the lovely elfin señorita of old Spain was beating out her frail life in her thorny prison refuge, depending on her lover for the barest sustenance—if, indeed, it were all a myth, an old nurse's bogie tale, I wanted to waken quickly to find myself back again healthy and happy on the sunlit decks of the Valiant. I should never have blinked an eyelid, not even slightly, had I turned to see Nix Vardog sniveling with fear and wiping his tears on his sleeve.

The truth of the matter was, Vardog was actually there, but he was snickering now and wiping his gun where his tears had been.

"Now laff, will ye?" he jeered. "Laff and be damned to ye! I got him, didn't I? Sure I did. And now I got it in for you! Aha-ha-ha!"

By sundown we had made a grave for Frisbet in the sand and raised a wooden cross to mark the place. Then after a while Billie came and sat down and talked. During the afternoon he had inspected the island. But from no point could he see land or a sail. There was nothing but boiling sea, white with muddy splotches. Tapaai, he reckoned, was not more than three miles square. It had banana trees, cocoanuts, oranges, and breadfruit. There were plenty of fish in the inlet.

The boy was optimistic and had news. Vardog, he said, seeming fagged for sleep, had shinned the palm exactly as he had shinned the post on shipboard. Being extremely wary, he had fallen asleep on his eyrie with gun in hand. And now that he was disposed of the real excitement of the evening was to begin. Maraquita was to be freed until moonrise.

At that I shook off melancholy, and, elated, jumped to my feet. Here was the first hint of revolt, and I was in it, heart and soul. Tucker Dreed was in it and the baroness was in it. Concerted action was what we needed and what we must get. Though we realized the penalty of discovery, though we knew beyond shadow of doubt that Vardog would do all and more than he threatened, still we could not let the precious flame of the girl's life smother out in her jungle hole. There would always have to be risk. And by putting our heads together and preparing either a sly bit of strategy or a zipping sounding flareback that would take our tyrant off his feet, we could surely win out in the end and carry him back in chains to civilization and the courts of justice!

And yet—I know it's going to be hard to understand—at the end of ten long terrifying weeks we were still planning, still waiting. Ten weeks, mind you—seventy days, and each day a century! New moons became full moons and waned and died. And still we talked and dreamed of the master stroke that would bring us peace. The theory was perfect. It was the practice that got our nerve. For who was willing to make first move? Not Tucker Dreed with his pathetic whisker and his green goggles—he was far too timid a soul. Not the Kanakas—they were held in the gyves of terror. Not Billie Brangwyn nor myself, while the hysterical voices of Maraquita and the baroness pled with us through tears. We were dealing now with a devil drunk with blood, a madman both wary and playful as a jungle-beast is playful. And we suffered the tortures of inaction. Never did we relax in sleep without the fear we would never waken, nor waken without the fear we would never live till sunset. Night and day we carried the vision of a small hideous face peering over the edge of the lofty retreat like a gargoyle set high among feathery leafage on a tower.

When the sea talked on the sands, when from the forest the giant locusts sent out sharp radio messages like the S O S of distress—"tt-tt-tt—trrt-trrt-trrt—tt-tt-t . . . — — — . . ."—we dreamed of ships crackling forth their crisp Marconi codes across the seas, homeward bound out Frisco way.

AND twice we actually saw ships. The first was a sail on the horizon—the orange colored lateen sail of a native boat—but very distant. The second was a tramp steamer headed down New Zealand way. Six of us raced to the water's edge and heaped a huge bonfire, which Solmo, the elder of the Kanaka boys, lighted with a crystal. But the steamer paid no attention, went straight ahead. We waved and shouted, rushed into the water up to our armpits, hallooed through trumpet hands and splashed about like spouting whales. But it plowed ahead till hope was gone.

When we turned back to shore Vardog stood facing us with raised revolver. He ordered the bonfire extinguished. Before our eyes he lashed Solmo with a switch of thorns. And next morning we found Solmo dead, a thirty-two calibre hole in his heart.

Now the shock of this discovery not only unhinged our coherent reasoning, but it fired the spirit of revolt in us to a red hot flame. We decided on a midnight raid of the palm tree in the dark of the moon. Concealed behind the cottonwoods and mangroves we planned to open up a bombardment of coral lumps on the tree, with the idea of demoralizing Vardog into discharging at wild random whatever ammunition he might possess.

Again the theory was plausible but the execution failed miserably. After the first few minutes of bombardment Solmo's brother, the last of the Kanakas, ran amuck and attempted to climb the stem. Chanting some sort of a Polynesian battle cry, expressive of hate and revenge, he propelled himself upward to the height of fifteen feet or so and then dropped back, only to gather sufficient strength for another ascent. We had to cease pelting the tree almost immediately for fear of injuring him. Defeated, we could only crawl away to our various resting places, snatching what sleep we could before the dreaded dawn of the new day.

We knew instinctively what we should find and we found it—the Kanaka lad under the palm tree, a bullet hole like Solmo's in his breast.

Well, you know how it is when men have nothing definite to do but await the inevitable end-all—they get to imagining a lot that may or may not exist. I imagined Vardog knew that Maraquita Farno was alive and concealed somewhere on the island. Whenever those round greedy eyes of his with their hairless lids stared full at me, I read not only hate but suspicion in them. Never once, however, had he caught us off guard, which proves we had a faithful watchman in Tucker Dreed.

Dreed, in spite of those exasperating goggles, was a good old scout. He had tied together a number of fibrous vines to form a cable through the brushwood. On Maraquita's release each night at dusk he squatted near the foot of the palm and with the first hint of Vardog's descent jerked the vine so violently that the young allamanda to which it was tied on the far end thrashed the air as though possessed of a spirit. Usually I sat near the allamanda while the lovers strolled the beach and the baroness refurbished the girl's retreat with fresh banana leaves. I passed the alarm, and by the time the undefeated Vardog appeared with his sniffing breath and sneaking footfall, and with his back always toward the open as a guard against ambush, every soul of us had vanished; there was never a sign of human life on Tapaai.

IN spite of this good fortune, however, the hunch I had regarding Vardog's instinct remained deep-rooted. At noon one day in the eleventh week we were broiling and eating fish on the beach when suddenly we looked up and saw Vardog. Already we had served him with the choicest of the catch, after which it was his custom to enjoy a midday siesta. His appearance therefore was startling. He was standing in the sun, staring at us. He didn't move and he didn't say anything for a full minute. But there was something in his face that made me uneasy. It got Tucker Dreed the same way, for I saw him gulping his mouthful of fish, bones and all. Vardog at last opened forth.

"Hey, ye green-eyed son of a beetle!" he growled.

Dreed's jaw sagged.

"Sure—I mean you! Get that boat in the water for me—quick!"

Never have I felt keener pity for any human being. Dreed walked away like a prisoner going to the block. Vardog flourished his weapon.

"Shake a leg, Aunt Nanny!" we heard him snarling, and then there followed a string of profanity the vilest on record. Billie and I watched Dreed carefully, and when we saw his strength being taxed to the utmost in launching the boat alone we sprang to his assistance. But were waved back.

"Ye'll take yer orders from me!" barked the king of the castaways, and he patted his gun while his soiled face flickered with sneers.

As I write down these words I can see again that surging boat pulling out from the lagoon and Tucker Dreed struggling at the oars. Up before my eyes comes that little monster of humankind bawling out poor Dreed as a cockswain berates his inexperienced crew. We let our fish burn to a cinder while we watched.

"Where d'you suppose he's taking him?" each of us asked the other.

"Probably to the atoll yonder," suggested Billie. "Maybe he's looking for pearl oysters!"

That settled it. Joy was unconfined. No sooner had the boat become a speck upon the waters than—carnival broke loose on Tapaai. I can yet see Billie, wild as an Arabian colt, dashing back toward the brushwood to shriek the glorious news to Maraquita, to pull her from her cramped retreat and dance her down the sands.

We who were worn with watching and tense with continuous dread can never again experience in ourselves the glorious thrill of that hour. We have lost the combination. But imagine the reaction—after eighty centuries of serfdom! You could see it in the eyes and feet of the baroness, sixty-five years old if a day, and in the wild waving of her arms as she tore loose the flaming cordia and pelted us with its scarlet sprays. You could see it in the eyes and feet of the dancers, in the mad fire of their abandon, in the impromptu glee of the dryad and faun, released at last from the wizard's spell.

Before many minutes we had started a gala performance, the real thing. I sat cross-legged on a bit of sand, hooting through a bamboo stick that aria from Carmen, the Habenera—"Love is like a wood-bird wild." And Billie, panting and dishevveled, hunched himself alongside, beating a dried cocoanut shell with cannibalistic frenzy.

Out from the jungle wings—where the baroness had dressed her—and on to that sandy sun-baked stage, came Maraquita, a Carmen to the life, wrapped in her silk fringed Spanish shawl with clusters of crimson cordia and the golden allamanda in her hair and at her belt. Not from the operatic stage had this girl come—she was but seventeen—not from any school of acting or of voice culture other than a general appreciation of the role as part of her school curriculum, but the talents were there within her. Her beauty was bewitching, with all her latent Castilian fire blended superbly with a rich and subtle languor, at once Andalusian, mischievous, and wholly adorable.

Her little act as she gave it in the brazen heat of that afternoon I will not attempt to describe, lest you class me with the Quixotes. Three times I have heard and seen the greatest Carmen that ever lived—Emma Calve—in the Metropolitan of New York, in London, and in Venice. But the myriad perfections of her twin arts failed to rouse in me the fevered thrill that this mere girl inspired. Compared with professional artists, her voice would be considered imperfect, her histrionics amateurish. But her interpretations were spontaneous and rich with verve.

It was nature's art, untainted, untaught. It was a dream such as few men know, a gift from the god of ecstasy who gives but once. There was no way of our knowing just how long our celebration lasted, just how long our soaring spirits occupied the stratum celestial. But the end came all too abruptly, as if a cloud of noxious vapor had borne us down to the sordid earth and put the seal of stone upon us.

THE baroness saw it first and stiffened. Maraquita saw it and grew cold. I looked around. It was Vardog's face. It was the face of a hound that has run down his hare. A grinning, drooling hound! Truly a sight to sicken the soul!

Now that it was too late we saw what we had done and the dire consequences. Suspicious to the core as became the mongrel in him, he had planned a ruse. Counting on our relaxation, he had turned back on his course directly he saw we had left the beach.

For a little while Vardog remained quiet, simply feasting his eyes on Maraquita. We expected a burst of anger that we had hidden her from him so long. We braced ourselves for the slugs he had promised us in case we lied. But nothing happened—nothing. Just that he kept on staring, with that animal greed in his lips and eyes. Then we saw his hand creep down to his pocket to fumble there a moment for his treasure—the treasure he had won through blood and treachery. The picture he made is etched within my mind and will never be obliterated. Into that canine brain came the idea of conquest. His instincts warned him against violent seizure. He thought to draw the girl's attention by presenting her with the jewels he had stolen from Frisbet. He thought to win her by thrusting into her hands the treasure he prized most.

"Senorita," he simpered, "look at me, nice gel; Look at me!"

And that starry-eyed girl did an astounding, desperate thing. She went toward Vardog, smiling as Carmen smiled, and held out both hands for the jewels. One by one and slowly he dropped them in her small white palms. I was aghast. Billie covered his eyes in anguish.

"Stop!" he moaned, "Stop! It's a sin!"

But the girl did not stop. Her ears were deaf to all save Vardog's whispered wooing, her eyes blind to everything save the flash of Vardog's crooked teeth and the sparkle of his loot. For just that one moment I misunderstood Maraquita Farno. And then black shame encompassed me. I interpreted her amazing move.

At Vardog's back was Tucker Dreed, who had crept up from the water-front unnoticed. Distorted with passion, his head thrust out like a turtle's from the green-brown jungle, he held as still as a goggled terrapin about to strike an insect. I watched him, fascinated, praying with all my strength that he might succeed—might pinion the gun-hand to give Billie and me a chance for attack from the front.

VAIN hope! Tucker Dreed's specialty in life was certainly not jiu-jitsu. He made the strike, a bit of excellent—burlesque. So infuriated was he that he could not think coherently. He simply leaped on the enemy's shoulders and vented his spleen by pounding and scratching and biting. All he accomplished, as far as we could see, was the sealing of his death warrant. Vardog, scrubby little featherweight, tottered on his feet at the unexpected impact, but managed to preserve his dignity in the eyes of his inamorata by poking the gun over his shoulder into Dreed's neck. It was merely a matter of moments before he was kicking poor helpless Dreed out over the sands to the water's edge, where he left him stretched out in a semi-swoon.

All through the rest of that terrible day Billie and I were swept along over the sullen seas of despair, awaiting the moment when Vardog would remember his threat toward the two who were now his rivals in the field. For hours we remained silent, watching through sick eyes his open adoration of Maraquita, then we would start up in panic as if the nearness of death had broken down the bulkheads of reserve and let in a flood of memories too awful to endure. One moment we were stoics, and the next shivering Tamil dogs. And when sunset fell upon us the uncanniness of it all made me long for the end. But our fear for Mara-

TABLOID SHORT STORIES

By DELORE DARRIE

The Elderly Man and the Beautiful Girl Looked Like Easy Money to The Eel and His Pal

SLIPPERY CARTER, better known as the Eel, was elated. Once more he had made a handsome haul and had successfully evaded the cops, and now, as he sat waiting for his lunch, he again went over in his mind all that had transpired. How easily he had outwitted this last victim! What a simple matter it had been to relieve him of his valuables and then make a clean getaway! It had been cleverly done if he did say so himself. The mere thought of it made him chuckle gleefully.

Suddenly he was aroused by a touch at his elbow. Looking up, he recognized an acquaintance—one who had been his accomplice on many a job.

"Hello, Bill," he greeted cheerfully. "How's everything?"

But he was checked by a warning look in the other's eye. "Not so loud," he whispered as he seated himself at the table.

"What's up?"

"Do you see that swell dame with her father at the table opposite? They look like fish to me. What say?"

The Eel peered casually around the room until his eyes lighted on the couple at the opposite table. The girl was talking earnestly to an elderly man—presumably her father. Both were well dressed and seemed to be prosperous.

"All right, Bill. We'll pull the old gag. Then leave the rest to me."

Bill nodded and left the café. The Eel realized that it would be some time before any results could be made, and in the meantime he hoped that their proposed victims would not leave. Of a sudden he was all taken up with the new project. Such enterprises as these broke the monotony of life. In fact, they were life itself to him. What joy he gained from the thought that he could again pit his wits against those of a fellow man! He would surely be as successful in this enterprise as he had been in countless others before. He was beginning to believe that he was infallible. Men called him the Eel because of this infallibility. Of late he had begun to disdain these people whom he ensnared and robbed because of the simplicity with which it was accomplished. They were all so easily beguiled that it was like taking candy from a baby. He was coming to the place where he no longer gained any excitement from his conquests. It would be the simplest matter in the world to rob this innocent looking girl and her unsuspecting father. Just the same, he might as well do the job and make a good night of it.

He was brought back to earth by a waiter's "telephone call for Mr. J. Philmore Young."

The Eel rose in a dignified manner and proceeded to follow the waiter. This was the beginning of the scheme and he only hoped the fish would bite. He had gone but a few steps when he was startled by a cry——

"'Tis he, father, 'tis he."

He turned in astonishment, as did a number of people standing near by. It seemed incredible that the girl, his proposed victim, should have uttered the cry. But nevertheless it was true. She stood swaying as if deeply agitated and then as suddenly regained herself and left the room. The elderly man started as if to follow and then, changing his mind, came over to the Eel.

"May I take it, sir, that your name is Young?"

"That is my name."

"You were undoubtedly astounded at my daughter's actions. Probably you would like an explanation. First let me introduce myself. My name is Kehr—Balfour Kehr."

"But, my dear man," interjected the Eel. "This is surely no place to make your explanations. You no doubt have something to say which is not for other ears. You see that we already have attracted the attention of these people. Can we not go some place where it will be more private?"

"An excellent idea. We will drive to my home and there discuss the matter. My daughter will undoubtedly wish to see you also. But I must warn you, sir, kindly refrain from the subject while in her presence unless she herself broaches it. If she does not do so I will explain all later."

By this time they had reached the street and a substantial limousine drew up to the curb. The Eel was somewhat surprised to see the girl sitting therein. Apparently she had recovered from her agitation, for she calmly gave an acknowledgment of his greeting. The man gave a few directions to the chauffeur and then took a seat beside them.

The car sped down the well lighted streets out toward the residential district. This surely was something extraordinary in the Eel's experience. He sighed and settled comfortably into the soft cushions. He would go through with this adventure and then rob these people at his leisure. He had plenty of time.

Gradually the bright lights disappeared and the houses became more scattered. Still they sped on.

"You live quite a distance from the city," he finally said.

"Yes, but we are almost at home now."

Soon the car stopped, and of a sudden he found himself confronted by an automatic in the hands of the chauffeur.

"Kindly put your hands up, sir."

Turning, he looked into the smiling eyes of Mr. Kehr and his supposed daughter.

"Will you please tell me what the meaning of this is?" he demanded.

"O, it's just a lazy man's way of gaining a living," languidly replied Mr. Kehr. "Please do not move or dear Howard might hurt you."

The Eel was compelled to look on while his purse and other valuables were extracted from his pockets. Then he was ordered from the car by the soft spoken Mr. Kehr.

"Remember," he said as he obligingly opened the door for the Eel, "there is one born every minute."

A half hour later a chagrined Slippery Carter, alias the Eel, hailed a passing taxi and rode back to the city.

ONE OUNCE OF LEAD

quita increased tenfold as darkness blotted out the features of Vardog. We crept forward to be near her in case she needed protection, but the devil had eyes that could see in the dark. He nearly brained me with a rock, and as I shrank back I heard snatches of the girl's voice, quivering now with weariness and fright.

"Tomorrow!" she was saying. "Give me till tomorrow. And I promise——"

In spite of all her pretended worldly wisdom and diplomacy the child in her was at last showing through. It was pitiful; it was maddening. Billie and I crouched there on the sand, every muscle alert and eager for the death struggle, which we felt was imminent. Vardog's back as always was turned toward the sea and we hadn't the ghost of an advantage. Even in the extravagant throes of his love-making he never for one moment forgot his position or ours. With us it was bare hands against fire and steel. With him it was utter self-confidence wherein his voice lost its snarl for the simper and whine of the sentimental fool.

AND then a strange thing happened—about the last thing we dared hope for. Vardog moved away from the object of his passion and yelped for the baroness. And when she came in answer he placed the girl in her charge gallantly—"until tomorrow." And then after smearing her shawl with hot mad kisses, he swaggered across the beach and climbed his tower. We had never suspected him of even a spark of honor or decency or unselfishness. Nor had we dreamed he would show the slightest consideration or clemency—even for a woman. Somehow in our straw-catching mood we felt cheered—until we saw our dream girl, our brave, sweet little Carmen, lying crumpled and unconscious in the arms of the baroness.

From that moment forward it was war to the teeth. Five of us, each with a share of normal intelligence, against a maniac with a gun and a goodly supply of cartridges! Wits versus weapon! And we had so little to count on, not any more than sheep in a wolf's preserve.

Night was upon us now, as if with the breath of fever, in a succession of shimmering steamy belches of heat which seemed to rise from the earth and sea. We sensed the unnatural. We almost forgot our bodily presence in the raw phantasm of nerves. The shadows about us fell deep and languid. The drone of the surf from the reef's outer rim was dulled in the fetid darkness till it took on the mocking laughter of deep-sea demons.

Heads close together, we laid our plans carefully. Only one retreat was possible—and that one meant almost certain death, but a death far preferable to the meted judgment of Nicholas Vardog, and especially to the abject destruction of Maraquita's soul. We proposed to launch the boat just before sunrise, the five of us crowded aboard. With the two remaining oars which were broken and useless we would pole it out from shore and set it adrift on the open sea with the hope of rescue by a passing ship. It was a desperate chance, but we were desperate men.

Our first concern, however, after the resuscitation of Maraquita, was Tucker Dreed. Dreed was a doomed man. He probably would be dispatched in the night after the same manner as the two Kanakas. Anyway, he could ill afford to risk the inevitable bullet in the heart, and in order to spy on Vardog's method we laid a trap. We stripped Dreed of his clothes, which we stuffed with sand and left to lie on the beach in the owner's original position. The head was formed of a coral lump with sea moss for hair and whiskers and the familiar blue goggles in realistic evidence. Dreed then, modestly draped in a couple of palm leaves, crept through the jungle to take up his vigil beneath the palm.

The moon rose shortly after midnight, a sickly yellow moon, continually dimmed by a dark scud of flying cloud, forerunner of storm. The island swam in a silver-green mist, eerie as the sulphur torchlights on the Styx. And suddenly the allamanda shook as with an ague. Billie and I, agape with excitement, crawled beneath it, scarce daring to breathe.

We hadn't long to wait before Vardog appeared, padding across the sands with wary step, crouched like a hunting savage, peering here and there through the brushwood, behind stones, then around by the water's edge, as if seeking some one. He carried the revolver in his hand. "Senor-ita!" he was coaxing, "nice li'l gel! Nice . . . nice——" Over and over again he said that in a thick loose-lipped whisper.

Suddenly he saw Dreed's effigy and there was a change. His eyes glowed red with the blood lust. He made a swift slash in the air with the gun, but there was no report. He merely changed it from one hand to the other. The right hand he thrust in his pocket and drew out a thick dark object. His eyes were staring and his teeth clenched. There was an animal-like celerity in his movement as he quickly stopped and buried it in the stuffed shirt. He paused then, sniffing suspiciously, running his hand across and across and up and down the figure. Seeing him so, a thing not human, I hated him with a wild hate. I, too, felt the murder lust. At the root of things, it's life against life. That's fundamental. So I gathered myself for a swift attack, when suddenly he sprang up as though terrified, and, whimpering loudly, took to his heels, tearing across the sands with great leaps.

The three of us who watched were mystified. Swiftly we crossed to the effigy, and there, deep in its breast, was the curious trinket once owned by Tucker Dreed—the marline spike opened wide from its sheath like a pocketknife. As I pulled it out from the figure Billie gave a cry of astonishment. The hole it had left in the linen shirt was round and charred with rust—a hole just thirty-two calibre size.

Certainly, then, Vardog had finished the two Kanaka boys with the spike. Which brought but one conclusion: he was short of ammunition. But how short? How short?

AT daybreak the wind roared eerily and the rain descended in torrents. The monotonous thunder of the surf fell on rolling rocks, on shifting sands, on mutilated coast line. Above our jungle-lairs the leaves of palm and banana trees clashed together like metal blades and dragged low with a snapping of brittle stems. Brown streams of water crawled sizzling down through the brush. It was hot—hot with the intolerable hotness of steam. Billie and Dreed and the baroness were gathered together, talking in whispers—a wan-faced group. The oppression was terrific. I wondered how Maraquita fared. I knew she must be awake and ready for the day's undertaking. And yet I was sure of nothing. I found myself crawling on all fours to the open and staring up at the platform in the palm. It gave little vision except its own dripping outlines, but I could distinguish vaguely a smudgy round spot that I knew to be the emperor reclining.

Something else I noticed also. The lifeboat had drifted out to sea.

There was nothing we could do now—but sit and wait! Midway of the morning great crackles of thunder shook the ground. The rain came down straight and hard and windless like rapier thrusts. The jungle seemed if possible closer, more suffocating. It struck us as a fitting hour for the last stand.

Shoulder to shoulder then, to the booming of cloud cannonades, we marched boldly to the battleground beneath the palm. The tree itself was swaying crazily in the storm, till at times the lookout seemed tilted to a dangerous angle. I plucked a palm leaf off the ground and rolled it into a megaphone, raising it high to my lips.

"Surrender!" I roared above the deluge

No answer came. We waited patiently while the great palm swept the sky and the platform creaked like a thing in pain. I lifted my voice in greater confidence.

"Vardog! Vardog! Surrender—or die!"

Still no sound from the overlord. We all closed in round the tree. Armed only with clubs we set to and battered it unmercifully, till the sounds, echoing above the tempest, resembled the blows of swinging axes.

A dark cloud dulled the daylight and out of the semi-gloom spat a tongue of flame—the ear-splitting bark of a revolver. I cringed at the shock. I looked at Billie, at Maraquita wrapped in his arms, at the baroness, at Dreed. They were all unhurt and all staring at me.

Just at that instant, above our heads, we heard a metallic thud, a sliding, slumping sound.

Twenty minutes later, when the storm had somewhat diminished, I climbed the palm to Vardog's eyrie. I saw two sights I can never forget. And seeing, I understood.

Outside the reef rode the copra schooner Wind o' Heaven, just poking her little bull snout in the white lagoon. And beside me, sitting in state with his back to the stem, was the one-time czar of Tapaai.

One little ounce of lead! He had saved it for himself! Who then was the weakling and the fool?

And so we left him there, Vardog the Terrible on his throne, forever watching the weird uncertain moods of his azure dominion.

Fancy Princess Rules Former Reign of Jazz

by [illegible] Howell

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Alone at last! Only lace can say that to Mistress Woman. Other fabrics must divide their allegiance. Men may take our silks, to say nothing of our woolens and cottons, and use them for linings, lounging robes, handkerchiefs, hose, mufflers, and the rest.

There isn't a pshaw'd thing they can do with lace that occurs to me at this moment. So when we announce a reign of lace we announce a particularly feminine era of dress. That is what is upon us.

Open your eyes and look wherever womankind is gathered in formal array. Juliets, Hermiones, Isabella d'Estes—in their long basques and full skirts of intricately woven and gorgeously patterned silks.

With a gentle rain of the loveliest of laces following, no wonder flapper and jazz are fading and gently passing out of sight. Lace is aristocratic. It does not comport with interest in shoulder shaking, cigarets, and the contents of hip pockets. It demands manner as well as manners.

Manner is what we are getting at formal dances today. The oldsters are doing most of the violent dancing. The youngsters float along with as little agitation as fairy book princesses. That they must, else they would shake the huge combs out of hair coiled in flawless smoothness, drop their lace scarves, lose their long earrings, tear their lace flounces, and play havoc in general with their up-to-dateness.

"Too old for her years," was the criticism of the dress of one supper dancer made by a grandmother.

The girl was in black and white, a black velvet dress with a rhinestone buckle holding the drape to the hip. A rhinestone band bound her smooth coiffure, and she carried a Spanish thread lace shawl. The only concession to girlish gayety was the green heels of her black slippers.

Another dancer, who appeared to be a middle aged woman from her back, turned out to be a vivid young beauty at another revolution of the dance. Her dress of slate gray satin, cut in a high bateau, was long of basque, gathered full of skirt, and extended to the ankles. Around the shoulders was a bertha of Venetian point lace. When she turned the bertha was seen to cross to the left and tie in fichu manner on the bosom.

Look at figure No. 3 and tell me, could she, would she jazz?

I say no. Toddling, shoulder shaking would bring down her hair, destroy the line of her neck, and play the mischief generally with her laces. She has to be as sedate as her sister with ankle panties of the long ago. She is. The best ballrooms of the hour prove it.

No. 3 wears a bright blue satin back crêpe over a petticoat of creamy Chantilly. The lace is used in cape fashion on the back of the bodice and as a narrow yoke in front. Lines similar to this petticoat were used for a painted chiffon gown, with trailing butterfly wings extending down the trains.

Everybody comments on the amount of black velvet used for formal wear, and by the young in particular. The favored beginning is the black velvet slip. It is alternate third or fourth in every assemblage.

No. 1 is such a dress. On simple chemise lines, the scalloped edges offer variety. So does the V cut of the neck front and back. With silver lace used for the draped, one loop, sash trail embellishment you have the season's pet brought right out in front of the company.

Velvet and lace for daytime wear sounds incredible, but is quite believable when you meet it as in figure 8. Gray lace of the type called radium joins forces here with a cuirass cut of basque in black velvet, to make an afternoon frock of distinction. Extreme simplicity of line corrects any likelihood of being considered over elaborate.

The square décolletté is seen more and more. It shows itself here in No. 2, a mountain haze colored chiffon combined with lace dyed to match. The model is practical for other fabrics combined with lace.

In figure No. 4 the insistent note of red that characterizes the period makes itself felt in a new two tiered gown. Tiers are being shed at many Paris spring openings. This is a red and gray printed crêpe. Silver lace bands the plaited skirt ties and bateau neck, and extends down the long armholes. The girdle is of silver metal cloth.

The restful, releaseful—from a money point of view—picoted edge helps No. 5 to success. This is a maroon glacé crêpe. It owes almost all of the charm it abundantly possesses to silver lace, narrow taffeta ribbon of greenish hue, and the pointed, picoted skirt edge. The idea of the bodice is as if a sleeveless, hip band blouse of silver lace, with green ribbon run through the band and tied in long streamers at the left, had a plain panel of the brown crêpe mounted on it in front and one behind, both blousing slightly.

As for Mistress No. 6, of the tightly bodiced green taffeta, she is quite in the picture of sedateness that expresses 1923 dressed for the ball.

She wears a straight petticoat and gathered overskirt of the silk. The overskirt is banded with ivory lace—banding being most up and coming these days. A wide band of the lace composes the lower part of the bodice. In the back it almost meets the edge of the old fashioned bertha of lace.

Time and again such berthas are placed in an off the shoulder line, giving a decidedly quaint look, as of grandmother in her youth.

The tinting of lace to trim is illustrated again in figure 7. A rose hued lace here makes a deep border for a straight gathered skirt of gray crêpe. Peeps of the lace are given at the deep armholes. An embroidered design in green and rose appears above the rose lace band of the skirt.

To discuss lace for evening wear and leave out mention of black lace gowns for dinner and dance wear is to exclude the salt from the salad. Frocks entirely of black Chantilly, sometimes with the bouffant line, sometimes with the swathed drape, are as common as blackberries in an August pasture lot.

And to omit saying something about beading such lace gowns is to forget, say, the flick of paprika in the salad. Rhinestones sometimes center the flowered patterns of black lace, and beads of contrasting or self-colors do the same for colored laces.

The sight of huge black lace mantles used as overdresses with bouffant gowns of silver or other metal cloth is frequent enough to pass without special excitement. Black net shawls incrusted with silver and gold are similarly employed.

So much is it a lace year that the new printed fabrics often have patterns that make them look like lace. For example, an imported crêpe de chine of white carries large squares printed all over it, in which designs in white are picked out with tiny black dots, with the result that the whole thing looks like filet.

Threads are drawn in crêpes, to give them a lacy look. Even leather is pricked into lace work and further adorned with gold or silver. Venice lace patterns are used for this purpose.

Lace and net on hats are going to have the best season in years. Veils that reach to the waistline are forecast. In one showing of new hats the veil fell to the knees. Most of them were satisfied, however, with resting on the shoulder line. Chantilly and made veils, rather than embroidered or novelty laces for hats, are in order.

"Now, Agnes, you must not tear Aunt Sara's negligee. I don't think she would like your putting it on Mr. Sampson!" Even the family wardrobe comes under the head of costumes at a charade party.

It's pretty hard to think of a good word. There's "phosphate" and "projectile" and "squeamish," for instance; splendid words in themselves, but they don't act well, and there you are. Milton has turned in his moment of need to "One Million Words Often Mispronounced."

The dressing up process, once the guests at a charade party get used to the idea of being mussed up, is great fun. Shrieks of merriment issue from the dressing room and if the effect achieved is something of an anti-climax for the audience —well, at least somebody had a good time.

For a whole week the hostess who is giving the charade party has been digging around in trunks and ragbags for dress-up costumes. Old things, you know, that no one will have to worry over in case a little damage is done, thus leaving each guest free to worry over his or her personal wardrobe—particularly the lady in the new evening gown and the man who wondered as he dressed for the evening if the broken suspender would be a safe risk. (The lady in the new evening gown and the man in questionable suspender have encountered the worst. Urged on by a determined hostess who is entering right into the spirit of the thing, they are going to stage a bull fight. No one will ever guess that it's the first syllable of "bulldoze"—now, will they!)

A great pantomimic artist was lost to the world when Thorpe went into the insurance line. See, he's making believe chop with an ax. "Inaction" is the word. You see they are doing the second syllable the way it sounds. Oh, my yes, that's perfectly all right. The first syllable was a public inn, and the audience asked to have it done a second time, there being some doubt in the minds of all as to its purport. Finally everybody decided it had something to do with an automobile. This "ax" stunt is going to be hard to guess. The consensus of opinion seems to waver between a man playing golf and a man beating a rug.

"How can you expect us to guess it when there isn't any such word?" Little quarrels between factions will happen now and then during the evening.

The actors have been gone so long from the scene of action that the audience has lost track of things. Instead of deciding once and for all whether Joe and Rosa were digging a garden or rowing a boat in the last tableau (because then, you see, that pins us down to either "inDIGnant" or "heROic), Mrs. Dr. Mead is saying to Miss Mabel Irene Deck: "My dear, there has never been so much as a headstone—not even a headstone, my dear—set up to mark poor Cousin Gracye's grave. Now what do you think of that?"

No one on the other side will ever guess this! It's the first syllable of "neurotic." The "new" baby—that's the idea being put over. It took twenty-five minutes to work this up, but you'll have to admit it's a good job.

"You just wait. We've got a word thought up you'll never guess!"

INDIAN BLOOD?

BY Robert E. Pinkerton

Stung to fury, Millington rushed like a bull.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.
The Battle.

THE picnic party, laughing and shouting, a gayly colored procession as it streamed across the great, green clearing, left at eleven o'clock. From a window Donald watched it depart in a fleet of huge freight canoes manned by a score of Indians and half breeds.

He was still weak from the strain of his visit at the Layard home, from the tumult of reawakened emotions, and now with this joyous scene before him and the deserted assembly room of "Bachelors' Hall" at his back there was pictured more vividly than in any of his brooding visions of the winter exactly what life must mean. Janet was there in that gay crowd, Janet and Evelyn and Merton, Sandy Hay and Nicol MacKar and Harry Milner, all the post managers, Millington among them, and all the apprentice clerks and the people of the missions.

Gayety and laughter in their hearts, without black shadows ever hovering in the background, these people would always parade thus before him while he watched from dark corners. They had accepted him, had made him feel one of them, and then because he had dared to put forth his hand the invisible and insurmountable barrier had been raised.

It was the moment of his greatest bitterness. Never had Nee-tah-wee-gan's prophecy flashed into his mind with such blinding, scorching significance, never had despair gripped him with such crushing, numbing force. He saw himself an outcast forever, destined to go on through solitary, dismal years without hope, without a future elevated in any way above the despairful present.

For a long time after the picnic party left Donald sat at the window. Mrs. Jamison's social activities had practically depopulated Fort Bruce that afternoon. He even remembered that only the half breed and Indian employés were left, that like them he was cut off from all close association with what he had once believed was his own.

This thought remained with him throughout luncheon and afterward as he again sat at the window and looked across the great inclosure, remained until he saw John Corrigal walking from the dwelling house to his office.

At once Donald recalled their three days together at Fort James the previous winter, how he had caught a glimpse of the lonely soul of this man, and there came to him again that feeling of kinship of spirit. Here, he knew, was one who had fought through to success despite a great and gnawing emptiness, and in his desperation and loneliness he longed to talk to him, to derive if possible some shred of inspiration. He arose and walked quickly across to the district office.

CORRIGAL was seated at his desk, and he looked up in surprise when he saw Donald enter.

"I thought every one had gone for the day," he said. "And I wanted to see you, Norton. I have just read your reports."

It was not what Donald had come for. The anguish in his own heart cried out for something that he felt this man could give.

"You have fallen off more this year than last," Corrigal continued. "What's the reason?"

"I can't tell you until——" Donald began.

"Can't tell me!" Corrigal interrupted sharply. "Do you mean to say that this has been going on for two years and you haven't stopped it or found out who is doing it?"

"I have known from the first who was doing it, but——" Donald began.

"What! And you have let the company lose ten thousand dollars' worth of fur because you haven't acted?"

Donald was about to retort that the company had lost nothing, but he saw that Corrigal's sharp questions and his own short answers were leading in the wrong direction. For a moment he was silent as he considered what he should do. He had wanted to have Millington present when he made his charges and presented his proof. It was not only fair but it would be more conclusive. Further, his brigade had not arrived and his witnesses were with it.

But that momentary silence was fatal

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR:

FOR thirteen years Wen-dah-ban is kept hidden in the forests by Nee-tah-wee-gan, wife of Pe-tah-bo. The boy is the son of a white man, but never will the Indian woman name his father. Merton Layard, the Hudson's Bay company manager, takes the boy into his home and Mrs. Layard names him Donald Norton, after her father. Donald becomes the playmate of the Layards' daughter, Janet. After some years Donald wins command of a small post. Nee-tah-wee-gan appears there to live, taunting Donald always that he is Indian, not white. Donald drives an opposing company from his district and is promoted to Whitefish Lake post. Philip Collinge, manager of the rival company there, likes Donald and helps educate him. Donald visits England and then is promoted to Fort James, his company's largest post. After seven years he again meets Mrs. Layard and Janet, with whom he falls in love. He has a rival in Dale Millington, a capable young Englishman who has succeeded Donald as manager at Whitefish Lake.

Millington raids Donald's post and the latter's fur receipts fall short. Returning to headquarters, Donald finds the old manager, Mactavish, is dead. In his place is John Corrigal, who has no faith in half breeds. Millington tells Corrigal of Donald's doubtful parentage, and influences Mrs. Layard to make Donald understand he cannot hope to win Janet. Donald returns to his post after a reprimand from Corrigal because his receipts were short.

Corrigal visits Whitefish Lake post. Nee-tah-wee-gan sees him and says to Millington, "He will throw him out and put a white man in his place. He will do that to Wen-dah-ban, his own son!" At Fort James Corrigal is snowed in for three days with Donald, and learns to respect the young man's learning. Millington again raids Donald's post, and the latter's receipts fall even below the previous year. But Donald sets a trap, and Millington's man buys a marked fur. Donald visits the Layards. Janet invites him to a picnic, but he declines.

When Corrigal left Fort James the previous winter he had decided that he would not act in Donald's case until he had learned how the fur raids were handled. He had been amazed by what he had seen of Donald's competency, but his policy and that of the company in regard to men of mixed blood had not been changed.

After leaving Fort James he had written to Millington, telling him what was happening and instructing him to keep a sharp watch on Collinge and report anything that indicated the sending of trippers outside the territory. Millington, quick to see his opportunity, had made a convincing and detailed statement of raids by Philip's trippers, and as soon as Corrigal had glanced over the Fort James statements he knew how he would act. For him the matter had been settled automatically.

Though his decision was in strict accord with his own policy and that of the company, the district manager's sense of fairness demanded that Donald be permitted to explain. But the young man's answers to questions which he construed as being evasive, and now his silence, served only to confirm Corrigal's opinion.

"I THINK I understand, Norton," he said coldly. "I have suspected so from the first. Your good friend Collinge is the only man who could have made those raids on your territory. Millington has him on his last legs, and to save himself he has sent trippers out among your hunters. And you, because Collinge is your friend, have let him do it for two years."

Instantly Donald forgot Millington and his own defense, forgot the bitterness and anguish which had sent him to Corrigal's office. He only knew he had been accused of disloyalty to the Hudson's Bay company, to the one thing in the world to which he could cling, and he was conscious of nothing except a consuming anger. He strode forward to the desk and leaned across it.

"You know that's not true!" he cried. "You know I wouldn't let any one do such a thing to the company."

"Never mind the heroics," Corrigal said coldly. "They don't count. Nothing counts but the fur receipts and protection of the company's interests. I am satisfied that you have failed in both."

Donald recognized instantly what he faced, what he had faced since Corrigal's coming. Proof of Millington's duplicity became a minor matter. He felt that this man had planned from the first to oust him because of his prejudice.

"That's not what counts!" he cried savagely. "The only thing that counts with you in this case is the question of my parentage."

He had touched upon Corrigal's pet belief, and the district manager straightened in his chair.

"That will do!" he exclaimed. "I have been fair with you. I gave you a chance to prove yourself, and you haven't done it. You are relieved of the managership of Fort James, and Millington will take your place. He will end the difficulty there without trouble and without delay. And you can start to Winnipeg at once. I will give you a letter to the commissioner. He will send you to whichever district he sees fit. That's all."

For a moment Donald was too stunned to speak or move. Gradually he understood he had been deposed as a post manager in the Fort Bruce district; that he was to go out to Winnipeg under a cloud; that, discredited and distrusted, he would be sent to some lonely, distant spot, perhaps far down the Mackenzie River, among strange people, among strange Indians whose language and ways he did not know.

His thoughts flashed back to the time when he had talked to Merton Layard across the counter in the Kenogami trade shop, to the dream that had come to him in his fasting wigwam, to the prophecy Nee-tah-wee-gan had uttered. They swept on through the years of struggle and growing success, to the wonderful expanding years with Philip, to the coming of Janet.

Donald knew he had been successful, that he had been a faithful, efficient servant of the Hudson's Bay. He never had denied that Nee-tah-wee-gan was his mother, had never tried to hide that fact, and yet now, even when the Layards and Corrigal had turned against him, when he knew defeat was due solely to the blind prejudice of these three, he was more certain than ever that he was all white. He felt it. In that moment the thing he had dreamed about became a reality.

COURAGE returned in a rushing flood. It brought coolness and an understanding of the situation. He even found time to extract a grim humor from it, for he was confident that once he had presented his case to Corrigal he would be reinstated at Fort James and his integrity and efficiency established. He remembered, too, how he had bested the district manager during those three stormbound days and he knew he could do so again.

"Am I to understand that you are throwing me out of this district?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because you have been more than negligent, have defrauded the company to help a free trader, this squaw man friend of yours."

The charge threw Donald off his balance and drove him to passionate revolt.

"You know that's a lie!" he cried. "You know it is only an excuse. You know you are not capable of fairness. You know I can explain when my brigade gets in and I have the man who is really to blame here to face me. You know one of your idols will fall when I do explain. But, most of all, you are trying to ruin me for the simple reason that my mother's name isn't Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Brown or Mrs. Mac-something-or-other but just plain Nee-tah-wee-gan."

Corrigal had started to rise from his chair, his face white with anger, but at the mention of that last name he suddenly sank back and stared. Donald, gathering himself for a fresh onslaught, for his rage had been released at last, was about to rush on when Corrigal spoke.

"Nee-tah-wee-gan!"

He said it slowly, as if a sudden thought, vague but compelling, had come to him. Donald saw the change in expression, and his own thoughts rushed back to his boyhood in Pe-tah-bo's wigwam. He remembered how the hunter had often jested Nee-tah-wee-gan about his unknown white father, he remembered the names mentioned, and suddenly it occurred to him that among them was that of Corrigal.

"Yes!" he cried. "Nee-tah-wee-gan! You knew her! here at Fort Bruce. Thirty years or more ago, before I was——"

He stopped. Anger had driven him to what he had said, blindly and heedlessly, and then his own words became revealing.

"So it was you!"

He could not speak above a whisper, so astounded was he by the thought, and then a rage more compelling than any he had ever known swept over him.

"You!" he cried hoarsely. "You, the man who has no faith in a half breed! You, the righteous servant of the Hudson's Bay! You, who would kick a man into hell because his mother was a squaw, and all the time it is you, you who are responsible, you who are my father!"

The very ferocity of Donald's attack had driven Corrigal back, but the last words brought him to his feet.

"That's not true!" he shouted. "I knew the Indian would show in you some time. It always does. But you can't beat me that way. You can't blackmail me into keeping you. I'm not your father and you can't make any one believe——"

He faltered in the last four words, and then stopped, for he saw what he faced. Corrigal had always been a fighter, but in Donald's charge he recognized something he could never fight, something that would rise against him like a thick mist, as elusive and as unescapable, and his voice had betrayed his fear.

Donald instantly accepted it as an admission.

"Don't make a mistake, Corrigal," he retorted contemptuously. "No one will ever hear of it through me. Do you think I would boast that I am your son? Do you think I would take any pride in claiming you as a father? I'm only thankful it isn't known. Though Nee-tah-wee-gan is my mother, I never made an excuse or tried to evade the fact. I saw I had to forget parentage and stand on my own two feet. I felt white, and I considered myself so. I never knew who my father was and I never gave much thought to it.

"And I won out. Duncan Mactavish knew I was a faithful servant of the company. Others knew it. I know I am a good post manager. My record proves it. And until this moment I have gone through life without shame or regret. But to claim you as a father! You, a hypocrite, a liar, a coward! You——"

He stopped, choked by anger, and in that moment of blind, heedless passion he thought only of vengeance.

"I know what you are now!" he rushed on. "You've fooled the north, but you won't much longer. If I never do anything else so long as I live I'll show fur land exactly what you are. I haven't anything else to do, nothing else to live for. You are responsible for my living. You have no one else to blame for the manner in which I'm going to make you pay."

He turned abruptly and rushed from the office.

ONCE outside, he started across to "Bachelors' Hall," but a dry, crackling chuckle stopped him. He whirled to see Nee-tah-wee-gan huddled against the side of the building.

Donald started back toward her. He had been certain Corrigal was his father, and then the very desire that it was not true compelled the question he had never asked.

"Who was my father?" he demanded in Ojibwa.

Nee-tah-wee-gan stared inscrutably and he turned away.

"Did you think it was the 'big trader'?" she called after him.

"Do you mean it was Corrigal?"

Her black eyes glittered and then a cracked and twisted smile spread over her ugly face. With a sweeping gesture she drew her shawl over her head. Donald saw her shoulders shake and then, sick and beaten, he turned and stumbled blindly toward "Bachelors' Hall."

He had gone only a little way when he heard the familiar hiss:

"Keen nish-e-na-be!"

When Dale Millington arrived at Fort Bruce that summer he was confident that his two year campaign against Donald was about to be successfully concluded. Quick and clever though he was, he could play a waiting game and play it carefully.

He had no fear that his raids upon Fort James territory would be proved against him. He had conducted them cautiously, but he had depended largely upon his knowledge of Corrigal to carry him through. He had seen the district manager in action out in the Saskatchewan country and he knew how an unproven charge would affect him, how, coming from a half breed, it would be construed as an evasion.

And Millington felt that the gods had been good to him. When Corrigal had written that he was to watch Collinge and report anything that would indicate the sending of trippers into Donald's territory he had seen the opportunity to cap his whole plot with a master stroke. As soon as he arrived at Fort Bruce he told his carefully built up story, and in Corrigal's attitude and expression he had read victory. He was confident that Donald would be shifted quickly to another district.

As for Janet, he was content to wait until Donald's case was settled. He believed the Layards were unalterably opposed to her marriage to a half breed, and he felt certain the girl's own interest in Donald had been due largely to sympathy and the dramatic manner in which he had risen to the best post in the district. Millington was confident all this would vanish when Donald had been discredited and sent away.

Further, when Corrigal read the Englishman's reports and discovered that Whitefish Lake had set another high record he did not hide his pleasure in the fact. This gave Millington an added sense of security, and his consequent high spirits added to his social facility. He was particularly agreeable to Evelyn and the women of the missions, being careful not to pay noticeable attention to Janet, and before Donald arrived he had gained a stronger position than before.

Thus he was not surprised when the picnic party returned late in the afternoon and the news soon spread that Donald had been removed from Fort James and ordered to report to the commissioner at Winnipeg. An accountant in the district office had heard Corrigal and Donald in a heated argument, and, though he did not know what had been said, he had been instructed to issue an order to Donald for his salary to date.

"BACHELORS' HALL" apparently was deserted when a dozen post managers and apprentice clerks entered it after the picnic.

"Poor Norton!" Nicol MacKar said as he sat down at the long table and filled his pipe. "He came out of a wigwam, pulled himself up by his own efforts, and made a success of it. It isn't square that he should have a thing like this happen to him."

"Square!" retorted Millington, who was elated by his victory. "Why not? He's a half breed, isn't he? And he'd begun to show it. Like an Indian, he went slack when he got somewhere. The business of Fort James has been dropping steadily and Corrigal had to protect himself and his district."

"Donald may have had a half breed mother, but he was all white," MacKar declared warmly. "Corrigal's carrying this pet prejudice of his too far. He's making a mistake when he kicks Donald out."

"Corrigal's had experience with them before and he knows what he's doing," Millington answered. "You've lived in the north long enough to know the truth of the old saying that it's easy for a white man to become an Indian but impossible for an Indian to become a white man."

"And Donald Norton came about as near doing the impossible as any one ever did," Sandy Hay of Kenogami broke into the discussion. "I've known him a long time and he's always been pure white."

Millington laughed. He was sitting on the table, one leg swinging free, and he threw back his head to give expression to his mirth.

"Pure white on top," he said, "but the red's showing through at last."

Suddenly the laugh faded. He saw that the group facing him had stiffened and that glances were directed past him to the rear of the hall. He turned to find Donald standing in the door of his bedroom.

"I won't ask you to repeat that, Millington, because I've heard every word you said since you came in."

Donald came forward slowly until he faced the Englishman.

"Nor am I going to ask you to take back what you said," he continued. "Because you are a liar and a crook, an apology is as worthless as your accusation."

"Don't go too far, Norton!" Millington cried savagely as he stood up.

"I'm going far enough to finish this," Donald replied, and for the first time anger showed in his voice. "First, I'm going to tell you that I have known for two winters what you have been doing at Whitefish Lake and that at last I got the proof. I was going to use it to show you up for the sneak you are, but I won't now. You needn't fear me on that score.

"As for my not being white, I always believed that at heart I was a white man, and until today I had been proud that I felt so. But if being white means that I have to be as cruel and unreasonable and unjust as Corrigal or as cowardly as you I'm glad I'm not one. I would rather be classed with any half breed I ever saw than with a blackguard like you."

He paused for a moment, and the men, who had drawn away from the two, realized that he was only baiting Millington, trying to spur him on to resentment; that, angry as he was, Donald was cool enough to choose his words carefully.

MILLINGTON'S face had become white, first from fear of what might happen to his plans and then from rage. But he was three inches taller than Donald and at least twenty pounds heavier, and he did not doubt for a moment that he could crush his adversary.

"You dirty Indian dog!" he cried furiously.

Donald sprang across the ten feet between them, but as one man the post managers and apprentice clerks closed in. Donald fought like a trapped wolf, but weight and numbers were too much for him.

"Let me go!" he cried, for he had lost his coolness when restrained. "You haven't any right to stop me. He's driven me out of the service and he's got to pay for it. Let me go!"

"Easy, lad," Nicol MacKar whispered. "There's no use in getting nasty."

In a frenzy of effort Donald wrenched himself free and faced them.

"No use!" he cried. "I'm through with you all. White! By God, if you men are white I'm glad I'm not! I've been a fool for years making myself believe I was, trying to be one of you because I thought you were square and decent. And as for Millington!"

He charged again, and one fist reached the Englishman's face before the crowd closed in. The men bore him back, struggling and snarling, and Millington, beside himself, sprang forward to attack his helpless adversary.

"Here!" bellowed Sandy Hay as he locked his arms around him. "None of that!"

"Let me at him!" Millington cried as he fought to free himself.

But Sandy, huge and with a clever hold, held him securely.

"Look here, Nicol," he called. "These two are bound to have it out. Let's let 'em do it, but not here."

"Of course," MacKar agreed. "There's that spot over at the edge of the clearing where we'll be to ourselves. Get the gloves, one of you lads, and bring water and some towels."

The apprentice clerks sprang to obey his orders, and the post managers, quick to get the idea, began to convey to the infuriated pair that they would be allowed to fight it out to a finish. Donald immediately regained his self-possession.

"All right," he said as his muscles relaxed. "All I want is an even chance."

Merton Layard entered the door at that moment, but no one gave heed to him. He had just heard of Corrigal's action and had hurried to "Bachelors' Hall" to see Donald. One glance at Millington and he knew what had happened.

"Will you be in my corner, Sandy?" Millington asked.

"And I'll be in yours, lad," Nicol MacKar said to Donald.

"I don't want you," Donald retorted. "I'll get a half breed."

He started toward the door, but Merton stopped him.

"Look here," he whispered, "I don't know what's happened, but don't act foolish. I'll be your second if you need one."

Donald glanced at him angrily. That afternoon he had turned against the whole cruel, unjust race of which he felt himself to be a victim, and now in the rage which dominated him he forgot even the years in which he had looked upon Merton Layard almost as a father.

"You don't want to soil your hands on a half breed," he answered bitterly.

"Donald!" Merton exclaimed. "Get hold of yourself. Be fair. You know I've never held that against you."

Donald's mind turned instantly to that afternoon a year before when he had gone to talk to Evelyn. He believed Merton must have been aware of it, and yet he had never said anything to indicate that his own stand was different. But as he was about to flare out with a reminder of the change in the Layard attitude he realized that to do so would bring Janet's name into the matter.

"All right," he said dully as he turned away, "if you wish."

THE men scattered and walked across the clearing in small groups. A number of half breed children from the employés' cabin saw them and followed, only to be driven back, and when the two principals, their seconds, the post managers, and apprentice clerks were gathered they had the small, secluded opening in the spruce to themselves.

"Regular three minute rounds with minute rests?" Sandy asked as he walked up to Donald and Merton, who stood alone.

Donald nodded indifferently and unbuttoned his shirt.

"All right," Sandy said. "Nicol will hold the watch."

Donald stripped to the waist and held out his hands while the gloves were laced on.

"He's a lot bigger, lad," Merton whispered. "Be careful."

Donald made no comment and Merton glanced up at his face, expecting to see signs of uneasiness. Instead he found himself looking into eyes that made him shiver, and he said nothing more as he completed the arrangements.

"Ready?" Nicol asked.

Donald nodded and stepped forward to face Millington.

"Go!" came the signal.

Despite his superior weight and height Millington was no match for the boxing skill Donald had acquired in his six years with Philip Collinge at Whitefish Lake. He rushed time and again as if to smother his smaller adversary with swinging blows and sheer force, but not once did he land effectively.

Donald, suddenly cool, never forgetting the plan he had formed as he walked across the clearing, ducked, sidestepped, leaped lightly in and away again, and all the time smash! smash! smash! with the regularity of a machine, his gloved fists shot out and found their mark. Before the first round was over Millington's face had been cut open in two places, one eye was nearly closed, and the blood was streaming from his nose.

But he was not injured. Rather the light, slashing blows had aroused him and had given him the impression that Donald could not hit harder, and the minute's rest sent him back fresh and determined to land one of his crushing swings.

IN the second round Donald contented himself with pecking away at the closed eye and puffed nose. Stung to fury, Millington rushed like a bull, swinging his long arms in a shower of aimless blows that left him wide open to Donald's unerring straight arm jabs. The Englishman was young and strong and in good condition, and he was willing to stake everything on winning with one effective punch.

But when he failed, when Donald danced away or darted inside the terrific swings to peck at the closed eye, Millington's rage and exasperation carried him to further lengths. He suddenly set himself and his right fist shot out straight from the waist.

"Rotten!" several men shouted at once. "Foul!" "A dirty trick!"

They closed in suddenly as if expecting Donald would wilt from the effects of the blow, but only a few had seen his twist. Millington's glove had glanced from a hip. Then MacKar shouted "Time!"

Donald immediately turned away, but Millington did not stop. He sprang forward, swinging for Donald's head from behind. Merton shouted a warning and Donald ducked. The next moment Sandy Hay had grasped his principal from behind.

"Fight fair or I quit you!" the angry Scotchman cried. "Do that again and you'll have to fight me when this is over."

He led Millington back to his corner, and, though he washed the blood from his face and body, he did it roughly and with disgust.

Until now Donald had not spoken. Millington had cursed and roared as he rushed, but when the third round began Donald went forward with a sneer.

"White!" he snorted as his left caught the battered nose again. "You white! If you are, I'm glad I'm not."

He feinted, danced back, and then sprang in and jabbed Millington on his closed eye.

"I may not be white, but you're not either," he jeered. "You're yellow. Inside and out. A dirty yellow. You're crooked. A sneak. You're a yellow dog. No Indian would let you hang around his camp."

With each remark a glove shot home until Millington's face was raw and the blood streamed down his chest. Yet not once did Donald touch his opponent's left eye. It was still open. The man could see, could continue his bull-like rushes.

And then he began to curse. Donald's taunts drove him to a frenzy and he used all the vile names spawned in the filth of London slums. Instantly the smile with which Donald had begun the round vanished. With each insult a glove smacked against Millington's mouth until his lips were puffed and blood streamed from them.

And then when the round was half over Donald suddenly ceased dancing away. He met a rush with both feet planted firmly, and for the first time he left Millington's face alone. With infighting of the sort that is deadly in its effectiveness he shot blow after blow into Millington's ribs. For a moment they stood there, swapping punches with complete abandon, and then like lightning Donald sprang away and back again. His right shot straight from the shoulder and cut Millington's left eyebrow open from end to end.

"You, a hypocrite, a liar, a coward!"

Blood streamed into the Englishman's one good eye and blinded him. The attack on his body had already sapped his strength, and he stood there, swaying unsteadily, his arms half raised.

Donald studied him coolly, carefully measuring the distance. Slowly he poised himself, and then Millington, as if sensing what was coming, suddenly covered his head with his arms and cowered away.

"Let him have it!" several men shouted. "Finish him off!"

DONALD stared at Millington. He had planned that final blow. Everything else had been preliminary, carefully gauged. He had saved his strength, had tested out his man, and he knew an uppercut to an unprotected jaw would furnish a glorious, satisfying end.

But as Millington stood there, swaying, whimpering, and cringing, Donald's hands dropped to his side.

"White!" he exclaimed with utter contempt, and turned away.

All Fort Bruce knew of the fight in detail before night, just as it knew, too, that Corrigal had deposed Donald as a post manager and had ordered him to report to the commissioner at Winnipeg. No one talked of anything else, and everywhere opinion was the same.

"I was Millington's second and I'm ashamed of it," Sandy Hay declared to the group in "Bachelors' Hall" that night. "He was dirty and he was yellow, just as Norton said he was."

Sandy knew very well Millington lay in his bed within earshot, but he had already told the Englishman exactly what he thought of him while washing the blood from his face and body and helping him dress.

"And Donald was as white as any man ever was," Nicol MacKar announced with a defiant glare about the room.

"Well, rather," drawled Harry Milner, manager of Lynx Head Falls post. "He never said a word when Millington fouled him twice and kept on fighting as clean as a thoroughbred."

"I'm only sorry he didn't land that last lick he was all ready to," Sandy said. "He quit too soon to suit me."

"He was too decent to do it," Nicol protested.

"No," Milner objected, "you're wrong there. I was watching his face. He waited from the first for that blow. He purposely left Millington's left eye open while he marked him up. Then at the last he weakened him with those body punches, but he didn't knock him out because he was disgusted. I was watching his face. I saw it. He didn't hit him for the same reason he wouldn't hit a yellow dog that had turned tail."

Only Corrigal remained aloof from the discussion that raged throughout Fort Bruce that evening. He lived in the dwelling house with the Layards. After dinner he asked Merton for the details of the fight and then went to his room to read, as invariably was his custom.

Janet also retired soon afterward, pleading that the sun on the water that afternoon had given her a headache.

"What did Corrigal say when you told him of the fight?" Evelyn asked when she and her husband were alone.

"Nothing. He didn't even ask a question."

"Did you tell him how Donald acted, how cleanly he fought?"

"I laid it on thick, and he only grunted and turned away."

"He's carrying this senseless prejudice too far!" Evelyn exclaimed angrily. "You should go to him, Merton. You should show him how unjust he has been. After hearing what Millington has been doing for two winters it is despicable for him to decide against Donald and humble him so."

"I don't think he knows anything about Millington's raids on Donald's hunters."

"But surely Donald told him."

"That's just the point. Donald wouldn't do it without having Millington present. He's too decent, and Millington was gone all afternoon. It was something else, just what I don't know, but I don't think the fur receipts at Fort James caused all the trouble."

"Didn't you talk to Donald?"

"I couldn't; he was in such a rage. It was no time to get his confidence."

"But you will see him in the morning, Merton. You must do something. Donald has gone too far to have this happen to him now."

"I don't know, I'll see." Then he added, suddenly: "Have you heard that Nee-tah-we-gan has come to Fort Bruce?"

"Nee-ta-wee-gan!" she repeated. "What has she to do with it?"

"Everything, of course. One of the men said he saw an old woman camping alone down the lake shore. Said she was a stranger and wouldn't talk to him. That sounds like Nee-tah-wee-gan, and I'd like to see her. I'd make the old hag talk if I had to choke it out of her."

A note of anger, almost of fury, had crept into his voice, and Evelyn stared at him.

"Merton!" she whispered. "You don't mean——"

"I don't know," he interrupted. "Years ago I heard things and I've been wondering——"

They looked at each other for a moment.

"What a terrible, terrible thing!" Evelyn cried.

"O, I don't know that it's true. It's just a guess, but——"

"Merton, you're keeping something back! You do know!"

He shook his head. For twenty-five years she had lived in lonely posts with this man, and she understood his every mood and every phase thereof. Yet while she felt certain that he was withholding something from her she knew nothing would induce him to speak until he was ready.

For a long time Evelyn was silent, and then she arose. Out of the inextricable mess into which the affairs of those she loved best had been plunged she had emerged with a resolve.

"Merton," she said quietly, "I am going to find out if what you are thinking is true."

"Don't be foolish," he interrupted quickly. "I have nothing——"

"You have something or you would never suspect it. I am going to learn the truth, and if it is as you suspect that man can't remain here. I don't care if he sends us to the worst post in the district. I won't live in the same house with him."

"Wait until I have talked with Donald in the morning," Merton said.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THE LITTLE FOLKS GO INTO THE REAL ESTATE BUSINESS. BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies were quite too proud to mention the matter, but it was a fact—the little folks had mighty little food to eat, and often they went hungry. Tippy Tim, the red squirrel, found it out and, of course, he had to chatter, and in a short time most of the bird and animal neighbors of the Teenie Weenies knew all about it. The fire had destroyed all the Teenie Weenies' store of food, and for the last few months they had been living on anything they could find, but there was little to get, for the birds and animals, too, had to eat.

One day the General swallowed his pride and spoke to Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, about it.

"Mercy on us! 'Aven't you any brains?" scolded Tilly. She was always scolding, but really she was the kindest hearted of birds.

"We can't eat our brains," answered the Cook, who was just a little peeved at Tilly's remark.

"Well, you act as though you 'ad already eaten them," retorted Tilly. "Why don't you go into the real estate business and earn something, instead of complainin' about 'ard times."

"The real estate business?" gasped the astonished General.

"Certainly! Certainly!" cried the bird. "The real estate business. It's just the time. Land sakes, the birds will be comin' north in a few weeks, and if you got busy now and built a few 'omes, bird 'omes, you'd be sittin' around all summer with nothin' to do but collect rent."

"You mean for us to build bird houses and rent them to the birds?" cried the Old Soldier.

"What could be simpler?" answered Tilly. "The birds will be comin' along pretty soon, and they will be lookin' for 'omes. It takes a lot of time to build a nest for the summer, and they will be glad to rent a 'ouse. I was talkin' to a couple of robins that came in this morning, and they would give a great deal for a 'ouse. The blue birds, the Phoebe birds, the wrens, the martins, and a lot of families will be comin' pretty soon, and if you build a few cottages you'll rent 'em as fast as you can put 'em up."

"How much could we rent the houses for?" asked the Dunce.

"Thirty grains of wheat a month, or twenty grains of corn," answered the bird.

The Teenie Weenies considered Tily's idea a brilliant one, and they set to work at once building houses. The little men worked in groups of three and four, and they soon had five houses under construction. They built the houses in the best trees, using twigs and grass as building material. Tilly was hired as special agent, receiving five grains of corn each month for every house rented. In a short time birds were looking for houses; in fact, before the houses were finished they were rented.

Mrs. Wren was the first customer. She flew into a tree where four of the little men were working, and was received by the General.

"Is this house for rent?" she inquired. "Or is it for sale?"

"Whichever you like," answered the General with a deep bow, for real estate agents must be most polite to their customers.

"What does it rent for?" asked Mrs. Wren.

"Thirty-eight grains of corn," answered the General as he noticed that the bird was well fed and looked quite prosperous.

"My word!" exclaimed Mrs. Wren. "Terribly expensive."

"But, madam," said the General, "it's the frontage you pay for. This tree fronts on the garden where there are many fat bugs and worms, and this tree is restricted to three houses. It's in a most exclusive neighborhood. There are no cats in the neighborhood, and the people who live in the big house always put out suet for their bird neighbors."

"I would much rather buy the house than rent it," said Mrs. Wren. "What price do you ask? I much prefer to own my home."

"Four hundred grains of corn, or five hundred and six grains of wheat," answered the General.

After much argument the General finally agreed to sell the house for four hundred and eighty-five grains of wheat, eighty-five grains to be paid at once and the rest to be paid in four months.

In a few days the houses were all rented or sold, and the Teenie Weenies were fairly rolling in corn and wheat. Tilly Titter grew so fat on her commissions she could hardly waddle, and everybody was happy.

SUPERLATIVE AMERICANS

Fourth Article the Mayo Brothers

Three Mayo Mottoes

This from Emerson, glazed and framed, hangs to the right of Dr. Will Mayo's working table in the country town of Rochester, Minn.:

If a man can preach a better sermon, write a better book, or make a better mouse trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door.

These words Dr. Will Mayo and his brother, Dr. Charlie, had carved on the statue of their father, Dr. William Worrell Mayo, which stands in Mayo park, Rochester:

Pioneer: Physician: Citizen: A Man of Hope and Forward-Looking Mind.

In the center of Dr. Will's working table stands a tiny framed bit of printing, and I asked, "From whom is that?" He replied, "I'll tell you where it's going—that's going on our tombstone." (He meant his and Dr. Charlie's.) These were the words:

He loved the truth and sought to know it.

WHEN Sam Blythe came to Europe in 1916 he fleetingly cheered many a weary heart from the Baltic to the Black sea—especially the doctors, who were bearing a heavy burden of work and anxiety—with the latest Mayo story. Now then, it has since become one of the classics of medical anecdotage.

In Rochester the one type of patient with whom they are not patient is the bustling millionaire who, hurrying into that metropolis of healing, begins uttering orders at the railway station and expects to be hurried away, clothed, cured, and in his right mind at the end of a week. One of that gentry did so bustle into Rochester and up to one of the huge hotels and through one of the white enamel subways which honeycomb the center of the town, linking up its system of clinics, hotels, and hospitals. And, bustling thus along, heavy with self-importance, he beheld a countenance that he knew was the countenance of a Mayo. To it he said with a certain peremptoriness: "Well—well—how d'you do? Are you the head doctor?" And to this the countenance replied with a certain tense distinctness:

"No, I'm the belly doctor. It's my brother Charlie you want. He's the head doctor."

The tale is highly illustrative of Dr. William James Mayo, today in his sixty-second year; very erect; hair snow white and abundant but closely trimmed; face smooth shaven, firm, and not deeply lined; hale cheeks with a pink glow in them; eyes bright and good humored; manner brisk but not abrupt—with homely cordiality in it, rather; his utterance incisive, rapid but not hurried, and his manner of speaking marked occasionally by unexpected and biting emphases, as when, referring to a certain blundering line of policy which had aroused public resentment, he said, "That was tactlessness"—but he made it three quick, hard bites—"tact—less—ness."

The Mayo Ideal.

Sometimes a strain of sturdy eloquence hurried into his talk, as when, the visit drawing to a close and he speaking of an institution (the Mayo clinic) the activities of which are 30 per cent charitable and in which, though he and his brother founded it, he now has no financial interest beyond his salary, he said:

"Now, Mr. Bennett, I don't want any cant or—well, any bunk—to flow into this article. But I'd like to express myself—I'd like to express the ideal we have tried to work by up here—this way"—and he slowed down a bit and looked very earnestly across the table into my eyes, saying:

"We wanted—my brother and I—that everybody should come here—clothed only in the nakedness of his distress."

Dr. W. J. Mayo, interview with whom here appearing, is first he has given in three years.

There was a little pause after that. He kept gazing steadfastly across the table, and I—I gazed out into the deepening twilight, a touch of awe upon me, for I felt that a good man had let me look into his heart.

"That is beautiful," I said, and kept pondering.

But he, returning to his brisk, incisive manner, brushed away the spell and said:

"What we are doing is no more than any doctor is doing. He isn't suing. You know the kind of man your doctor is, and you know he isn't suing people, and you know he does a large amount of charity work. The medical profession is altruistic. It always has been. It looks big—what we are doing up here—because it's done in mass. That is the only difference. The reason I am talking to you about these matters is that I am satisfied that what we are doing here can be done other places. And the advantage of doing it in mass is that the patient gets the benefit of all the resources. My brother and I look upon ourselves as trustees of sick folks' money. 'Can I do this?' is a question members of our staff often ask—naturally. 'Well,' I tell them, 'you can do anything you think you ought to do with a sick man's money.' The property which has grown up here, some of which you have seen today, represents eight and a half million dollars, most of which is actual money, and its organization and administration are a democracy. Trustees own it on behalf of the public and posterity. They appoint five men, the medical staff elects six more, and these eleven constitute a medical council which controls the Mayo clinic. But my brother and I could not be sure that any plan of administration we had worked out would be feasible forever. How could we be sure what would be the wisest way a hundred years from now, or a hundred and fifty?—yes, and even fifty. So it is provided that if the present plan ever proves not feasible the whole plant goes over to the University of Minnesota, to be administered by it, just as it now administers the Mayo foundation of two millions, which is already its absolute property and has been since 1915. The board of regents of the university governs that."

Millions for the Sick.

Abruptly coming back to emphasis after this routine matter concerning millions—for as routine he hurried through it—Dr. Will said:

"The money from which all this grew came from the people, and back to them it must go. So far as this property is concerned my children will have no better chance than yours."

Abruptly he shifted from the general to the specific, as often he did during the talk; his features relaxing from grave intentness and a twinkling smile coming into his eyes. Now his tone is matter-of-fact:

"People will tell you that we—my brother and I—own these hotels and make big profits from them. We never had one dollar's worth of interest in these hotels or any other business enterprise at any time, have not now, and never will have. We own no part of the Mayo clinic, no part of the hospitals, no part of the hotels, and as for our work at the clinic, my brother and I are on salary. As to the hospitals, the Catholic sisters of St. Francis maintain 630 beds at St. Mary's, the Lutherans 150 in their nursing home, and the Kahlers 1,200. J. H. Kahler is a very fine man, whose interests have grown with Rochester's interests. He came here twenty-seven years ago to take over the management of a hotel that had been a failure."

"Well, then, how did it all get started? I mean your present immense resources."

To a less candid man the question might have seemed insolent. I did not like to ask it, but I was puzzled by the Aladdin aspects of everything around me—this country town of a population of 14,000, with its subways of gleaming tile beneath it, with its enormous caravansaries that they do not better on Broadway or on the Strand, with its excellent special train service from remote cities, with its battalions of quiet, obliging servants, civil porters, soft speaking nurses and doctors, assistants and students, representing at one time or another of late, if not at the moment, England, Ireland, Scotland, Italy, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Australia, and New Zealand, and with its spacious clinic and hospital and hotel lobbies and restrooms full of sick people from neighboring farm hamlets and from the four quarters of the globe. That last is no fanciful statement. Going into one of the local photograph galleries patronized by patients I saw (pictured) the Mongolian countenance of a director of the Russo-Asiatic bank at Tientsin, and the countenances of presidents of South American republics and of many of our federal officials. It was a kind of contemporaneous hall of fame—that little, tasteful, small town photograph gallery.

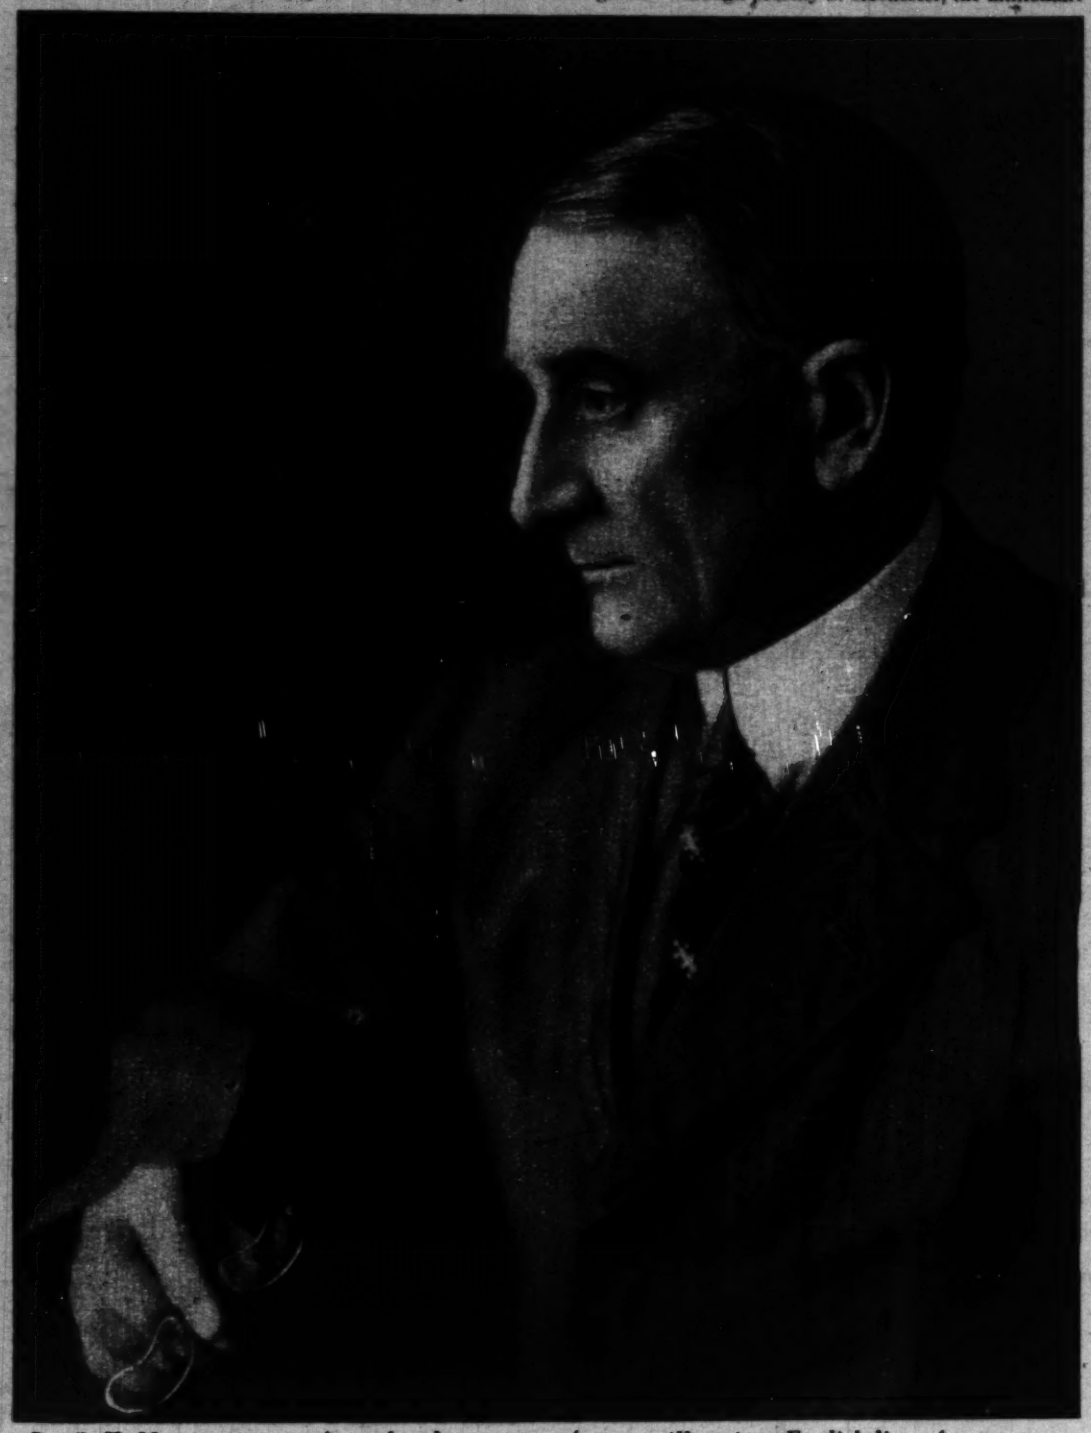
Yes, it was all Aladdin-like, especially when you minded yourself of the fact that, well within the memory of men now living, this Rochester was an outpost—the starting point of the trail to the Black Hills, and the place where the railroad ended.

Doctor Will, far from resenting the ques-

by James O'Donnell Bennett

tion, began answering almost before it was finished:

"In 1891 my brother and I found ourselves out of debt. So we took what we had and divided it in two—dollar for dollar. One we kept for ourselves and the other, and its playmates, we turned over to an agent for general investment, and he was to do what he thought best. He was a good, able fellow, and the dollars he was in charge of rolled up enormously, for those were the days of wonderful returns in the northwest. Those other dollars, though—the ones my brother and I kept and lived upon—they were very elusive. Well, when that able fellow that we had intrusted half the dollars to got through we had about one and a half millions. We turned that over to the University of Minnesota as an endowment for medical study and research, with the understanding that they should hold it until it became two millions. It did become that, so now Rochester is a graduate medical school. Young men registered at the university must, in order to study here, have had their fifth year work and their B. S. (or B. A.) and their M. D. And they must come from class A schools. Then they stay here three years. For them we have 184 fellowships, each paying $600 the first year, $750 the second, and $900 the third. If a man is married we give him work enough to bring him up to a living stipend. And we hold ten places open for promising material of any character. What I mean is that if a medical man can come and show he's got the stuff in him we won't shut the door in his face. Homeopaths and all—we shut the door of learning to noboby. In other words, there is provision made for the man that had a bad start. The plan is working out well. We try to make the living expenses of the student staff and the employés as light as possible. For example, we have a service that provides 600 people with three meals a day for 85 cents. They live as well as I do. I often eat there."



Dr. C. H. Mayo, younger of two brothers sprung from an illustrious English line of surgeons.

When Hospitals Were Dreaded.

Very interesting to me—for I could remember the time, and it would be about forty years ago—was his reference to the period in American life when to "go to the hospital" was considered almost an ignominy by the well-to-do citizen. "Dr. Will"—everybody of the staff and among the attendants spoke of him that way and I heard a young doctor stop the other brother, now in his fifty-eighth year, with the cordial cry, "O, Dr. Charlie! I want you to meet Dr. N——, who is here for the day"—well, about the old attitude toward hospitals, "Dr. Will" put it thus:

"When the first hospital was built here, the hospital in this country—especially in the rural districts—was almost on a level with county poorhouses and jails. It was difficult to get people to go to one. Well, my father"—he paused a shade there and I'll swear I thought he was going to add "and my brother's father," for always he made me feel that two men were talking to me—"my father did a great deal to dispel that prejudice. And out of his determination to do it was born the ideal that we like to think we are living up to in honor of him and of medicine. We like to think that maybe here is one place in God's green earth where the sick middle man—the man of the middle income I mean—is as well treated as the sick rich man and the sick pauper. In many a hospital, you know, or maybe you don't, it's the sick middle man who, in proportion to his means, bears the heavy burden. The millionaire doesn't bear it because for him it is not a burden, and for the pauper there is no burden at all. The purpose of the clinic here is not to take sick folks' money, but to take care of sick folks. But not to pauperize them! We haven't a charity bed—not one. We don't put a mark on a man. If he does happen to be needy he doesn't leave here with that thought burned into him. He leaves here with a new angle. We don't want philanthropy. We never had a dollar given us. This whole institution rests on mankind's sense of moral obligation, and at the same time it functions along the lines of sane, fair business administration. That is why I am going into these details. I believe the same kind of proposition can be made to function in the same way elsewhere, that is to say, not foster paupers, but at the same time benefit suffering people. Every fact in the history of the institution bears out my faith in its ideal of service. To deny its material success—its prosperity—would be to talk cant, and yet 30 per cent of the folks who come here pay nothing."

Pity for Medium Income Man.

What he said next is interesting as exploding the common saying that, though the middle man and the poor man squeak through prettily at Rochester, the millionaire is made to pay—and pay. It was this:

"We never think of putting in a preposterous bill. And in the case of every bill that is over $1,000, every dollar above the thousand goes into a general philanthropic fund. That is to say, if a bill is $2,000, then $1,000 of it goes to the clinic—never more; the rest of it to general philanthropy.

"We never took a note. We never permitted a man to mortgage his stuff. We never charged more than he ought to be able to pay comfortably in a year, and under no conditions must a man's bill exceed 10 per cent of his annual income, no matter how long he is here. That's the maximum, and it, I should add, does not mean that, if a man's income were $100,000 a year, we would send him a bill for $10,000. That would be what we call a preposterous bill."

The conversation drifted briefly toward the subject of physical well-being in its relation to moral well-being, and he said:

"I don't give people good advice as to their conduct, except when it affects their health. I advise them as to their physical well-being. It's wonderful how much they can do for their moral health after the physical has been put in order."

He said a good deal about the system of examinations at the clinic. I had looked on at several of them during the day, and the physician from Chicago who accompanied me on the trip had said they were beautiful in both their particularity and their comprehensiveness. Dr. Will's summing up of the nature of them was pithy. Thus—

"Instead of the patient having one spoke looked over, we go over the whole wheel."

Not Operation Mad.

He seemed to wish to emphasize the fact that a surgeon armed with knives does not meet you at the Rochester railway station, for he said that of the thousands of patients annually treated at Rochester, only one-third are operated on, adding, "The final summing up of a patient's various examinations is done by the original consultant. The surgeons, if they are needed at all, don't come in until after that."

Those of full habit should ponder this, which he said when he pointed an accusing finger at my companion:

"In an operation a fat man is three times the risk a lean man is. But take his weight off him and he's a pretty good risk. To send him back home to do it himself after he's had his examination is no use—no use giving him a diet list, which he wouldn't follow. So we send him over to Miss Foley at the Olmsted diet kitchen [Olmsted is the name of the southern Minnesota county of which Rochester is the seat], and say, 'Take fifteen pounds off this man and then send him back to us,' or 'Take this person, put ten pounds on him, and send him back.'"

I asked him whether people thought too much or too little about their health.

"Too much," he said, "but not too much if they could think intelligently."

"What do you think of Coué?"

He began to smile broadly; then broke into a chuckle. "The medical profession," he said, "could well afford to pay Coué to stay in this country." Then, naming various 'ists and 'paths and 'pracs, he said, "First one of 'em seizes nothing out of the air and holds it in his hand and says to the sick man, 'See, there it is!' And then another grabs the sick man's knee and tells him that there is what ails him. The sick man can see his knee, so for a while he's pretty contented. But then a third comes along and he says, 'No, it's here—here in your spine!'—thereby stabbing No. 2 in the back by going for what the sick man can't see. But Coué says, 'You don't have to pay others to fool you. Fool yourself.'"

A Proverb Keeps Him Going.

I told him we wanted to get something of the personal aspect of celebrated men into this series of articles, but to this he replied that as far as he was concerned it would not do at all, intimating that it would be resented and put down to self-exploitation. And besides, I could see plainly enough that he does not care for it. He is wrapped up in the clinic and sick people.

"But won't you just tell the people how you relax from the strain of your work?"

"I don't know that I feel it as a strain," he answered. "If a man is interested in his work he finds the strength for it in the working of the old proverb, which says:

"'The back of the ass is shaped to the burden.'"

Thus, as we began with mottoes, so with mottoes we come to a close. For the one in the tiny frame on his working table, which says, "He loved the truth and sought to know it," and which he told us was to go on his and brother Charles' tombstone, drew him at parting into a little homily on truth. He looked gravely at the motto and mused:

"If I ever found the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow—and that golden pot is the pot of truth—I would be the most disappointed man in the world. Truth is not absolute and mathematical. You don't discover it. You put it together. Find a new fact, add a new fact, and you have to reinterpret your truth. It is something you seek—never find."

Will Power Crumbles When Corns Torture

Almost any momentary pain or hurt, however severe, is easier to endure than the agony of a corn that never stops hurting from the time you put on your shoes in the morning till you take them off at night. Your will power may conceal, but it cannot stop your suffering. Let "Gets-It" end it for you, instantly.

As painless as the trimming of your finger nails is the peeling off with your fingers of a corn that has been gently and quickly "smothered" to death under a coating of "Gets-It," the National Liquid Corn Remover. Two or three drops are enough, and it is not even necessary to touch the corn or callous.

No need to wait till bedtime. Get a bottle NOW and try it. Your money back if it fails. Costs but a trifle—everywhere.

"Drop by drop you distill this poison into your own blood"

A famous scientist points out a danger in constipation not generally known

"The human body," said a noted scientist in a recent lecture before a New York audience, "is constantly producing one of the most terrific poisons known. We call it phenol in the medical world. It is a product of the putrefaction which is always going on in the intestines.

"Ordinarily this poison is absorbed and partially 'detoxicated'—that is, rendered harmless—by the liver. But if you are constipated, the amount of phenol produced increases enormously. The body cannot handle it. It is absorbed into the blood. The first warning you get is a headache. That headache comes because your blood is poisoned by an excess of this phenol."

We all know the other symptoms of this "phenol poisoning": indigestion, skin disturbances, foul breath and coated tongue, loss of vitality and energy. The whole system becomes weakened, which is one reason why doctors say that "50% of all diseases can be traced back to constipation."

Today—an almost universal tendency

Constipation is becoming more common every day. In place of the raw foods of the forest, for which our bodies were built, modern civilization demands a more delicate, concentrated diet which lets our intestinal muscles get soft and flabby from lack of exercise.

Drugs and cathartics do give temporary relief, but they actually weaken the intestines still more, and so help to increase the trouble.

Nothing can permanently cure constipation which does not exercise the intestinal muscles as nature intended. That is why physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today—not as a medicine, but as a fresh corrective food which gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the intestines, softening them, and increasing the bulk of the waste. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Every such action gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise, and so gradually trains them back to a healthy, active state.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast—yeast in its natural fresh form. Recent experiments have shown that yeast corrects constipation only when its cells are alive and active, and that it loses its laxative effect when these cells are "killed" and dried.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate violent action. It is a nourishing food—not a digestion disturbing medicine—and like any other food, it must be eaten regularly to secure results.

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk, or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.
